When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and was troubled,

And said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see.

Jesus wept.

Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him!

And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?

Jesus therefore, again groaning in himself, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.

Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh: for he hath been dead four days.

Jesus said unto her, Said I not unto thee that, if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God?

Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus said unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

A Prayer for Teachers

By GLENN FRANK.

(Copyright, 1925, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

O, Lord of Learning and of Learners, we are at best but blunderers in this godlike business of teaching.

Our shortcomings shame us, for we are not alone in paying the penalty for them they have a sorry immortality in the maimed minds of those whom we, in our blunderings, mislead.

We have been content to be merchants of dead yesterdays, when we should have been guides into unborn to-morrows.

We have put conformity to old customs above curiosity about new ideas.

We have thought more about our subject than about our object.

We have been peddlers of petty accuracies, when we should have been priests and prophets of abundant living.

We have schooled our students to be clever competitors in the world as it is, when we should have been helping them to become creative co-operators in the making of the world as it is to be.

We have regarded our schools as training camps for an existing society to the exclusion of making them working-models of an evolving society.

We have counted knowledge more precious than wisdom.

We have tried to teach our students what to think instead of how to think.

We have thought it our business to furnish the minds of our students, when we should have been laboring to free their minds.

And we confess that we have fallen into these sins of the school-room because it has been the easiest way. It has been easier to tell our students about the motionless past that we can learn once for all than to join with them in trying to understand the moving present that must be studied afresh each morning.

From these sins of sloth may we be freed.

May we realize that it is important to know the past only that we may live wisely in the present.

Help us to be more interested in stimulating the builders of modern cathedrals than in retailing to students the glories of ancient temples.

Give us to see that a student's memory should be a tool as well as a treasure-chest.

Help us to say "do" oftener than we say "don't."

May we so awaken interest that discipline will be less and less necessary.

Help us to realize that, in the deepest sense, we cannot teach anybody anything that the best we can do is to help them to learn for themselves.

Save us from the blight of specialism give us reverence for our materials, that we may master the facts of our particular fields, but help us to see that all facts are dead until they are related to the rest of knowledge and to the rest of life.

May we know how to "relate the coal scuttle to the universe."

Help us to see that education is, after all, but the adventure of trying to make ourselves at home in the modern world.

May we be shepherds of the spirit as well as masters of the mind.

Give us, O Lord of Learners, a sense of the divinity of our undertaking.

ACTIVITIES OF KLAN

with a cash consideration. The amount which it is said Gilbert first demanded was $500, but finally he agreed to settle for $300, and it is alleged that this sum was actually paid him, a portion of it being borrowed by those from whom it was secured.

Had only $35.00.

Another resident from whom it is alleged Gilbert secured money is a well known worker who is constantly doing business with the local merchants and whose standing in the community has always been above reproach. All the money he was able to raise on short notice was $35, and this, it is asserted, Gilbert accepted in so-called settlement. The man who, it is said, paid the money, is advanced in age, and has a wife and family.

Detectives Worked Quietly.

So quietly did the detectives do their work that not a single person in the village, outside of the unfortunate three directly and financially interested, even guessed their real mission. Others did not even know that provincial officers had been in Millbrook. When a representative of the Examiner called on several prominent residents on Friday, he found that they had never heard of the affair, the main acts of which have so far been staged in Peterborough. These residents, however, were unanimous in testifying to the good character of those who have become involved in this unfortunate affair, and cannot believe other than they have been made the victims of an adventurer.

The detectives covered their tracks carefully. The alleged victims of the Klan workers were urged in the interests of justice to say nothing to any one about the affair and these instructions they have apparently followed to the letter. It is believed here that the three men who are said to have given up money—and even their neighbors and closest friends do not know who they are—did so in order to avoid the exposure which was threatened and that they did this for the sake of their families. If they had refused the demands of the alleged blackmailer it is not likely that anything more would have been heard of the matter. As it is the affair will be given wide publicity when the police review hearing of the case against Gilbert begins.

MOUNT PLEASANT

MOUNT PLEASANT, Feb. 17.—Miss Helen Shaw of Otonabee spent a day last week with her aunt, Mrs. Thomas Jamieson, in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Beatty Fee and Miss Emma Fee were guests of Mrs. Margaret Lough on Sunday.

The Misses Annie Graham, Alma Downer and Master Harvey Downer attended the minstrel show in Omemee.

Mrs. Nellie Mitchell of Omemee spent a few days visiting Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Best.

Mr. Merton Thexton of Millbrook spent the week-end at the home of his mother, Mrs. J. W. Thexton.

Owing to the mild weather on Saturday evening, the skating on the rink here was withdrawn. The young people spent a very enjoyable evening sleigh-riding.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville Stewart of Ebenezer spent Sunday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Downer.

Miss May Jamieson returned to Toronto on Monday after spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Jamieson.

Mr. Douglas Elliott left on Tuesday for his home in Unionville.

Miss Jean Greigg arrived home after spending the past six weeks in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Finley of Orange Corners were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Handley.

Rev. J. O. Totten took dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Eggleston on Sunday.

Mrs. George Jamieson and her sister, Mrs. Charles Johnston of Toronto, spent Thursday with their sister, Mrs. R. Brown, in Millbrook. Mrs. Johnston remained for a short visit.

A number from here attended the farm sale of stock and implements at the home of Mrs. William Lowes on Friday. The weather was favorable and quite a large crowd were present, and good prices were realized. Milch cows brought as high as $70 and some of the horses brought $165.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville Handley spent Sunday with friends in East Emily.

Mrs. Harry Bland and daughter, Aileen, are spending some holidays with her mother, Mrs. Elson, in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, Cavan, spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Lowe.

A number from here are expecting to attend the annual winter horse show in Millbrook on Thursday.

TWEED, Feb. 20.—The funeral of the late David Clapp was held on Tuesday, Feb. 16, from his late residence on South Victoria Street. Mr. Clapp spent the winter in Detroit with his daughter, Mrs. Geo. Menzies, where he died. Mrs. Clapp predeceased him about a year ago.

THOMAS PACK

MARMORA, Feb. 19.—After an illness of short duration, Thomas Pack a well known and highly respected farmer of Madoc Township passed away in the early hours of Wednesday, in the 61st year of his age. Deceased leaves to mourn his loss a devoted wife, and two brothers, John of Madoc Township and William of Marmora Township. The funeral service was taken at his home on Friday afternoon by the Rev. J. N. Whyte, and interment followed in Fox'es Cemetery, Eldorado.

WEDDING BELLS

DICKSON—HASTIE.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Manse in Keene on Wednesday, Feb. 17th, at 4.30, when Margreta, third daughter of Mr. Joseph Hastie, of Villiers, became the bride of Mr. Victor Anderson Dickson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dickson of Asphodel. The Rev. John Archibald conducted the ceremony.

The bride was becomingly gowned in cocoa satin - faced canton crepe with hat to match. They were attended by Miss Lena Dickson, sister of the groom, and Mr. Joseph Gould of Hastings.

After the ceremony they drove to the bride's home, where supper was served to a few of the immediate friends.

The young couple will reside in Asphodel.

UNEXPECTED GIFT

The amendment carried by four votes to three.

Alderman Turner: "You'll never get ahead if you act that way."

Start Monument Plan.

Alderman Denne pointed out that the munificent gifts made to the city by the late Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls have no lasting civic acknowledgment, and proposed that the erection of suitable monuments be commenced this year and continue progressively until all the parks given by her are marked.

It was decided to appropriate $500 for the building of a memorial gate at one of the parks this year, to be followed up in future years.

Grants Liberal.

In the matter of special grants the City Council exceeded the generosity of previous years, only trimming one request.

The following is the list as it was passed, the items being the same as last year except where noted: Children's Aid Society, $1200 (last year $1000); Peterboro Exhibition $2,000; Band purposes, $1000; Teachers' Institute, $50; Poultry Association, $200; Well Babies' Clinic, $700; Health Association, $1000; Trent Waterway Association, $400 (last year $200); Children's Aid Society and St. Vincent's Orphanage, special Christmas treat, $25 each; Salvation Army, $500; Ashburnham Patriotic League, $150; Ontario Tourist Association, $80, (new grant), and unforseen $420. The total amount of grants is $7800.

Rev. Paul Costello and Dr. Cameron appeared as a deputation from the Peterboro Health Association. Dr. Cameron told the Committee of the asistance given the Association during the past ten years and explained the work done. While desirous of cutting down the tax rate as much as possible the members of the Association feel that the minimum has been reached in its work, expenses last year were about $3[illegible]0. The nursing service supplied by the Health Association could not be carried on by public health means for less than double the expense incurred by the Association, he said. And in addition to this nursing service needy patients are supplied with milk, eggs and drugs.

Rev. Father Costello enlarged upon the splendid work accomplished by the Health Association, and appealed as vice-president for support in behalf, especially, of the under-privileged children. He paid a tribute to the work done by the Kiwanis Club and individuals in providing buildings and facilities at Jackson Park for the summer camp, but explained the necessity for cash to carry on the all-the-year-round work.

Thorough Work.

A noteworthy feature in connection with the striking of the estimates this year was the absence of haggling over the different committee estimates, indicating careful and painstaking work in the individual committees. It is expected that the special committee will restore at least part of the amount taken from the fire department estimates when it disposes of the small surplus available, and the remainder, if any, will be put in a miscellaneous fund.

The rate and estimates decided last night are subject to revision at the meeting of the Council on Monday night, March 1st, but the Aldermen did not anticipate any changes.

HER IMPROVEMENT WAS REMARKABLE

Weak and Run-Down— Restored By Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"Two years ago," says Mrs. L. Wright, Secretan, Sask., "I was very much run-down in health. I suffered from indigestion, sick headaches and sleepless nights. Faint spells would often come over me and I would have to lie down till the faintness passed away. I was so short of breath that I could not walk any distance or do anything that required much exertion, without feeling completely used up. As I was constantly growing weaker, I consulted a doctor who told me I was anaemic and needed building up. I took several bottles of tonic he gave me, but the help I got from it was only temporary. At this stage I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I had used in girlhood with much benefit. It was not long after I began using them that I knew I had at last found the right medicine. I think I took altogether some fifteen boxes, and the improvement was remarkable as I was feeling as well as ever I had been, and my good health has continued to this day. I had not been troubled at times with rheumatism, and this as well as my other troubles disappeared. I have since recommended Dr. Williams Pink Pills to neighbours who have used them with equally good results."

All weak, anaemic women and girls should follow the example of Mrs. Wright, and give these pills a fair trial. New health and new strength is sure to follow. You can get the pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BRINGING THEM TOGETHER.

Efforts being made by Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs to promote a closer entente between country and city dwellers deserve general support.

Locally the two clubs have been active along this line, and each has entertained a large number of representative farmers recently, with results that cannot fail to be beneficial.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Kiwanis Club has just issued a pamphlet, "Better Town and Country Relations," which will be sent to all the clubs in the United States and Canada and used to develop a better understanding of each other's viewpoint and problems by these two classes.

Too much cannot be done to iron out any misunderstandings that may exist, for it is clear that the prosperity and progress of the country are dependent to a large extent upon a working agreement on national policies between farmer and city man.

One cannot very well get along without the other, and the sooner both recognize that fact and come together the better will it be for the welfare of Canada.

The service clubs are doing a valuable national service when they devote their attention to a problem of this kind.

THE DAY OF THE BUS.

The prospect of Peterboro being linked up with Toronto by a motor bus service is another indication of the rapid change that is coming over the transportation question as a result of the ever-increasing use of motor buses.

For several years towns along Lake Ontario, east of Toronto, have had a bus service to the Provincial capital that has been liberally patronized, with a resultant loss of considerable revenue by the railways, and there are signs that as the good roads movement continues the whole Province will see a rapid development of motorized transportation.

No details have been given out as to the proposed service between Peterboro and Toronto, but doubtless the most modern type of bus will be used, and there is no question that the service will be utilized by many citizens, judging by the experience of the lakeshore towns where such a method of transportation has been in vogue.

The motor bus is killing the radials and street railways and already seriously affecting the revenues of the steam railways, and its popularity as a means of transportation is only beginning.

ROTARY'S ANNIVERSARY.

The Rotary Clubs of the world are celebrating the anniversary of the founding of their organization, and the local club will observe the occasion with a special programme on Monday.

Peterboro is able to testify to the value of the Rotary movement as a contribution to community welfare.

Since the local club was organized its members have steadfastly adhered to the Rotary slogan of service above self, and the work that has been done to aid the city's crippled children and the splendid things carried out on behalf of under-privileged boys are monuments to the influence of the spirit of Rotary locally.

The boys' camp at Clear Lake, one of the finest institutions of its kind in the country, has been the scene of a most enjoyable gathering of boys each summer, and besides the undoubted effect upon the health of the youthful campers made by this fine outing, there undoubtedly has been a most beneficial result in the chance that was given to instil a spirit of ambition and enterprise in the minds of the youngsters.

The work for crippled children is still being effectively carried on with most gratifying results.

All in all, the Peterboro Rotary Club has been a real community asset, and citizens generally will join in wishing its members a successful celebration of Rotary's anniversary.

A COSTLY FIGHT.

The anthracite coal strike is ended. The terms of settlement indicate a compromise, and outsiders may find it difficult to understand why it could not have been reached long ago, if there had been the will to settle. The miners claim to have gained some points, and no doubt the operators will make similar claims.

Of one thing there is no doubt, however, and that is that both sides lost heavily, says the St. Catharines Standard. The loss to the miners in wages is estimated at $158,000,000, and that of the producers and distributors of coal at $360,000,000, or a grand total of over $520,000,000, and the consumers have learned so much about the use of substitutes that it will not be so easy as it used to be to shift the loss to their shoulders.

The end of the anthracite strike should not mean the end of the effort in Canada to find a solution of the problem of fuel independency. It is a matter of special importance to the people of Central Canada, who in past years had learned to depend on anthracite exclusively, or largely for domestic heating; but it is a matter of importance to the whole of Canada. It has been pointed out at different times that the people of Central Canada cannot always depend with confidence on supplies of anthracite. Even if there were no further interruptions due to labor troubles the time has come when the anthracite users of the United States will require all their available supplies for their own use. It may be expected that long before that time comes the need for conservation will find expression in restrictive legislation.

Canada has plenty of fuel and the problem is one of distribution. Canadians should not wait for a solution of the problem till compulsion renders it absolutely necessary.

It turns out that all the troubles at Ottawa has been caused by two females, theOrity sisters—Min. Ority and Madge Ority.—Petrolia Advertiser-Topic.

GOOD-BYE TO SKIRTS.

(Detroit Free Press.)

Skirts must go. That is, what is left of them. This is the forecast of Berlin's foremost modiste. The shortening process has by no means reached the limit, according to this same authority, who predicts that it will continue until the skirt disappears altogether, or is at most merely a narrow belt.

However, the situation is not so alarming as might be suspected from this bold declaration of further emancipation from fetters which have already receded to the knees and points north. Those who have watched with apprehension the disrobing process as it made its way upward need feel no alarm. The present scant skirt-and-not-much-else will be supplanted by some form of knickers or trouserettes that will give the desired freedom of limb to the fair ones, if we are to believe the Berlin oracle.

There was a time when such an announcement would have drawn pointed protest because it was an encroachment upon man's traditional rights. That day is gone. Little by little his domain has been invaded, until now, with the adoption by daughter and sometimes friend wife, of knickers, sport skirts and four-in-hand ties, and what not, he is a lucky mortal who knows what will be left to cover his manly form if he happens to be the last to arise.

BRITISH NAVAL POLICY.

The launching of a new cruiser for the Royal Navy has just been announced in newspaper despatches from Great Britain. This vessel is not, of course, the first fruit of the naval program proposed by the Baldwin Government last summer and approved by the British Parliament. This ship is one of five cruisers that were laid down by the previous Government, the Labor Ministry, headed by Right Hon. Ramsay MacDonald, in its year of office.

The Labor Government, through Viscount Chelmsford, its first Lord of the Admiralty, explained in 1924 that the cruisers it was about to order were intended to replace in part the county class of cruisers that had already been scrapped. "This time has now arrived," said Lord Chelmsford, "when this replacement construction can no longer be delayed in view of the large number of light cruisers that will during the next few years reach an age at which they can no longer be relied upon as efficient units." The Board of Admiralty urged the Baldwin Government when it took office to continue this policy of replacement and asked that five cruisers be laid down in the fiscal year 1925-26. The Treasury, it was then asserted, advised that, for the sake of economy, the number of new cruisers to be ordered be limited to three. Finally, the Government decided that four cruisers should be ordered in 1925-26 and three in each succeeding year of the life of the present Parliament. This program, Mr. Bridgman, the present First Lord of the Admiralty, defended in a recent speech. He denied that Great Britain was leading a race in naval shipbuilding and asserted that, on the contrary, Great Britain had been falling behind. He contended that owing to Britain's insular position, the enormous expanse of the Empire and the great distances between its parts, the very existence of Great Britain and the Empire depended, in a way quite different from that of any other Power, upon the possession of cruisers to defend trade routes and merchant shipping. "If we come to have general disarmament," he said, "that will be a totally different question, but so long as other nations think it necessary for their defence to keep a modern and efficient navy, still more essential is it for us to do so." He asserted that the policy advocated by the Government would in time give Great Britain a fleet of the most up-to-date cruisers. The five-power Washington naval disarmament treaty of 1921 limited British battleship tonnage to 525,000 tons and called for the scrapping of 20 capital ships then in existence and four then under construction. Since then two capital ships, the Nelson and the Rodney, laid down in 1921, have been building to replace, in conformity with the Washington treaty, four battleships, twelve and thirteen years old.

In so far as light cruisers are concerned, it has been pointed out, Great Britain had in 1924 only fifty of that class of armed ships and four under construction, compared with 108 built and 18 under construction in 1914 just before the outbreak of the European war. Indeed, of the other signatories of the Washington Treaty all but Japan had fewer light cruisers in 1924 than in 1914. The Washington Treaty did not restrict the number of such vessels that its signatories might possess. It did provide that new cruisers should not be of greater displacement than 10,000 tons or carry guns of larger calibre than eight inches. The treaty set a fashion in light cruisers. It fixed a maximum of size and armament for cruisers, and that maximum has, in fact, been accepted as a standard, with the result that most of the cruisers ordered by the nations since 1921 have been of 10,000 tons displacement, and have been armed with eight-inch guns. —Mail and Empire.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

FROM REV. MR. BAMFORTH

The Editor, The Examiner.
City.

Dear Sir.—An article which appeared in your paper yesterday with respect to a recent case tried before Mr. Justice Mowat here for a dissolution of marriage distorts the facts in such a way that the general public will form the opinion that I was most negligent with respect to this marriage and that I should have used considerably more care in performing the marriage ceremony.

In the first place, the ages of the young people who were married are not 16 and 19 respectively, as stated in the Examiner, but 17 and 21 and indeed the young lady was actually within a few months of being 18. She was married on April 11th, 1925, and reached the age of 18 years on November 15th, 1925. The law requires that young people marrying beneath the age of 18 years shall obtain the consent of a parent or guardian, but in this case the young lady stated that she was over 18 and the man stated that he was over 21, and judging from their appearances there was no reason at all for me to doubt their statements and in fact they appeared fully grown up.

I was careful to scrutinize their license and find that it was regular and the marriage was performed with the utmost formality in every particular and both of the parties were fully aware of what was taking place and there was no trace of nervousness, timidity, ignorance or anything else on the part of either one of them. They were just an average young couple apparently grown up and having a regular license, who wished to be married by me at the parsonage, which, I may say is a very common occurrance with all ministers.

The law is not for me to question but I submit that it is extremely difficult for a minister to be certain on every occasion that the parties being married are actually over 18 years without the production of the birth certificate which is frequently not obtainable even if the production were demanded. It has been a common thing for people to be born and the birth not registered, and in a case of that kind if a young lady appeared to be grown up and stated that she was over 18 years, it would be practically impossible for a minister to question her statement.

All my life I have been extremely careful to observe the law with respect to marriage ceremonies and have always used reasonable precaution in all matters of that kind. There is not the slightest chance of me ever marrying any girl who is apparently 16 years of age without her producing the proper consent and the fault that I have to find with the article which appeared in the paper was that I had married a girl of 16 years without demanding the consent of her parent.

Yours truly,
R. BAMFORTH

Editor's Note.—The report of this case was not "distorted" by The Examiner, as is asserted in this letter. The report was an accurate presentation of the evidence presented in court, outside of which The Examiner could not go in gathering facts for presentation in a legal action. The age of the girl, as declared in court, was 16, but it is said that the birth certificate disclosed since, indicates that she was nearly 18 at the time of the marriage. This was not given in evidence at the trial of the case, but it is said that when the young lady swore to her age as being 16, her counsel corrected her. No one, so far as The Examiner can ascertain, heard the correction. The Examiner believes that Rev. Mr. Bamforth would not knowingly perform any unworthy action, but in legal actions it cannot go outside the sworn testimony of witnesses to alter the facts in a case... The judge bases his finding on the evidence presented before him—not on matters of which someone in the court has private information which he keeps to himself.

"UPHOLDS TRUTH."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: I beg your permission for again upholding the truth of God, which I am set to defend through the medium of your paper. It is by no means for the sake of controversy I write, but that the Word of God be not blasphemed. "As in Adam all die so in Jesus all live," quotes our friend in the interest of truth. The correct rendering of this Scripture, as found in I Cor. 15:22, is: "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

Now, who are in Adam? Every child born on this earth is a child of Adam's race. As by that one man sin entered into the world and death by sin, all in Adam must die.

Likewise who are in Christ? In I Cor. 12:13 we read "For by one spirit we are baptized into one body." Together with the statement in verse 12 of the same chapter, "so also in Christ,' we see who are in Christ. Ephesians 3:6 tells us that we are placed in the body through the gospel.

Thus the reception of the gospel of Christ by one of the "Adam" children sees his translation into the body of Christ, and in Christ he is made alive. John 5:24 substantiates these words from the lips of the Son of God: "He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation but is passed from death into life."

Now, the letter I have before me states that "man will be on probation for everlasting life." The voice of the Son of God sounds forth over this: "HATH everlasting life."

Again this letter says: "Mankind in general shall be on probation for everlasting life." In John 3:36 we read: "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life but the wrath of God abideth on Him." From these two portoins of John's Gospel alone, we see that everlasting life is bestowed here and now on all who believe on the Son of God. (This is that Gospel of Ephesians 3:6 which places us in Christ and in everlasting life.) The wrath of God, which is already on them that believe not (John 3:18) will abide on him who believes not the Son of God.

Speaking of man on probation points me to the Epistle to Romans. In the first three chapters we have a record of man's probation. The summit is reached when man is seen to be guilty from head to foot. "Every mouth stopped and all the world guilty before God" is the verdict. "Being justified freely by His grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. Whom God hath set forth.....for the remission of sins that are past." (Romans 3:24-25.) Here it is not future sin after a resurrection God pardons but past sin. All have now sinned and must die Christ has died that all may live. God can be just and the justifier of him that believeth on Jesus." (Verse 26.)

I would now like to point out a few things about the resurrection and the second death. You will remember that in I Cor. 15:23 we read: "Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christs at His coming." Here then is the first resurrection, part of which is mentioned in Rev. 20:5. All who belong to Christ, who have believed on Him, have their part in this resurrection, "at His coming."

Notice what the first clause of verse 5 says: "The rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished." There is no second probation here—no trial of man. "Satan shall go out to deceive the nations." (verse 8.) So those who are alive out of Christ then will all follow His wake, "And the devil, that devil that deceived them, was cast into the lake of fire."

The closing verses of the chapter tell what the dead, small and great, whether on land or sea in earth or hell, are subjected to. "Cast into the lake of fire" is their portion. This is the second death. No a second time going into the first death, but a new and awful horror, the lake of fire." "Whosoever's name was not found in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."

Friend, is your name in the book of life? If not, trust in Christ this moment, and it shall be written there.

The last point I would touch on is this: It is asserted that there is no "eternal torments" as I wrote before. Let us see verse 10 of this chapter in Revelation—"They shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever."

You will see that I have made no statement that is not backed home by the word of God in this letter. I but seek to tell men the truth God reveals. "Oh! that men would be wise, that they would consider their latter end." As an ambassador for Christ I would beseech all: "Be ye reconciled to God, for He hath made him to be the sin-offering for us, that we believing in Him, might be made the righteousness of God in Christ."

SATURDAY.

The Lamb of God.

Read Jn. 1:29-34. Text: 1:29.

Meditation.—In the temple John and his disciples had seen lambs offered in sacrifice. The sacrifice was the best of the little flock, without spot or blemish, as the richest expression of the love of the heart of a man for his God. In Hebrew lore the man upon whom the dove should descend was he who should baptize men into a new spirit, by which they should be able so to love God as to hate the old sins. He would be to them the Lamb of God. The Father's gift of his beloved was to convince the wayward heart of man forever of the redeeming love of God. To this "Lamb" John pointed honest hearts To this same love of God and cure for sin in Christ the Gospels direct us.

Prayer.—In Thy face, O saviour of Men, we see the knowledge of the love of God. No other power than a mightier and holier affection can expel from our divided hearts our love for the unholy and the selfish. O Lamb of God, we come, we come. Amen.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

IMPORTANCE OF WORK.

My son, remember you have to work. Whether you handle pick or wheelbarrow or a set of books, digging ditches or editing a newspaper, ringing an auction bell or writing funny things, you must work.

Don't be afraid of killing yourself by overworking on the sunny side of thirty. Men die sometimes, but it is because they quit at nine p.m. and don't go home until two a.m. It's the intervals that kill, my son. The work gives you appetite for your meals; it lends solidity to your slumber; it gives you a perfect appreciation of a holiday.

There are young men who do not work—but the country is not proud of them. It does not even know their names; it only speaks of them as So-and-So's boys. Nobody likes them; the great, busy world doesn't know they are here. So find out what you want to be and do. Take off your coat and make dust in the world.

The busier you are, the less harm you are apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter your holidays, and the better satisfied the whole world will be with you.—Bob Burdette.

When You Feel It Coming

—When that old Headache sends its warning that you are going to suffer—take ZUTOO. When you feel a Cold coming on take ZUTOO. At the first sign of a pain—at the first feeling of sickness—take ZUTOO.

You will be all right in 20 minutes if it's a headache, or the next morning if it is a cold. Pain all gone, and the whole body refreshed.

Don't wait—don't take chances. Get ZUTOO Tablets to-day—and have them ready to take at the first sign of a Headache or cold and TAKE THEM.

TIES BOUGHT IN MINNESOTA FOR RAILWAY TO BAY

50,000 Required For Line To Hudson Bay—None Near Route.

NO DUTY ON THEM.

Winnipeg Conservative Says Canada Should Have Produced Them.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—Debate on the address was continued in the House of Commons Friday afternoon by W. W. Kennedy (Conservative, Winnipeg South Centre). He read a letter which he had received from R. C. Vaughan, of the Canadian National Railways explaining the purchase of 45,000 ties for the Hudson Bay Railway in the State of Minnesota. Mr. Vaughan said in the letter, as read by Mr. Kennedy, that cedar ties were required for the Hudson Bay Railway, and that there were none in the neighborhood of the line itself. Therefore approximately 45,000 had been obtained from that portion of the old Canadian Northern line running through the State of Minnesota. These ties, Mr. Vaughan said, had been produced along the line of the Canadian National, and he pointed out that there was no duty on ties coming in from the United States. Ultimately, probably 50,000 ties in all would be brought in from Minnesota. It was the policy of the railway, Mr. Vaughan pointed out, to obtain all ties in Canada where possible.

Mr. Kennedy said he thought these 50,000 ties were just 50,000 too many from the State of Minnesota. Surely the Canadian National system could get Canadian timber and employ Canadian workmen to manufacture ties for Canada's railway.

Countess Not Coming.

The name of the Countess of Cathcart, whose entry into the United States has been refused by the American authorities, was brought up on a question by S. W. Jacobs (Liberal, Cartier). "I would like to ask the Minister of the Interior," stated Mr. Jacobs, "whether he has received an application from the Countess of Cathcart to enter this country; and if so, whether the moral turpitude clause which in our law is similar to that of the United States, will be applied?"

Drayton To Get Volume.

"I would like to ask the Minister of Finance what has become of the first volume of the Auditor-General's report," asked Sir Henry Drayton (Conservative, York West).

Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Finance, replied that volume one of the report will be ready early next week.

Sir Henry asked for assurance that this volume would be tabled before adjournment until March 15th.

The Minister of Finance declared he could best answer by asking the Conservatives when would the House adjourn.

"Burning the Candle At Both Ends"

THERE is an old saying about "burning the candle at both ends" which seems to apply to modern life.

How is a girl or boy, or man or woman to enjoy social life to the limit, keep up their daily work and escape a breakdown of health.

The nervous system will not stand the strain. There is too short a time for recuperation, too little rest and sleep. The energy consumed in daily activity is not replaced—bankruptcy is sure.

You find yourself nervous, irritable and sleepless. You are worried, have nervous headaches and spells of dispondency.

A restorative is necessary and Dr. Chase's Nerve Food exactly fills the bill. Most women and many men know this from personal experience and use it as occasion arises.

Prevention is by far the wiser plan with disorders of the nerves. By using this great restorative at the first indication of trouble you avoid a physical break down and weeks of tedious treatment. Keep the vitality at high water mark and you will know the joys of healthful living. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 60cts a box, all dealers or The Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto 2, Can.

WHISKEY "FOR MEXICO" SHIPPED FROM WALKERVILLE TO MONTREAL AND THEN RETURNED TO FORD, ONT.

Dominion Distillers Agent Said Walkers Would Not Ship To U.S.A.

A CURIOUS ROUTE.

Customs Enquiry Committee Unable To Locate "G. Scherer."

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 20 (Canadian Press) — Export of liquor in large quantities from Ford, Ont., by water to Mexico and the identity of a mysterious shipping agent named "G. Scherer" occupied the attention Friday of the Commons committee which is conducting a probe into the administration of customs in Canada. The committee was concerned over the identity of Scherer, who has not responded to subpoena as a witness and who cannot befound in the border cities. While post office authorities have been searching for him, however, several carloads of liquor have been delivered to him in Ford, Ont., for export. Now a summons is out against him and the sheriff has been added to the search party.

The committee called Gregory George, manager of the Dominion Distillers, Limited, Montreal, whose firm has been shipping a carload of liquor every five days to Scherer for export, on a sort of standing order negotiated some time ago by one of the distiller's directors. Beyond the fact that the cash for the liquor was deposited in a Walkerville, Ont., bank before shipment, Mr. George did not know anything about the handling of the shipments at the border cities.

Never Saw Scherer

To repeated questions about the identity of Scherer, Mr. George could only reply that he had never seen Scherer, but believed he lived in Detroit. Several members of the committee were of the opinion that there was no such person as Scherer. Mentioning the director who made the shipping arrangement on behalf of Scherer, Hon. H. H. Stevens finally asked: "Are not Scherer and Cooper one and the same man?" Mr. George replied: "Not so far as I know."

Mr. George stated that his firm had been shipping liquor to Mexico in this way for a year and a half. Customs and excise sales tax, amounting to about $1,500, for every car was paid into the Canadian treasury. Beyond that Mr. George took the attitude that it was not the business of the shippers what became of it. He added that he wished there were more Scherers in Detroit to buy whiskey for export to Mexico.

To Montreal and Back

One curious feature of the evidence given by Mr. George was that whiskey made in Walkerville, Ont., was shipped to Montreal, nearly six hundred miles away, and back again to Ford, which is a couple of miles from Walkerville, before it is exported. Mr. George explained that his firm purchased from the distillery to fill orders for Canadian rye and they received a commission of one dollar a case on the sale. He admitted that they sometimes unload the whiskey before re-shipment.

Asked by the Minister of Customs, Hon. G. H. Boivin, if ordinary alcohol was sometimes mixed with the imported Scotch in the blending process, Mr. George admitted that it was. He also stated in answer to a question from Hon. R. B. Bennett that he had sometimes shipped liquor as hay.

"What bank did Mr. Scherer put his money in to your credit?" Hon. Mr. Stevens asked Mr. George. "Probably the Bank of Commerce. I can't be sure."

"Then you are a poor man to manage such a business." "Perhaps I am."

"How does the money reach you?" "It is paid to the Walkerville Distillery Company. We get a commission."

"The cars originate in Walkerville?" "Yes."

"And are shipped to you in Montreal?" "Yes.'

"And you ship to Ford?" "Yes."

"Why does it come all the way to Montreal?" "Because Walker's won't ship to the United States."

"What percentage of oyur shipments to Scherer is liquor made in your distillery in Montreal and how much is made in Walkerville?" "About twenty per cent. is made in Montreal. We are a new distillery and cannot make enough to supply the demands of these Mexicans."

"Don't you find it hard to navigate from Ford to Mexico?" "It seems to be done."

"Can you tell how this whiskey gets to Mexico?" "I dont know and I don't care. We will sell them all they want."

"Have you ever tried to meet this important customer?" "I never tried."

"You never took him out to dinner?" "If he keeps on buying I think I may take him out."

Mr. Stevens: "This committee ought to find out who G. Scherer is. It seems to me that the witness is very reluctant to tell what he knows."

Mr. George objected. It was unfair to say that he was giving evidence reluctantly, he said.

"You know Mexico cannot be reached by water from Ford?" "I don't know Ford. I don't know the route—maybe it's the Chicago Drainage Canal."

LIBERAL SLAPS PRINGLE'S FACE AT CONVENTION

Culmination of Quarrel Before Thousand Delegates—Convention in Uproar.

PARTY DIVIDED.

Heated Scenes Among Leaders Over Lloyd George's Land Reform.

LONDON, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press). — Former Premier Lloyd George, in his toilsome search for a party cry holding the prospect of bringing him and his party back to power, has had but little more success with his much advertised land policy than he did with his previous efforts, dealing with coal and an electrical power scheme.

The Liberal land convention, made up of Liberal delegates from the whole country, which has been sitting this week in an attempt to draw up a policy on which the whole party might agree, has done little more than throw into strong light the internal conflicts of the party, which were already apparent when Sir Alfred Mond seceded from the Liberal party over the same question recently and went over to the Conservative ranks.

It has also been brought out that the divergencies of opinion over the land policy are not confined to the rank and file but affect equally the leaders like Sir Walter Runciman, William Pringle and Sir Donald MacLean. Several heated scenes between the leaders, arising out of these divergencies, have occurred in the course of the proceedings.

Blow and Apology.

Friday's session was thrown into an uproar by a quarrel between Leslie Hore-Belisha, member of Parliament for Plymouth, and Mr. Pringle, which culminated in the former slapping Mr. Pringle's face. In a moment the thousand delegates were on their feet shouting and booing. When quiet was again restored it became known that there had been a misunderstanding between the two men, and the Plymouth member apologized to Mr. Pringle. Thursday Mr. Pringle was booed down by the delegates, and he had wrongfully attributed an exaggerated account of the incident which appeared in an evening newspaper to Mr. Hore-Belisha.

Compromise Accepted.

While the convention was able to agree on minor matters, such as a living wage for laborers and better housing conditions, when it came to the important land policy, in order to avoid an open split, Mr. Lloyd George had to be content with a compromise greatly differing from his original land proposals.

Nevertheless, the former Premier remains optimistic. He declared at yesterday's meeting that the Liberals would give a surprise to the country. His only fear was that they would not have enough time before the struggle came.

"If you can keep the present Government in office without doing too much mischief for about a couple of years," he said, "I believe you will get a reaction against the Government, re-action against Toryism and re-action against extreme Socialism."

Countess Scales Outer Immigration Wall at New York After Battle.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—The Countess of Cathcart, after a ten-day battle for admission to the United States as a visitor, last night had scaled the outer wall of the Immigration Department's defences. She rested, secure, until Tuesday, on a writ of habeas corpus directing the immigration officials to produce her in Federal court on that day to show cause why she should not be temporarily admitted to the United States under bond.

While the writ was being served on immigration authorities at Ellis Island, Immigration Commissioner Curran issued a statement from his sick bed in which he announced that he would go before Congress as soon as possible to have a bill introduced which would give him absolute authority to decide on all cases of appeal by immigrants and visitors detained at Ellis Island.

Not Moral Turpitude.

Arthur Garfield Hayes, attorney for the Countess, obtained the writ from Federal Judge Goddard yesterday on her petition declaring that she had been illegally detained at Ellis Island. The petition admitted that the Countess had gone to South Africa with the Earl of Craven, a married man, but denied that this constituted moral turpitude, the grounds upon which she was ordered excluded.

The writ automatically stayed an order for her involuntary return to England aboard the first Cunard liner sailing for Liverpool, which was scheduled for to-day.

The exclusion order against the Countess was found by a special board of inquiry composed of three immigration inspectors. The Countess first appealed directly to Secretary of Labor Davis, who affirmed the Board's findings.

Just Rubber Stamp.

Commissioner Curran, in his statement, said he was tired of bearing the responsibility for decisions in cases such as that of the Countess when such decisions were rendered by his superior, the Secretary of Labor at Washington.

The Commissioner said he was ready to decide all cases if Congress would allow him to do so, and to take full responsibility. But, under present laws, he said, he had no more to do with the decision "than the cop on the corner, or the king of the Fiji Islands."

"The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted"

BY S. GERTRUDE DE WENTWORTH-JAMES

SYNOPSIS.

Bob Mannering, with Diane Bledsoe and another couple, are driving to Calkin's Inn after the close of a country club dance celebrating Bob's twenty-first birthday. Bob is at the wheel with Diane leaning over him when the car crashes into a roadster, injuring a woman. The party is taken to a police station, where the sergeant is trying to fix responsibility. Meanwhile, Mrs. Mannering and Margaret Patterson, who is in love with Bob, are following.

CHAPTER V.—Continued from last week.

"All right. I haven't time for your life's history now." A new emphasis crept into the sergeant's tones. "But there was something wrong in that car long before you hit the roadster. The motorcycle policeman's report proves it. He trailed you for several miles. He says you were all over the road and nearly in the ditch a dozen times. What I want to know is, who was driving?"

For an instant Theo seemed upon the point of speaking. Then, with an effort he sealed his lips, opening them only when the keen gaze of the sergeant seemed to bore into his innermost soul, to mutter nervously, if ungrammatically, "It wasn't me, sir, no, sir, it wasn't me."

Now the stern gaze of the sergeant shifted to rest upon Diane. Bereft of her usual coolness and composure, she seemed to shrink, a trembling, terrified girl, under its severity.

"Were you?" he demanded.

Apparently she could not meet his eyes. Her own swept the room as if in frantic search of aid in her plight. Suddenly she shook her head wildly.

"No, no!" she cried. Then, quick as a flash, turned upon Bob, and her accusation rang out unmistakable in its clearness, "He was!"

Again that same air of perplexity seemed to have claimed Bob. At her words he turned towards her and looked straight into her eyes. It was a strange look. There was bewilderment and pain in it. The world had changed so suddenly for him. His happy, care-free life seemed very far away.

But she, who had merely related a fact, seemed to flinch and quail under his glance, the poise and self assurance which had been such a part of her being forgotten.

And still, as if not fully satisfied with what she had done, Diane turned back to Theo and grew almost hysterical in the persistence of her accusation.

"It was he, it was Bob who was driving! Wasn't it, Theo? You know he was driving, don't you, Theo?"

Under her questions Theo shifted nervously upon his feet, shot a frightened glance at Bob and finally stared at the stern visage of the officer of the law as if fascinated.

As if satisfied, the sergeant frowned and gave his attention to Bob.

"If that woman dies, Mannering, it will take all of your pull to get you out of this mess."

"Dies!" It was as if Bob could not believe his ears. Indeed, as if there were very much about the situation in which he found himself which he could not reconcile. Now a sudden movement of the sergeant and a sound from the door attracted his attention.

John Mannering entered. Plainly shaken by anxiety, his face was ghastly white, and he paused for an instant as if to collect himself for the ordeal which was to follow. Then he moved forward, to stop before Bob and gaze into his face.

Yet such was his emotion that he seemed at a loss for words. What thoughts were his at the moment? Inured by the experience of years to similar scenes amidst such surroundings, the meaning of it all must have recurred to him with redoubled force. Here was the machinery of the law erected by the people of the state for their own protection, just as he had been chosen by these same people as their sworn representative in the enforcement of their laws. To him these proceedings had always had a solemn majesty, his part in their equitable application a solemn trust. His to see that the clear course of justice was unsullied, its penalties applied without fear or favor. Yet now, within the very shadow of the law, with its firm clutches poised above him, stood his son—the pride of his heart, the hope of his coming years.

Within him John Mannering's high sense of justice, his cold, judicial mind was arrayed against his heart; his professional honor was set off against his parental love. And even more, for there was Eileen, his own beloved, to whom the welfare and happiness of the boy was dearer than life itself.

Under such circumstances it was not strange that John Mannering's lips were sealed as he faced his son. What words could express his thoughts? What sentences could picture the battle waging within his breast?

Yet even amidst the turmoil of feeling which shook him he must have taken pride in the bearing of his son. For at that moment Bob carried himself bravely and met the gaze of his father unflinchingly.

Only for a moment did John hesitate before his son. He moved towards the sergeant, his face grim and resolute. Leaning towards that official, he was again a lawyer, the chosen representative of the people considering the facts laid before him calmly and dispassionately and, most remarkable of all under the circumstances, impersonally.

So he engaged when again the door opened and Eileen appeared.

"Bob!" she cried at sight of her son, and again, "Bob!" Heedless of all else in the room, she rushed towards him with outstretched arms.

He stiffened, flushing hotly at sight of her, but as she reached him and gathered him in her arms he yielded promptly to her embrace.

So she clasped him to her breast, giving expression to countless, inarticulate expressions of endearment and patting him fondly upon the back.

"You are not hurt, Bob?"

He shook his head.

"But in that awful wreck how did you ever manage to escape without a scratch?"

"I don't know," he whispered huskily.

"It was marvelous—it seems almost too good to be true. All the way here I have been thinking, picturing the most dreadful things which might have happened to you, dear—fearing to find you hurt in some awful way. Perhaps it would be just as well if we have a doctor look you over—there might be internal injuries?"

"I haven't a scratch, mother, honestly."

Once more she enfolded him in her arms. Her son was safe and sound. Beside the wonder of her relief over that fact all else mattered little. But now, as she released him, she seemed to give some thought to his surroundings and to her husband at the police sergeant's desk.

"Did you ever hear of such a narrow escape as Bob had, John?" she asked.

"It was marvelous," he agreed, but there was a curious restraint in his manner as he spoke.

"The mere shock of such an experience must have been terrible." she continued.

John Mannering nodded gravely, but turned to stare down at the papers on the sergeant's desk with anxious eyes.

"I think, I am sure, John, that Bob ought to be home."

John hesitated, the police sergeant eyeing him curiously the while. When he spoke it was evasively.

"There are some matters here which must be attended to first, Eileen."

Too well did Eileen know her husband for his manner to escape her, nor was she slow to draw her own conclusions concerning it.

"I know. I heard that Bob was arrested," she said with a catch in her voice."

Again her husband merely nodded.

"You can pay his fine so that he can go, can't you, John?"

He swallowed hard as if there was a great lump in his throat, and when he spoke there was a strained timbre to his tones.

"I'm afraid, Eileen, this is not a matter to be settled by a fine."

"Why, it was just an automobile accident, John." For the first time Eileen seemed to give heed to the presence of Diane and Theo Saturn as she turned and eyed them for a second. "Nothing more than a group of young people on their way from a party. Surely there is no reason to take such a matter seriously. None of them were hurt."

"No, none of them were hurt," agreed John gently. "But you forget the other car, dear. There was a woman in that who was hurt, quite badly hurt, I'm afraid."

"Yes, but Bob had nothing to do with that, surely," persisted Eileen.

"It appears that Bob was driving Theo's car, dear."

"Bob driving Theo's car?" she repeated and turned to her son as if expecting a denial from him.

But Bob might have been a statue for any heed he seemed to give to what was going on. He stood there gazing straight before him with that puzzled, uncertain look upon his face, yet with some of his father's determination there, too.

His very attitude seemed to make his mother willing to go to any lengths to assist him. Again she turned to her husband.

"Surely, John, you can't expect Bob to remain here much longer. Can't you at least arrange bail for him?"

"Possibly, dear," he said with a strange reluctance for a man who had agreed to bail bonds in a thousand cases as a mere formality. And now, with his wife pleading before him in behalf of his own son, he hesitated, strangely moved and again grew evasive. "But there are considerations, very many considerations to be regarded in such matters."

"Considerations which will keep Diane and Theo here, too?" she demanded with a warmth which caused that sorely tried maid to cling even closer to Theo Saturn and to arouse even greater fear in the latter's soul.

"I think not," explained John patiently. "You see as Bob was driving he becomes the principal—that sets him apart from the other occupants of the car."

"To stay here—in this place—alone, John?" cried Eileen in horrified tones.

More pronounced than ever was that evasiveness in John's answer. A strange thing, indeed, in one ordinarily so decisive.

"That depends, dear——"

"Depends—depends on what, John?" And then as if driven to the point of desperation by his manner, she burst forth accusingly: "You are trying to keep something from me, John. I want to know what it is. I can't bear this suspense."

For an instant there was a break in his poise.

"It is hard for me to bear, too," he said, and it was almost as if he had groaned aloud.

"Bear what? Tell me, John—bear what?"

As if unwilling to speak he gazed at her and there was anguish in his face, but pity, too, pity for her. And as they waited there the silence of the room was broken by a telephone bell. A bell shrill and emphatic in its summons and with so ominous a clamor that it startled every one in the room and caused them to watch the police sergeant as he turned to the instrument and placed the receiver to his ear.

So quiet was the room that the harsh grate of the instrument was plainly audible as the message came over the line.

Methodically the sergeant received it and hung the receiver in its place. Then he turned gravely to John.

"The woman has just died, sir."

John, white as a sheet, straightened himself. He seemed to be tensing his muscles to bear up against an awful shock.

Bob eyed him with that same puzzled look on his face.

But Eileen, as if intuitively sensing evil in that message, turned to her husband, her face pale with fear.

"That message—just what does it mean, John?" she gasped. "Tell me quick just what does it mean?"

He moved towards her, his own face ghastly under the emotion which shook him. He put his arm around her to support her and there was a great tenderness in his voice when he spoke.

"It means, it means, dear, that there can be no bail in this case."

He swallowed as if it was only with an effort that he could go on.

"Bob—Bob is wanted for manslaughter."

CHAPTER VI.

To John Mannering the tones of that timepiece had always seemed soft and melodious, carrying a restful message, a promise of peaceful and contented hours. But now, as he stood there on the hearth with the chill of the early morning about him, their sound smote his overtaxed nerves as something harsh and discordant.

Bereft of the slightest desire for sleep, he had remained there in the living room ever since he had brought Eileen back from the police station. With all his familiarity with such heartrending scenes, the parting with Bob had been one he would never forget. Reduced finally to the depths of despair as her son was led to his cell, Eileen had collapsed. If outwardly more contained, it had been no less difficult for John to endure. Worse still, the future withheld no secrets from him. Well he knew that this, harrowing as it had been, was but the beginning of greater woes.

Directly above him hung that picture of himself in his judicial robes. That portraiture of himself as a law giver, as a dispenser of justice. Symbolical of justice was the picture, and not only that, for the genius of the artist had there depicted the very soul of John Mannering. Strength, character, intellect, were all apparent, but above all else it was the face of a man in whose nature cold reason reigned supreme. Heart, sympathy, each of the gentler characteristics he had, too, but subject always to the control and guidance of eternal truth.

In the weary watches of those morning hours John had loved Bob, loved him perhaps more than he had ever loved him before. But in his dispassionate mind love could never alter facts, affection vary the conclusions of logic. Upon the evidence elicited by the authorities his son appeared to be guilty of an offense against the laws of the state for which a punishment was provided. Very well, Bob must suffer it. That it was his son, that it had become his duty to brand as a felon blood of his blood, was an unfortunate circumstance, having nothing whatever to do with the issue. He might grieve, it might rend his heart strings in twain, but even as he had prosecuted other men with never the slightest malice, so he must appear against his own son. Thus did the matter resolve itself in the cold logic of John's mind.

But regardless of the certainty and sureness with which he arrived at this decision, it had not been easy. Now as he raised his head his face was haggard and worn, and as he listened to the monotonous tread of light feet as they crossed and recrossed the floor above there was tenderness and pity there, too.

It was Eileen who, with not a thought of sleep, trod that never ending path in her own room. A path every foot of which recalled some memory of Bob. There in that spot before the mirror how often had she tied his tie? Tied it through the years at an ever increasing height from his knickerbocker days to that very morning. Yes, tied it finally that very evening, sending him away so handsome in his dress suit to his birthday party, calling him first her baby, then her man. Ah, but to what an entrance upon manhood had that dreadful evening led? To jail—to a cell—the outrageousness, the injustice of the thing was plain. To shut up her Bob, her wonderful son, who had never harmed a soul or had a really evil thought in his whole life, was clearly the depths of unrighteousness. To cage him—her baby—as if he were some dangerous beast, a menace to his fellow men. To put him behind bars—

At that instant Eileen's eyes came to rest upon the reflection of the trellis cast upon the floor before the window by the moonlight. To her distraught fancy it was prison bars through which peered the face of Bob, her baby. With a cry she turned, pressing her hands against her eyes as if to blot out the vision, and then, hopeless of erasing it, she recommenced her endless march up and down the room that thus she might evade the wide reach of those moonbeams.

But wide were their range that night, and another sorrowing soul did they reveal just beyond the brick wall in the Patterson home. There Marjorie upon a tear wet pillow was sobbing as though her heart would break. Bob's birthday! How she had looked forward to it!' How hard had her unaccustomed fingers labored upon that crocheted bag! How much affection had she bound up with each stitch! With what a wealth of joyous anticipation had she discounted his reception of the gift, with what thrills of expectation awaited his birthday party! And all for what? To lie there in wide eyed wakefulness and think of Diane Bledsoe. She it was who was to blame for it all. She had enticed Bob away. Deliberately led him into trouble. Of this Marjorie was sure. And believing it, she lay there weeping, casting up accounts against the other until she was quite certain in her own mind that were real justice done Diane, rather than Bob, would be in prison, and for a life term, so she could never again inveigle unsuspecting youths into ways they should not go. Yet, certain that no such righteousness would prevail, she grew very miserable indeed, and hated Diane with a mighty hatred for so gentle a soul, until there was not a dry spot on all her pillow.

And the moonbeams searched out Bob, too, that night and found him wakeful. Huddled up on the cot in his cell, his head was buried in his hands. Even as his figure was bathed in the soft moonlight, he looked up. And in his eyes was that bewildered expression, the hurt look of a child who is being punished and does not understand why.

A wakeful night, a wakeful night indeed, for those whose hearts were bound up in Bob Mannering's welfare. And finally wearied by her unending march up and down the room, Eileen stopped, but not to go to bed. Slowly descending the stairs, she entered the living room.

Soft as was her step John heard her and hurried forward to support her faltering form.

"Eileen," he cried, "you must go to bed, dear!"

She shook her head.

"You must try and get some sleep, dear."

"Sleep?" she repeated piteously. "As if I could close my eyes for an instant with Bob in that horrible place."

"I know, dear," he agreed compassionately, "but you must get your rest to keep up your strength. If you are not careful you will be sick."

She gazed at him, indifference displayed in every line of her face.

"What does it matter, John? Without Bob—without my baby—nothng matters. I might as well die."

"But Eileen, you must not give up, darling," he pleaded, his anxiety plain.

"I won't give up," she reassured him. "But John, when I think how happy we have been, how wonderfully happy we were this very day, and then remember how this thing, this dreadful thing, has blotted it all out life does not seem very worth while."

He moved as if to urge her back to her room.

"Rest, dear rest is what you need above everything else. You want to conserve your strength—build it up if possible. Nothing is to be gained by your staying up this way."

She drew back from him.

"But I can't rest, John. I tell you. I feel as if I ought to be doing something to help Bob."

"There is nothing you can do for him, dear," he said gently.

She faced him, and her tones were piteous.

"But you, John. Surely there is something you can do?"

He stood there gazing down at her, and very miserable he looked. Then he slowly shook his head.

There was open disbelief in her look.

"With all your knowledge of law, John—all your experience—can't you think of something?"

Again he slowly shook his head.

"And I've heard it said over and over again that you have one of the keenest legal minds in this state."

Now he made no response whatever.

"That you will fight to the last ditch for a client, John."

Still he was silent.

She regarded him wonderingly, as if unable to understand his attitude of silence, his failure to catch her meaning.

"Well, John, your son is your client, now. What are you going to do for him?"

A soul torn with anguish, he faced her, yet she did not seem to sense it.

"I am District Attorney," he said huskily.

"That gives you power and influence. With your brains there should be many ways in which you can help Bob. What are your going to do for him?"

"Nothing!" And the word as it came from him was almost a groan.

She viewed him in amazement, as if in truth he was but a distorted image of her husband having a place in one of the fancies which had beset her that night.

"Nothing! You will do nothing for Bob—our boy? Why?"

"I am District Attorney."

"But, John, that can mean nothing to you when Bob's happiness, when my happiness, is at stake. I don't understand you."

"I'm a sworn officer of the law. I must do my duty."

"Duty? What greater duty have you, John Mannering, than to me, to whom you have plighted your troth, and to your son?"

"My duty to my state—to my country," he said gently.

Before his persistence she hesitated and, gazing into his face, read the unhappiness there. She reached forth and touched him, while a pleading note crept into her tones.

"You have never failed me before, John."

He eyed her pityingly, shaken by the greatness of his emotion. It was true. In the long years of their married life he had denied her nothing. To him her slightest wish had been a law, the fulfillment of her least desire a joy. For love of her he had labored to win a place in his profession. His love for her had uplifted him and driven him again to renewed effort in the dark days when, unrecognized and unappreciated, he had almost yielded to despair. This same mighty force had kindled his ambition to even greater achievement again and ag in the years which had followed. It was for her sake that he had entered the arena of public life when his own tastes caused him to care little for politics. The turmoil of campaigns, the need to plead for the favor of the electorate, to ingratiate himself with Tom, Dick and Harry were repugnant to an innate dignity which fitted so appropriately with the solemn procedure of the law.

First, last and always, John Mannering was a lawyer. He had been urged with every prospect of success to run for Congress, and even now was much spoken of as a future Governor. But always his tastes had led him to seek judicial honors. Well aware of the reflected honor of place and position, he had entered politics for Eileen's sake. Inevitably it was the office of District Attorney which had appealed to his tastes and training.

And now, by a cruel turn of fate, this very honor which he had sought and won for her had come between them. His own high sense of its duties, of the solemn obligations of the oath he had taken, was forcing him, even amidst his own grief at his son's plight, to turn against his heart's beloved. Yes, overwhelmed with sorrow as she was, to wound her yet more cruelly.

Even as he contemplated his predicament, a great wave of feeling seemed to leap from the very depths of his being.

"Ah, Eileen," he cried, "don't you know that I too love the boy? That I love him and you with every fiber of my nature? Can t you see that I am suffering? Think what it all must mean to me—what it is doing to me! And then as if he could no longer bear to face her he turned and moved away.

She watched him go. Watched him sink down into a chair and bury his face in his hands. There was affection and sympathy in Eileen s face as if more and more she wa s appreciating the struggle going on within him. But there was hope in her eyes, too. The hope of a woman who has never been refused. The hopeful confidence of one who, holding a man upon the golden tackle of love, feels that she has but to play her line warily and, his resistance ceasing, he will go her way.

Now she approached him and, pausing beside him, caressed him gently with her hand. a great tenderness in her face.

"Poor boy. she whispered., and then "my fighting man!

With his face still buried in his hands he seemed unaware of her presence.

"You have but to give your mind to it, John, your wonderful mind, and our troubles will be over. I know it—I know you.

Still he did not move.

"With Bob upstairs in his room again John, I could sleep. I am so tired. Ah, how I could sleep.

He moved now as if her shot had gone home.

"You will help him, John? "

He made a movement which she interrupted with doubt.

"You will not, not for me, not for Bob?"

Suddenly he withdrew his face from his hands, and, rising, gazed down at her. Upon his face was the strained and wearied look of a man who was suffering intensely, but in its lines w s decision. The unalterable decision of a strong character refined and clarified under the stress of great emotion.

"I cannot,' he declared firmly. "I am District Attorney."

Eileen leaped up, brought to her feet by the certainty of his tones. She gazed at him as if she could not believe her ears. as if there were something about him which she did not recognize. He might have been a stranger from whom she withdrew white faced and hopeless.

Shocked at the startling change in her, John stepped forward. He moved as if to embrace her.

But, quick as a flash, she evaded him recoiling from him with a shudder, to stand toying with her wedding ring and still eyeing him. Then she flamed forth with bitter scorn.

"You have spoken truly! You are not my husband! You are not the father of my son! You are the District Attorney—the cruel, hateful District Attorney."

With never a word he stood there before this outburst as if fascinated. Could it be possible that this determined, angry eyed creature was his wife? Where was Eileen—the gentle soft spoken and kindly Eileen? What latent force could work such a miracle of transformation as to arouse her tender nature to such heights of hostility?

Now came the answer in her own words half hysterical, yet leaving not the slightest doubt but that she meant exactly what she said.

"But I can fight, John! Thank God, I can and will fight, even if you do turn your back on our boy—for I am his mother."

Still speechless, John Mannering stood there staring at her. Then, as if accepting the challenge she had so boldly hurled at him, he bowed gravely.

KIWANIS PLAN BIG CONVENTION

Tenth Annual Rally to be Held in Montreal This Year.

SOME FEATURES

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 20.—The tenth annual convention of Kiwanis International at Montreal, June 7-10, will bring together a group of leading officials of the United States and Canada, as well as some 6000 Kiwanian delegates and visitors from all parts of the North American continent. A convention headquarters' office has already been opened in the Canadian city and is under the supervision of Merton S. Heiss, convention manager of Kiwanis, announces the International office of the organization in this city today.

Promises have been received from Hon. Charles Evans Hughes and Charles M. Schwab that they will attend the sessions as speakers. Others of prominence who will appear on the program are: Will B. Hays, president of the Moving Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Sir Frederick Williams Taylor, head of the Bank of Montreal, C. King Woodbridge, president of the Advertising Clubs of the World, Jules Brazil, the internationally known entertainer, and Roe Fulker son, journalist and an editorial writer for the Kiwanis magazine.

Reports verified by the International program committee announce that another "All Kiwanis Night" will be observed by this year's convention. The event will be simultaneously celebrated by the 96,000 Kiwanians in the 1463 cities on the continent, and the program of the convention will be broadcast by radio. All clubs will keep a "zero hour" which is a 15 minute period when all Kiwanians devote their united expression for international good will and understanding. This will be the third year of the organization's celebration of "All Kiwanis Night."

Other features of the three days' convention will be: French-Canadian Night, with an array of international sporting evets, musical reviews of the may bands attending, and a parade of thousands of members and delegates.

The soul, which is spirit, can not dwell in dust; it is carried along to dwell in blood. —St. Augustine.

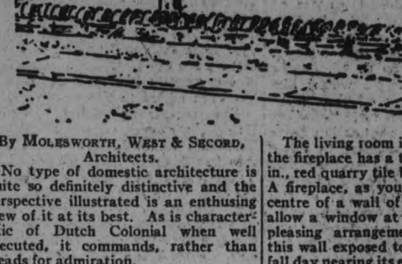
No type of domestic architecture is quite so definitely distinctive and the perspective illustrated is an enthusing view of it at its best. As is characteristic of Dutch Colonial when well executed, it commands, rather than pleads for admiration.

While the most outstanding feature is undoubtedly the unmistakable Gambrel design of the roof, the success of this home as a whole is entirely due to harmonious co-ordination.

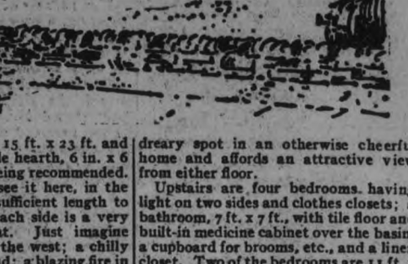
How truly Colonial are the entrance with well proportioned glazed door and side windows and the verandah with balcony above. The four brackets under the roof, relive what would otherwise be rather uninteresting wall spaces at the sides of the bay windows and also create an impression of security without contributing to it. You will notice that the two chimneys are placed in the centres of the gable ends which is a distinctive characteristic of this type of home.

Other noteworthy features are the large dormer with three groups of casement windows and the gable windows on both sides of each chimney to ventilate the attic.

As intimated by the positions occupied by the entrance and two bay windows in the perspective, the ground floor plan shows a centre hall with living room and dining room at either side.



GROUND-FLOOR-PLAN



SECOND-FLOOR-PLAN

The living room is 15 ft. x 23 ft. and the fireplace has a tile hearth, 6 in. x 6 in., red quarry tile being recommended. A fireplace, as you see it here, in the centre of a wall of sufficient length to allow a window at each side is a very pleasing arrangement. Just imagine this wall exposed to the west; a chilly fall day nearing its end; a blazing fire in the grate and the light of the setting sun streaming through the windows. This is the sort of thing to look forward to and provide for when selecting a home.

The dining room is 11 ft. x 15 ft., but the actual floor area is slightly more on account of the bay window. A saving of space is effected by the built-in sideboard. French doors lead to a large verandah, 10 ft. x 15 ft., which could be easily converted into a sunroom if desired.

All the usual built-in features of modern kitchens are found in this one and it is interesting to note, that we have yet to publish a home in this series in which the kitchen sink and drain boards have not been placed just below a group of three or four windows. For further collaboration of the same principle see also the counter in this pantry. The convenient rear entrances completes a very commendable floor plan.

A feature of the approach to the second floor is the midway landing which, while most appreciated by elderly people, is acceptable to all. It also provides light at what is often the one dreary spot in an otherwise cheerful home and affords an attractive view from either floor.

Upstairs are four bedrooms, having light on two sides and clothes closets; a bathroom, 7 ft. x 7 ft., with tile floor and built-in medicine cabinet over the basin; a cupboard for brooms, etc., and a linen closet. Two of the bedrooms are 11 ft. x 15 ft. and the others 11 ft. x 12 ft., but the smaller ones have access to the large balcony, glass doors being used for extra light.

The outside dimensions are 39 ft. 6 in. x 24 ft., not including the verandah, and account of its width—it should be kept at least forty or fifty feet back from the sidewalk. The large area of glass in front makes a southern exposure obviously preferable. West would be a poor second choice and north or east out of the question.

When considered in conjunction with the well planned and spacious accommodation provided and the use of the best materials and workmanship throughout, there is real value here for every cent of ten thousand dollars—the approximate cost of this home.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of the house should communicate with the architect direct. Address :—Molesworth, West and Secord, 43 Victoria St., Toronto, Ont.

Rotary International Celebrates Anniversary

HOW ROTARY SPREAD AROUND WHOLE WORLD

Movement Began in Chicago in 1905 and Now Comprises Thousands of Clubs— Anniversary Celebrated Next Week.

"HE PROFITS MOST WHO SERVES BEST."

In the beginning God made man and created him in His own image. Since then, man's cry has been for light or spiritual enlightment of the many trials that have beset him in his attainment of a "Brotherhood of Man" actuated on the principles of acquaintance, friendship and understanding, without regard to religious faith or political creeds. This understanding, without regard to religious faith or political creeds. This understanding of our fellow men should encompass all and bar none. Such a power for world fellowship and understanding can be best summed up in the words of Him who said: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye so unto them." That precept has been in the possession of the civilized world for over two thousand years, but the application of those principles to a man's business, to his community and social life has never been entirely successful.

A tremendous power for world fellowship and understanding has lain dormant within our reach has lain long years until that something called Rotary, under the banner of "Service Above Self" and actuated by the principles of acquaintance, friendship and understanding with the radiating influence of inter-club communication, was conceived.

Little did President Emeritus Paul Harris and his group of friends realize that the club they formed in Chicago, February 23, 1905, to formulate these principles of practical service to their fellowmen would in such a short time encircle the world as it has today.

Rotary derived its name from the original Chicago Club, where the meetings were held in rotation at the various members' places of business.

The principles of that great force which know no national boundary lines, soon spread and at Winnipeg, Canada, in 1910 the first Canadian Rotary Club was formed, its influence for friendship and service adding materially to the harmonious relationship that has always existed between the United States and Canada, giving two Presidents to Rotary International and fostering a relationship which forcefully emphasizes the possibility of a Brotherhood of man through the fact that these countries have a boundary line of more than three thousand miles which has never known a fort or any other form of armed protection.

From Canada across the Atlantic to the British Isles that something called Rotary traveled, and at Dublin and London the first Rotary clubs were formed. Since then in Wales and Scotland the spirit flourished so that at present there are more than one hundred and sixty-four clubs in the British Isles cementing more tightly the bond of relationship all English speaking peoples held toward each other.

British Rotary.

It is impossible for a member of British Rotary clubs to think of Rotary without recalling one of the most inspiring occasions in their history—the Convention which was held at Edinburgh in 1921. Whatever may have been accomplished or whatever they may have thought of Rotary, the coming of so many Rotarians from all parts of the world gave the Rotarians of the British Isles a new perspective and a tremendous incentive to broaden and increase the effective work of their clubs. Just as the warm-hearted British hospitality extended to visiting Rotarians at the Edinburgh Convention gave a new meaning to Rotary precepts in this country and Canada so there lingers pleasant recollections in the memories of all fellow Rotarians who attended.

Thus men of many lands and different races were drawn together, and as they returned to their homes inspired by the lofty ideals of Rotary they went about their business with a determination to co-operate as never before in attaining the aims of Rotary. The force exerted by Rotary became world-wide in its operations of acquaintance, fellowship and understanding.

Four years after Rotary established itself in the Britsh Isles, the wing ed spirit settled in another island home at the opposite side of the world. In 1915, we find Rotary established in the Hawaiian Islands, the willing self-annexation of these islands to America speaking again so forcibly of a Brotherhood of Man.

The following year Rotary traveled from Honolulu to Havana, Cuba, where it is now represented by eleven Rotary Clubs and Cuban eleven Cuban Rotary Clubs and where Rotary has played a prominent part in civic movements that were of great importance from a local standpoint.

From Cuba to San Juan, Porto Rico, was but a short span and two years later the first Rotary club was formed in San Juan, and true to the spirit of Rotary its progress has been steady and rapid. At present this Club's interest has been centered on a scholarship fund financed entirely by the members of the club.

From Porto Rico to Uruguay is a longer jump but three months later in July 1918 at Montevideo was formed the first Rotary club of South America, whose members take an active interest in its welfare and have been instrumental in establishing among the civil authoriites a greater sense of their responsibilities.

In the Phillipine.

After Montevideo Rotary revealed itself to the Philippine Islands. At Manila in January of the following year the first Rotary Club in the Orient was formed. The Rotarians of the Philippines have played a great part in the history that has been recently made. Major General Leonard Wood, the Governor General of the Islands, made his most important address just prior to his inauguration before a regular meeting of this Rotary Club, and the late Lord Northcliffe, the famous English newspaper editor, made his only speech before this club on his trip around the world.

From Manila the spirit spread to China, the cradle of knowledge, where the precepts of Confucious for centuries gave a striking example of ancient possibilities of a Brotherhood of Man. At Shanghai in July, 1919, was formed the first Rotary Club of China, and the ancient philosophy of Asia was fused with the western spirit of service so that in this corner of the world the two became one, the Rotary principle of service being the standard under which the fusion is made. Now there is also a Rotary Club in Tientsin.

At the same time the Shanghai Club was formed we also find the movement of Rotary necessitating the formation of a club at the Isthmus of Panama and at Panama City was formed the first club where the activities of Rotary have done a great deal toward civic improvements. The Rotary Club of Cristobal, Colon, was later organized in the Canal Zone.

From Panama, to India, the home of the world's oldest civilization, Rotary next asserted itself and at Calcutta in September, 1919, was formed the first Rotary Club of India which has already made for itself a very important place in the community it serves. India, with its habits of self analysis, brought something new to Rotary.—The Club Critic, whose business is to criticize the progress of the work and developments of the club as well as the shortcoming of its members.

He reports four times a year, at a special meeting held for that purpose and has been found to be a most useful official.

The friendly influence for good exerted by the Rotary Club in Uruguay was soon felt by the people of the Republic of Argentine and in November, 1919, at Buenos Aires, was formed the first Rotary Club of Argentine. There is now also a club in Rosario, Argentine.

Spain Next.

There is something about that spirit of unselfish service that appeals strongly to the Latin temperament and in October of the following year the first Rotary Club of Spain was formed at Madrid, a slight recognition of the gratitude that America owes to Spain and Queen Isabella for having made Columbus' discoveryof America possible Rotary has slowly taken a firm hold in Spain and the Rotary Club of Barcelona, which was organized in 1922, has already entered upon a very conspicuous and active career.

The same month and year, October, 1920, also served to introduce Rotary to Japan at Tokyo. The Tokyo Rotary Club was formed and its members not only endorsed and approved of the universal precepts but are living up to them, and another club was formed in the ancient city of Osaka. Past President Yoneyama of the Tokyo Club said there might be two things of special interest to fellow Rotarians to know. The first one was in connection with their delegation to the Washington Disarmament Conference, and the second Viscount Shibusawa's party, which came to United States a little later in 1921-22 in connection with the Good Relations Movement. Each of these mission included Rotarians in its membership. This was not done designedly but the fact showed that Rotary in Tokyo is a live movement, and that Japan's best minds are in the movement.

The force exerted by Rotary for making acquaintance through the fellowship and service next led to the organization of a Rotary Club in Mexico. With the return of peace and prosperity to this Republic they took up a rapid spread of Rotary in their country and there are now seven Rotary Clubs in actual existence in Mexico.

Paris In 1921.

From Mexico the spirit of Rotary moved to France where the Rotary Club of Paris was brought into being in 1921, at about the time of the visit of the International officers, who place upon the tomb of the Unknown Soldier the bronze Memorial Wreath of Rotary International. Paris hopes some day to be one of the great headquarters of Rotary in Europe and fellow Rotarians may be assured that Paris will do her best to be worthy of this great honor. In 1923 the Rotary Clubs of Lyon and Toulouse were formed, and in 1924 the Rotary Club of Nice.

The cordial relations of Rotary were next felt by the great Trans-Pacific Commonwealth of Australia and at Melbourne in April, 1921, was formed the first Rotary Club of Australia, with Sydney following almost immediately. Five more clubs have been organized since then.

We again find a simultaneous organizing of clubs as the same month that brought Melbourne into Rotary also served to bring in Johannesburg, South Africa, whose members declare that South Africa offers a most fertile field for the spread of Rotary principles and they feel that the next few years will see a substantial growth in membership and clubs.

From South Africa to New Zealand is a long jump but not when you stop to consider the progress Rotary has made ,and at Wellington and Auckland in June, 1921, were formed the first Rotary Clubs of New Zealand. The Wellington Rotary Club has gone in strongly for boys work and has recently issued a pamphlet calling attention to the need of building up among the younger generation a desire to become useful and constructive citizens. Since then clubs have been formed in Christ church, Dunedin, Hamilton, Invercargill, Wanganui, Napier and Hastings.

The Wheel of Rotary is now being worn on coat lapels in almost all sections of the globe; and it is not surprising to note that a request for a Rotary club has come from so far north as Newfoundland, Britain's oldest city on the American continent and famous for many other reasons including its unexcelled cod fish, on the evening of November 23, 1921, was born the Rotary Club of St. John's, an event that marked a new epoch in the welfare activities of their country, and an event also destined to make a new mark in the annals of Rotary.

In the land of the Incas at the capitol of Peru the Rotary wheel was next firmly planted after more than a year of organization work and investigation and conference. While the charter of the Rotary Club of Lima was not signed until June, 1922, the date of organization reckoned from the first steps taken in that direction makes the Lima Club the senior of both the South Africa and Newfoundland Clubs.

Still Growing.

And there is something of the same sort of condition in relation to the Rotary clubs in Scandinavian countries. The first charter was granted to the Rotary Club of Christiana, Norway, in February, 1922, but the Rotary Club of Copenhagen, Denmark, which did not receive its charter until somewhat later in the year, had actually been formed in the fall of 1921.

In Amsterdam, Holland, Rotary next established itself in the fall of 1922 and immediately thereafter a second club was established in The Netherlands at Utrecht.

To the city of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Rotary came as a Christmas gift in 1922 and the Rio club has already made great strides in putting the principle of service to work in the great South American capitol, one of the most beautiful cities of the world.

As Ostema, the first Rotary Club in the early part of 1923 and very shortly thereafter came into being at the capital city of Brussels.

Italy, long a student of Rotary, joined the international gathering in December, 1923, when the first talian Club was chartered at Milan.

In March, 1924, Bermuda Islands were enlisted under the banner of Service to the establishment of a Rotary Club at Hamilton.

Later in April 1924, Chileans added to the list of Rotary nations, a club at Valpariso having been duly formed and elected to membership in Rotary International.

In May of that year Switzerland joined the ranks with a club in Zurich, where in February, 1925, an office of the Secretary of Rotary International, for Europe, was established. In May 1925 the first Rotary club in Guatemala was organized in Quatemala City.

In October 1925 two more countries—Czeocho-Slovakia and Austria—joined the international ranks, when clubs were established in Prague and Vienna.

And so the spirit of unselfish service speeds its way around the world under Rotary auspices. Every continent and most of the great island commonwealths and dominions are nnw represented in Rotary International counsels.

JOHN WESTLAKE, MAIL CARRIER, CONCLUDES CONTRACT AND WILL SPEND LAST DAYS 'DOWN FRONT'

For Past 28 Years He Has Driven Mail Twice Every Week.

LUMBER CAMP DAYS.

Can Hark Back To Stirring Times When Wolves Howled in the Timber.

John Westlake, the aged carrier of the mail between Catchacoma (Lake Ketchecum) and Buckhorn, known postofficially as Hall's Bridge, because of the number of Buckhorns in Canada, ends his contract with the government this year, and is preparing to sell his farmstead prior to removing to spend his declining years at the front. For 28 years he has driven the mail twice a week between Catchacoma and Buckhorn. Catchacoma stands alone and is the name of the post-office which was instituted to accommodate the lumbermen and lumberjacks in the old days and is contrived to accommodate the rapidly increasing summer population of American and Canadian tourists who have found out this necklace of lakes set in a wilderness.

Of Pioneer Stock.

Mr. Westlake has been 46 years a resident of this part of the township of Cavendish and knows the history of the northern wilderness from the days of the great lumber firms and the mighty hunters down to the arrival of modern conditions and the changes which time brings forth. Mr. Westlake came at the age of seven years from Devonshire, England, with his parents who settled first in Douro and then in Smith near Bridgenorth. Mr. Westlake married Miss Emily Begley, of London, England, who proved to be a partner of the most indomitable courage and of the greatest service to the isolated settlers of the township. Mrs. Westlake died ten years ago, since which date his daughter, Edith, has kept house for her father. It is a lonely life in winter, although, even then, it has its charms, especially for a woman, but in summer the motor car has put this romantic chain of lakes within easy reach of those seeking relaxation and a renewal of the depleted stores of their health and energy. In the old days considerable money was made in furnishing supplies to the lumbercamps and in the carrying trade but that has largely vanished, giving way to the supply of tourists with what they require. Mr. Westlake has 200 acres of land with good, serviceable buildings, lying within easy reach of Lake Ketchecum and its sister lakes and he by no means rejoices at the prospect of selling out and abandoning a life which has been fraught with so much success, happiness and good health. Mr. Westlake has three daughters, Mrs. A. E. Johnston, Peterborough; Blanche and Edith, and one son, Edmund, of Lakehurst. It will be a sad parting when the time comes this year for the ancient settler and hunter to turn and face for the last time a lovely country fraught with so much real human joy, not unmixed, however, with the troubles that afflict humanity and call forth much of the sympathy and charm of a remote and lonely life.

W. Scott, First Lumberman.

The first lumberman to work the limits of this district was W. A. Scott and Scott and Benedict. Mr. Scott was the first to lumber through here and Catchacoma is alongside what is still known as "the farm," which was owned and worked by him and was the source of all the fodder and much of the food consumed by the Scott shanties. This "farm" is now known as the park-like property where summer tourists come at the present time, some of the land being reserved for public purposes by the government, a half mile or so occupied by cottages along the famous sand beaches, and the balance owned by Mr. Westlake and Mr. J. H. Burnham, and a few others.

Others Followed.

After Scott came the late Mr. Samuel Dickson, who lumbered very extensively in Harvey and Cavendish, his successors, the Dickson Co., being bought out by the Cavendish Lumber Co., the Peterborough Lumber Co. following in course of time. Mr. Westlake worked also for the Strickland Co. in Cardiff, Methuen, Harcourt and Harvey. He measured timber for Reid and Platt of Bobcaygeon, a large firm operating in lumber, Sturgeon Lake and Pigeon Lake. He also had work with the Rathbuns of Deseronto, early operators in Cavendish.

Early Experiences.

While Mr. Westlake lumbered and cadged, his wife drove the mail and, in the early days, she escaped from wolves by a narrow margin on more than one occasion, a less unpleasant visitor being a gigantic moose. One of her earliest experiences was before the present buildings were put up and in the days of the log-house when a bear actually attacked the cabin and seemed bound to force his way in. This district has always been and has remained a hunter's and fisherman's paradise.

By reason of the large revenue from lumber operations, the Ontario Government many years ago put through a government road from Buckhorn past Catchacoma and Cochrane's, up through Cavendish to Gooderham, and is now maintaining it for the benefit of the tourist trade. The cessation of lumbering has caused a diminution of the settler population, but the future may see the establishment of ranches to the north and west on an extensive scale.

Noteworthy Hunters.

The famous Digby Sheffield used to hunt in this district with Mr. Westlake as a guide; other well-known hunters being Mr. J. D. Collins and Harry Winch, the late Tob. Fitzgerald and R. M. Roy.

At present the Ketchecum Hunt Club formed by the late H. C. Winch, has its hunting lodge on the east shore of this lake. Mr. E. A. Peck has a summer cottage here. Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald has a handsome lodge near Catchacoma, as has Mr. Albert Curtis, of Curtis Bros; also, the Eagle Lake Hunt Club has likewise its quarters near Catchacoma.

Mr. Hugh Cochrane's tourists' headquarters is just above Mr. Fitzgerald's, and F. E. Pearson's summer hotel is on Gull Lake just to the south. It is thought by those qualified in that direction that this point will yet become famous for its mineral springs. The water of Lake Ketchecum itself has been found by official analysis to be 98 per cent pure. No malaria here. Nearly fifty years is a long time to look forward to, but it is not so long to look back upon, fraught though it may be, sain Mr. Westlake's case, with a vast store of interesting memories of the olden days.

The Examiner proposes to conduct other biographical sketches, similar to that of John Westlake, which will appear in its Saturday issues, and has retained J. H. Burnham for this purpose.

A weekly lesson about the earth: why it whirls and what it wears.

By WILLIAM SILLY

OUR EARTH'S AGE.

Women are sensitive about their ages. The earth is reticent regarding hers, and has rejected all guesses. Scientists have rudely poked her, examined her teeth and pulled her hair, and declare she is several million years of age.

Ministers, on the other hand, computing by their manuscript, say she is but a demure miss of 4,000 summers.

That the earth, like any other maiden lady, appreciates the difference is indicated by the fact that Bishops are always fat and scientists lean.

Teeth.

Questions on the lesson:

1. What is the earth's next birthday.
2. State the difference between a scientist and a bishop.
3. How old are you.

STOKER RELATES STORY OF RESCUE

Account of Conditions in Furnace Room By One Who Knew.

"SICK OF THE SEA."

By MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Correspondent.

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, Feb. 20.—The captains and first mates and the radio officers have told their stories of how the Antinoe went down, and now listen to the story of Michael Matthews.

It's from the furnace room that Michael Matthews' story comes—the furnace room that was hell and fury when the Antinoe ran into the four days and nights of lunging, plunging peril.

"I'm sick o' the sea," Michael Matthews told me, and the simple sentence told more than all the long columns of cables about the rescue of the Antinoe's men by the President Roosevelt.

"A Newry, north of Ireland, man I am, with Newark, New Jersey, more like home to me, and I've had the wander foot for a long time. The sea calls, and me for a ship.

"But Gawd, what a ship that Antinoe was when the old sea began hammerin' us, and me down in the furnace room firin' up!

The Ocean Pours In.

"Half naked I was, because o' the heat o' the place, when bang—swish! The water was down on us and our fires and our furnaces. A hatch had been stove in by a giant wave, and the whole Atlantic ocean seemed pourin' down on us.

"It was hell and fury down there. And when we got to the deck, it was to hang there for three days and three nights and more—wet, hungry, thirsty, shiverin' like dogs, a-hopin' the Roosevelt could save us, and then stoppin' hopin' and just thinkin' that right in sight of that grand vessel we'd soon be sinkin' like rats, with our mouths filled with bitter sea water and nary a breath left even to cry out 'So long!'

The Miracle.

"And then when we wuz thinkin' we wuz dead men for sure and earnest, and a-lookin' to the priest, Monsignor Whelan, who stayed up day and night on the Roosevelt a-tryin' to give us some comfort—just then miracle happened, and we wuz got off.

"Black as coal from oil and grit and soot and dirt of the furnace room I was.

"They fed us first. I asked for ham and eggs, and they kept a-bringin' 'em 'til I couldn't eat no more. And whiskey. The Roosevelt's a dry boat, but the stuff came up from somewhere.

"And then I began to wash and wash, and to try to look like a white man once more.

"After I got cleaned up, people began to give me things. One gave me some underwear, another some socks, another a pants, another a coat, and another a hat. They didn't match, and I looked all dressed up like a Portugese admiral.

Philadelphia Chicken.

"They gave us a regular Christmas dinner several nights after. Man, they fed us Philadelphia chicken! And I ate 'em and ate 'em 'til my ears wagged.

"And sleep? Man, do you know what a real sleep in a real warm bunk is after you haven't slept none at all for three black, wicked days and nights?

"Well, then, you don't know nothin' at all about sleep.

"Here we are back in safe waters now, thanks to the Yanks—and some of those Yanks have good German names—and I'm sick of the sea, I'm thinkin'.

"I'm goin' to take a good long rest as soon as the company give me my back pay. Yep, I ain't takin' no chances with the sea again for a whole month or more."

And that's the story of the Antinoe and the saving of her men from graves in mid-Atlantic as Michael Matthews, of the furnace room, told it to me.

If you want a clear conscience, keep a clear mind.

H. S. Literary Society.

The meeting of the Literary Society was held on Friday evening. The meeting opened by the singing of "O Canada," by the school. Miss Ruth Harper, the president, then gave a short address, and announced that the programme was to be given by the pupils of Form 1. Mr. Clifford McConnell announced the programme, the first number of which was a proverb: "Make Hay While the Sun Shines," directed by Miss Florence Nixon. The sentences each containing one word of the proverb were given by Blanche Baker, Loretta Kerr, Margaret Walsh Dema Ferguson, Charles Doherty and Willie Rogers. A recitation was then given by Willie Rogers, and this was followed by a charade enacting the word, "Schoolgirl," in which all the pupils of the Form took part. A recitation by Lillian Abel was followed by a piano solo by Marguerite Webster. Another proverb "It Never Rains, But It Pours" was then given, the sentences containing words being given by Lillia Abel, Marguerite Webster, Marie Metcalfe, Blache Barker, Clifford McConnell, Earl Hamblin and Ambrose Quinlan.

The meeting closed by singing "Auld Lang Syne."

Miss Dorothy Toye, B.A., acted as critic.

Norwood High School was paid an official visit by Inspector G. F. Rogers, M.A. of the Department of Education, Toronto, during the week.

A number from the village attended the Havelock - Peterboro hockey matches held in Peterborough on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, and emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other fords of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchical asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to direction. Ask your druggist Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BIG CARD PARTY HELD BY FIREMEN

Many Attended Enjoyable Evening in Lakefield Hall.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 20.—A large and very successful card party was held on Monday evening under the auspices of the Volunteer Fire Brigade in the Memorial Hall. As a tribute to Saint Valentine, whose festival was the day before, the tally cards were large red hearts. Mrs. J. C. Smith was convenor of the committee for Bridge, Mrs. F. J. Burgess for the Five Hundred committee, and Rev. Walter Cox for Euchre. The latter game was the most popular, but both bridge and five hundred were well patronized.

Refreshments were served by the young men of the brigade about 11 o'clock, and tribute was paid to the efficient manner that the company was served. A few of the ladies assisted but the work was mainly done by the boys, who showed the same careful attention to detail which they display in fire fighting. After supper the fire chief, Allan H. Clarke, spoke a few words of appreciation to their friends on behalf of the brigade. It is very encouraging to find the public standing behind the boys in their effort in public service he said.

The object of these gatherings is two-fold; viz., a social evening and the raising of money to spend on equipment. In the past a large share of the equipment was purchased by money raised by social gatherings, but now the major portion is paid for by the people through their taxes, but there are always small things needed, which add to the efficiency of the brigade which they secure from their own funds. There is also a recreation room which is being fitted up. The chief closed by asking for future assistance and co-operation, feeling sure that the people are behind the brigade and once more assuring them of their effort to merit the support of the ratepayers.

Rev. W. Cox presented the prizes which were won as follows:

For euchre: Miss Loretta Gibson and Arthur Webster were prize winners, and Mrs. J. R. Hull and Frank Payne won the consolation prizes;

For five hundred: Mrs. H. J. Sutton and J. S. Montgomery won the first prizes, and Mrs. Moore and E. N. Northey the consolation;

Mrs. H. J. Stuart and Dr. J. C. Smith were the lucky ones in bridge, while Miss Margaret Connall and C. S. Tanner won the consolation prizes.

An hour was spent in dancing before the company dispersed to their homes. The evening was so successful that a euchre will be held shortly after Easter by request of many of Monday night's patrons.

Among those present were Mr and Mrs Howard Beans, Mr and Mrs F J Burgess, Mr and Mrs A B Burrows, Mr and Mrs Chappell, Mr and Mrs D H Charlton, Mr and Mrs Allen Clarke, Mr and Mrs H G Fitzgerald, Dr and Mrs S J Gibson Mr and Mrs A V Hill, Mr and Mrs J R Hull, Mr and Mrs Wm Millage, Mr and Mrs U A Moore, Dr and Mrs H E Moore, Mr and Mrs J S Montgomery, Mr and Mrs W G Morrison, Mr and Mrs. E H Northey, Mr. and Mrs Bruce Preston, Mr and Mrs J W Ridpath Dr. and Mrs J C Smith, Mr and Mrs W H Stabler, Mr and Mrs H J Sutton, Mr and Mrs C S Tanner Mr and Mrs Chas. Costume Party

Rev. and Mrs. S. A. Kemp gave a jolly Valentine costume party for the members of the Young Worshippers' League, which is composed of children from 5 to 14 years of age. The party was held in the spacious basement of the Regent Street Church, which was beautifully decorated in red and white, with countless hearts of all sizes the main feature. The children were practically all in costume and the scene was a kaleidescope of color as with gay shades most in evidence. Miss Margaret Richardson furnished the music for the Grand March in which all took part. The judges, who were Miss Payne, Mrs. Nathan Payne, Mrs. John Hunter found great difficulty in selecting the prize winners among so many splendid impersonations. Eva Hendren won the first prize, May Kemp the second prize, Valeta Carveth the third, and Teddy Hunter the fourth prize.

A special feature was the Valentine post office in which the children deposited their Valentines and after a short programme had been rendered they again visited the post office and drew their mail from the post master. This was very popular and caused lots of amusement. A pantomime was presented of "Little Goldilocks and the Three Bears," with Eva Hendren in the name part and Ted Leonard, Marian Wagar and Gray Kemp as the bears. It was a very clever performance and decidedly out of the ordinary and was heartily applauded.

Mrs. (Rev) Grant awarded the prizes for the costumes.

Partners were chosen for supper and the children enjoyed the feast of good things prepared for them. There were four cakes which contained rings, so four children were made glad by the eclat which follows the finding of a ring in the cake.

This is the second party put on by the ingenuity of Mrs. Kemp and it was quite as successful as the one held on Hollowe'en, which established a record for children's parties.

YELLOW STUB—GALL 28—Wilde BEGIN HERE TODAY.

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the yellow stub of a theater ticket.

JIMMY RAND, his son, goes to Chicago, where the theater is. The stub is traced to THOMAS FOGARTY, who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer. Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints when she learns police want her for murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands. Olga tells police the stub and handkerchief might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder.

Jimmy receives mysterious warnings to leave Chicago. Later he is followed by two men and attacked. He escapes, after grabbing a blackjack from one of them.

He is walking in the park one morning when he sees Mary Lowell sitting alone on a bench.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI.

Jimmy quickened his step, galvanized into sudden action by the sight of her.

"Mary," he said softly, looking down at her. He felt strangely stirred; the blood raced madly through his veins.

She turned quickly, startled at the sound of his voice. The red mounted swiftly to her cheeks, almost as if he had surprised her in the act of thinking about him.

"Good morning, Mr. Rand." She took his outstretched hand.

"So I'm just Mr. Rand to you, am I?" he said. He laughed mirthlessly.

"You forget quickly, don't you?"

She made a pretense of studying her glove and didn't answer.

"It was not so long ago," he went on, "that it was Jimmy. No, it was Jim. Everybody else calls me Jimmy, but you said you wanted to call me Jim. What was it you said—that Jimmy seemed so diminutive?"

"Don't." She put up a protesting hand. "You have no right to remind me of that."

He made as if to sit down on the bench and she moved over to give him room beside her.

"It is you," he said, "that have no right to treat me as you have treated me. Mary," he went on, gazing earnestly at her, "you hurt me. You hurt me cruelly."

"And what about me? It probably never occurred to you that I might have been hurt, too."

He leaned toward her eagerly. "You mean," he asked, "you mean you cared?"

"I didn't say that. You may put any interpretation on it you wish. I'll only tell you that you disappointed me. Wait a minute." She checked him with a wave of the hand as he was about to speak. "Let me just say what I want to say and then I'll go. I shouldn't say it, but I want to—I can't help it, even though I had made up my mind never to speak to you again.

"You — you destroyed something beautiful for me, Mr. Rand." He winced at her mention of his name. "Perhaps I'm talking like a romantic young school girl, but I keep remembering the way we met. It was romantic—your saving me from being annoyed by those men, and fighting for me."

"I remember," he murmured. "You called me Sir Launcelot, and you were Elaine."

"You seemed so clean and manly," she went on, "and then you had to spoil it. You were not so different from other men, after all."

"Spoil it? What do you mean?"

"It's not necessary to ask, is it?"

"Mary," he said, "you judged me without a trial. You didn't give me a chance to explain."

"What was there to—"

"I know what you're going to say," he went on hurriedly. "That there was nothing to explain. Now hear me. You've got to hear me. You say you keep remembering the way we met. Don't you suppose I do? God help me, I've hardly thought of anything else. You were so fresh and beautiful—so different from any other girl I'd ever known. You seemed that way right from the start, from the time I first saw you sitting there in the church.

"And then that night at the restaurant," he continued, the words tumbling from his lips, "and you said you were going to call me Jim. Mary, that seemed like the most wonderful thing in the world to me."

"Don't," she breathed, turning away from him. "You have no right to remind me of that after what has happened."

"Then I'll take the right. You can't stop me now. I thought—I thought you cared a little and it was wonderful even to think it. That evening, while we were sitting there at the table, I heard some men mention a girl's name—a girl I had been looking for. Mary, you don't know how important, how necessary it was to find her."

She surveyed him critically from beneath her long black eyelashes. "And it was so important and necessary," she asked coldly, "for you to be lifting her into a taxicab the next night—holding her in your arms on a public street?"

He flushed hotly. "You speak," he said bitterly, "like a jealous woman." He tried to hurt her, and he did, and was instantly sorry that he had.

Two bright spots of color glowed in her cheeks. "You are entitled to your opinion," she said. "Perhaps I was jealous. At any rate, it was sufficient to kill whatever regard I may have had for you."

"Mary, I'm sorry, I shouldn't have said that. I've hurt you."

"What does it matter?" she said wearily. "I'm getting used to it."

"Mary, I've been a fool. It's this temper of mine. It makes me say things I don't want to say."

"You said," she put in, "that you wanted a chance to explain. "I've given it to you and you still haven't told me anything I don't already know. I saw you with this woman in your arms, lifting her into a taxicab. You cheapened me in front of the man I was with—Mr. Church. I had been telling him about you. You cheapened me, I tell you, and yet you wonder that I didn't want to speak to you the next day."

"She had fainted," he said. "That's why I was lifting her into the cab. Mary, let me tell you the whole—"

"Fainted?" There was an edge of sarcasm in her voice. "I was informed differently."

"Informed?" he said bewilderedly. "Who could have informed you, and what?"

"What you called a faint was described to me as intoxication."

"And you believed that?" he asked, hot anger mounting into his voice. "Who told you that?"

She answered coldly. "Isn't it sufficient that I believed it?"

He let his hands dangle limply over his knees and stared unseeingly at the ground. "Yes," he said. "I suppose it is." Listlessness was in his voice.

Something in his tone caught her. Her hand went to her throat and there was pain in her eyes. But he didn't see it.

He kept staring at the ground. His mouth twisted queerly as He spoke, as if the words cost him a struggle to utter them.

"Mary," he said, "you've hurt me more than you'll ever know. They say that I'm stubborn—that stubbornness runs in the Rand family. Maybe they're right—maybe I'm being stubborn. It's costing me something to say this. Something tells me I shouldn't and yet I am.

"I was going to explain all about this whole affair. I was going to tell you what brought me to Chicago and who this girl was and why it was so important for me to find her. I told you she fainted, and I was going to tell you the trouble she got in that caused her to faint.

"But you've prevented me from doing it. A man likes to feel that he can be trusted. I don't know what kind of men you're accustomed to meeting—" she winced at the words—"but I would feel that I had been robbed of some of my self-respect if I capitulated in the face of what you've just said.

"You accuse me of holding a drunken woman in my arms, from which I suppose I am to infer that I am the one who got her drunk."

"No," she protested, "I don't accuse you of it. I'm only telling you what I—"

"I makes little difference," he interrupted. "The point is you believed it. I suppose I could deny it, but I'm not going to. You can believe what you like. You said I had hurt you. Perhaps it is not in my power to hurt you again, but I hope I can. That's what I want to do. I've been trying to get a chance to explain, but I'm not going to. You can draw your own inferences about the whole affair until you tell me that you believe whoever told you that thing lied."

"Jim," she said, and it was the first time she had called him by that name. "I believe you. Please forgive me. I, too, say things I don't mean."

"But you did believe it. Who told you?"

"Whoever told me must have been mistaken," she said.

"He was not mistaken," he shot back savagely. "He lied—lied deliberately. Who was it?"

"I—I prefer not to say. He didn't want to tell me, but thought he was doing so for my own good."

He laughed. "How considerate of the gentleman! Could anything be more quixotic than that? Listen, Mary, you needn't try to shield him. There's only one person that could have told you—the one person besides yourself who saw us. It was Church, wasn't it?"

She flushed at the question, but made no answer.

"Of course it was. If I had the gentleman here I think I'd punch his head for the trouble he has taken in my behalf."

"I—I don't believe you realize what you are saying." She was plucking nervously at her handkerchief.

"Oh, don't I?" His anger was running away from him. "Has it occurred to you that I'm the one who has had all the explaining to do? It seems I got in wrong for being seen with another girl. How about your self? Was I to take your presence in Mr. Church's company for granted?"

"Oh, please stop, Jim. You're only making matters worse." She put her hand on his sleeve, pleading.

"Who is this man Church, anyway?" he persisted.

She turned to face him squarely, the look of pain again in her eyes. "He's the man I'm going to marry," she said softly.

It stunned him. "God, no!" he said after a long silence. She had turned away, was crying. "You mean," he asked, "you mean you've promised—you're engaged?" She nodded.

"Mary," he cried, a sob in his voice, "it's not true. Say it's not true. I love you, Mary, I love you."

PRESENTATION AT MADOC LEAGUE

Two Neighbouring Young People's Societies Were Guests.

MADOC, Feb. 20—On Tuesday evening the Epworth League of the United Church entertained the Young People's Societies of Queensboro and Hazard's and the Hazard's Missionary Society.

Mrs. J. Marcellus, president of Madoc League, gave the address of welcome, after which the programme was given by the visitors, with Mr. Leslie presiding. A reading, the court scene from Dickens' Pickwick Papers, was splendidly given by Mrs. O'Rorke. An address on Dickens and his works was given by Mrs. Sexsmith, who portrayed some of the characters graphically and well. Mrs. Sexsmith pointed out the great influence Dickens had over the social life of his time, and the changes and improvements he had brought about by his writings.

Vocal solos were rendered by Miss Snowden and Miss Mutton and a duet by Misses Snowden and Keene.

Rev. Mr. Sexsmith then gave an enjoyable talk on what he considered were the best books. He was followed by Mrs. G. Harris who also spoke of books, and those she had found most helpful and enjoyable.

The President of Hazards' W.M.S. moved a vote of thanks to the Madoc Society, which was seconded by Mrs. G. Harris.

Rev. Mr. Foster then invited the President of the Madoc W.M.S., Mrs. Harrison; President of Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Huffman, in absence of Mrs. E. Brown; President of Y.P.S., Mrs. Marcellus and superintendent of Sunday School, Mr. Fair, to come to the platform. In addition to welcoming the visitors of the evening, this was also an occasion to say farewell to Mr. and Mrs. English who are leaving town to take up residence on a farm at West Huntingdon. During their years in Madoc Mr. and Mrs. English have been very active in all departments of the church and have rendered invaluable aid. They will be very much missed, and as a token of appreciation of their services an address was read by Mrs. Huffman to Mr. and Mrs. English who were also called to the platform. On behalf of the different organizations of the church Mrs. E. Harrison presented them with a comforter, and Mrs. R. Fair with a lamp. Mr. English replied expressing the thanks of Mrs. English and himself, and their regret at leaving old friends and associations.

Refreshments were then served by Madoc Y.P.S. and a social hour passed pleasantly. Nearly two hundred were present at the meeting.

Special Services

Ash Wednesday services were held in the Guild Room of St. John's Church in the eevning. Rev. Mr. Strother began a series of talks on the parable of the Prodigal Son.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Feb. 19 — Export heifers were quite steady at $7.25 and $7.50 a cwt., while export bulls were a little higher, and up to $6.10 a cwt., although the quality was perhaps the best of the season. A fair number of short keeps was taken for overseas at $7 to $7.25 a cwt., but the two firms who have been taking these since last fall will now be out of the market for a time. Butchers' cattle lacked snap for the finished, 900-lb. up, handyweight, which sold from $7.25 to $7.50 a cwt., and for good baby beeves, which brought up to $10.25 a cwt.

Good butchers' cattle were $6.75 to $7 a cwt., but in the medium and common kinds the market was unstable, and prices were off 25 to 35 cents a cwt. Some of these were still unsold on Thursday. More butchers' cows could have been sold. Choice cows brought over $6 a cwt., and good cows were $5 to $5.50. Medium cows went around $4.50, and common $3.50 a cwt. Good export steers, heifers and bulls will be wanted next week, but no higher prices are expected. Butchers' cows are still wanted, but except for good to choice, the butchers' cattle will prove a drag.

Joe Abrams shipped 417 calves to Buffalo this week and this buying was again a factor in the market's strength. Choice calves sold at 13 to 14 cents, good calves 12 to 12 1-2 cents and mediums 10 to 11 1-2 cents a pound. Very few common calves are arriving.

New Zealand and Australian lambs are affecting the lamb market and prices remain easy with tops not above 13 3-4 cents a pound and heavy lambs about 11 cents. Sheep are keeping quite steady.

A small number of hogs were taken from here this week to make up a trial export shipment. This and the buying of one firm held the market strong at $13.75 a cwt. f.o.b. until Wednesday afternoon. The market was semi-demoralized at the week-end, with packers' bids down $1 a cwt. to $12.75 f.o.b. Commission men are advising caution with shipments until the change has been tested by next week's deliveries.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Feb. 19—A feature of the millfeed trade was the increased demand for Manitoba bran with the result that the undertone to the market was firmer and sales of odd straight cars were made at $31 per ton, including bags, ex-track which was an advance of 75c per ton over current figures, but this was not general as the bulk of the business was done at $30.25 per ton, including bags, ex-track.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for standard grades of rolled oats and prices were reduced 10c per barrel with a small trade passing at $3.10 to $3.20 per bag of 90 pounds delivered.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for fresh seconds eggs and prices scored a decline of 3c per dozen owing to the market being over-supplied. Sales of this kind of grade were made as low as 32c per dozen. On the other hand the tone of the market for the higher grades was steady under a continued fairly good demand with sales of extras at 43c, and firsts at 39c per dozen. Receipts today were 1196 cases.

The market for storage second eggs continues firmer and prices were marked up 1c per dozen with sales at 27c per dozen. The tone of the market for the other grades was steady and prices were unchanged.

The undertone to the market for potatoes continues easy and Quebec varieties scored another decline of 5c per bag with sales at $2.75 per bag of 90 pounds, ex-track.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 19—Corn broke away from wheat leadership today and finished higher whereas the wheat market declined. The east was said to be after corn for shipment at the opening of navigation and later. Meanwhile pressure of Argentine wheat was associated with the downturn of wheat values. Corn finished firm at 3-8 to 5-8 cents advance, May 79 to 79 1-8c, with wheat unsettled, 3-8 to 7-8c off, May $1.67 1-8 to $1.67 1-4 and July $1.48 1-4; oats 1/8 to 1-4c up, and provisions showing seven cents to 20c advance.

STERLING RATES

Still Enjoying Life at 84

Thanks To That Wonderful Remedy

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

Mrs. F. H. Miller, 1843-11th Ave. East, Vancouver, B.C., writes:—"Five years ago my husband suffered terribly with severe attacks of palpitation of the heart and smothering spells, and two doctors stated that he could not possibly live six months.

A friend recommended Milburn's H. and N. Pills, with the result that my husband is still enjoying life at the age of 84 years.

He has improved so wonderfully that he can now climb the stairs without having those awful pains in his heart."

ALL ELEVATORS MUST DRY GRAIN

ORDER BY BOARD.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—An order was issued by the Board of Grain Commissioners to-day that, commencing on March 1st, all elevators, both public and private, must proceed to dry all tough and damp grain in their bins, and thus put into good condition all the grain in the houses. The order applies to all wheat of No. 3 Northern grade and lower and also to all coarse grains. This is the first precautionary measure taken by the Board after several sessions with the grain trade and owners of grain in the West.

The public elevators have a large quantity of wheat of the grades specified for drying, and possibly two and a half to three times as much of the coarse grains which will require to be passed through driers.

Meanwhile the elevators will be allowed to take in no more tough grain, but will proceed to take in as many cars as possible of grain that is graded damp and dry them, selecting them in the order of their arrival, so that those which have been standing in the yards for the longest time will get the first service.

The Board of Grain Commissioners is impressed with the seriousness of the situation, which will be considerably accentuated if, as seems likely, there is an early spring and the coming of warm weather thaws out the grain and thus renders it more liable to heat.

POISONING CHARGE.

Strychnine in Wife's Food Alleged.

CROSSFIELD, Alta., Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Before a curious crowd that represented most of the population of the village, Joseph Demers, 59, local cobbler, began his fight for life Friday when he was charged at a preliminary hearing before Police Magistrate Lewis with the murder of his wife, Rochelle Demers, on January 8. Demers is charged with placing strychnine in pancakes eaten by his wife at breakfast on that day.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

LURE OF HOUSEHOLD LINENS.

Household linens grow more tempting each passing season. The linen closets of the old-fashioned housewives concealed a more valuable amount of double damask, in napkins and tablecloths, but they lacked the joys of this age. There are the lovely embroidered doily sets, runners and cross runners, luncheon square or round table covers to fit the table tops, or the Greek cross sets, to say nothing of the Chinese sets done on grass linen, the peasant sets, the Madeira sets and those of pineapple cloth embroidered daintily by the native Philippines.

The Chinese sets have deep hems with a line embroidered in red instead of the usual hemstitching. Spaced around the broad hem quaint Chinese figures appear. The figures are done in colors and are a charming decoration.

The Philippine sets are embroidered in the white flat work in which they excel. The goods is a deep shade of cream, almost a straw color, so the work shows well on it. This goods retains its cripsness as it stiffens up naturally after each washing.

The peasant linens are usually those of natural shade, some being almost coffee-colored. The embroidery is indicative of the nation that does the work. In the Russian we get some red work. In the Russian we get some red with the cold greens and blues, with a dash of brilliant yellow generally. The other races combine a number of bright colors in their work, but in such a way that they do not jar upon one's finer color sense.

Breakfast linens with solid colored borders are quite popular for use in the breakfast alcove and the colors are chosen to harmonize with the decorations of the room. Tray linens also come with colored borders, the borders being narrower than for table use.

An unusual doily set seen recently was made of white damask in the large flowered design. The flowers were outlined with Mandarin blue floss and the borders were of the same blue linen hemstitched on after the manner of an applied hem.

Earl Receives Gold Badge of Ottawa Branch of G.W.V.A.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—Honored by the War Veterans of Ottawa as a war comrade, the Earl of Craven was last night formally presented with the gold badge of the Ottawa branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, a body which is only presented to great soldiers, statesmen and others deserving high honor. The Countess of Craven was presented with a bouquet of roses.

ECLIPSE FASHIONS

Exclusive Patterns by Hazel Bergen

The Silhouette of Moderate Line

Floral patterns are especially modish in the new printed materials, and the simplicity of this attractive design lends itself to the development of this graceful afternoon frock of interesting cut. The back is straight and slender, while the front displays the jumper effect. There are two rows of fine shirrings at each shoulder, and the right front is cut with a jabot and fastens over the left with large buttons. A group of shirrings at each side of the skirt front contribute extra fulness, and the long full sleeves are shirred to fit the wrists and finished with a narrow cuff. No. 1282 is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Size 36 bust requires 3¾ yards 39-inch, or 3 yards 54-inch material. Price 20 cents.

Every woman's desire is to achieve that smart different appearance which draws favorable comment from the observing public. The designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book are originated in the heart of the style centers and will help you to acquire that much desired air of individuality. Menus for the Family

This is a good dinner to have on an afternoon out. It can be whisked onto the table in no time with one's "best" dress on since the whole meal, with the exception of the salad dressing, can be prepared in the morning.

If young children must be served a soft cooked egg and well cooked, reheated rice is a suggestion in place of the chili con carne. This savory dish so dear to the palates of most grown-ups is too "hot" for tender tummies and must not be given to children under ten years of age.

Chili Con Carne.

One tablespoon bacon fat, 1 pound round steak, 3 cups canned tomatoes, 2 cups cooked kidney beans, 1 large onion, 1 clove garlic, 3 chili peppers, salt.

About 1 cup of dried beans will be needed. Soak over night, parboil in soda water, drain and cook until tender. Drain before adding to meat.

Cut meat in two-inch pieces. Melt bacon fat and brown meat in it. Add onion and garlic finely minced. Reduce heat and cook until onion is a pale straw color. Remove seeds from peppers. Pour over 1 cup of boiling water and let stand ten minutes. Rub through a colander. Add water and pulp to meat with tomatoes and simmer for two hours. Season with salt to taste. From 1 to 2 teaspoonfuls will be needed. Add beans and cook 30 minutes longer.

If the meat and beans are prepared in the morning allow 45 minutes for reheating and cooking beans and meat mixture before serving.

HER OWN WAY

A GIRL of TODAY

THE FIRST STEP.

Two hundred and fifty dollars! I turned the check over and over in my hand, after my father left. It did not seem as though that small bit of white paper, when my father's name was signed to it, could possibly be worth two hundred and fifty dollars.

As soon as possible, I made some excuse to Mother about wanting to do some shopping before I left, and hurried down to the bank. Rather uncertainly, I pushed the paper through the cashier's window. I had never cashed a check for more than ten dollars in my life.

The cashier of my father's bank did not seem to be at all startled at the size of the check, however. He calmly asked:

"How do you want it, Miss Julia?"

"I think I will take two one-hundred bills and the rest in tens," I said, congratulating myself that my voice sounded calm although my heart was pounding away like a trip hammer.

"I expect, Miss Julia," the old cashier said smilingly, "that you are thinking of the new dresses this money will buy," as he passed the bills out to me.

"No," I answered happily. "Dad has given it to me to make a trip to Toronto with."

"That's nice," said Mr. Brown. "Not many fathers would be as generous to a young daughter. He must have great confidence in your ability to take care of yourself and your money in a big city."

I smiled as I thought—if Mr. Brown knew how little confidence Dad had in me—but I answered:

"Well, Dad also thinks that he may be doing something foolish, but he said to me that only by experience would I learn how to shoulder responsibilities."

The cashier looked at me curiously. I knew he was one of my father's oldest friends and was skeptical, perhaps for the first time in his life, of Dad's sanity.

"Well, Julia, it probably will not take you long to spend your money and when you come home I'm afraid you won't tell us all your experiences."

"Perhaps not," I said gaily, as I left window. I had a feeling the cashier's eyes were following me with apprehension.

I had not gotten further than a block from the bank when I came upon Aurelia Winston. She was looking so unhappy and physically ill that I almost cried at sight of her.

To-morrow: Another Case.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a high school girl in my teens, and have gone out with two young men a couple of years my senior. They tell me they love me. One night when one took me out, the other saw me, and now he won't even speak to me.

What would you advise me to do?

G. I.

G. I.: Neither of these young men has the right to be jealous of your friendships, my dear, since you are not engaged to be married. And if you explain this very carefully and tactfully to them you can convince them that you have the privilege of choosing your friends and accepting as many invitations as you please.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

A little over a year ago I was out with a young man who acted ungentlemanly. He apologized and asked me to make up, but I would have nothing to do with him. Every time we meet he touches his cap, but I never recognize him. Since then I have thought it all over and come to the conclusion that it was part my fault that he acted this way.

Now, dear Annie Laurie, would it be right for me to start speaking to him again after such a long time has elapsed, or just what should I do?

Awaiting your answer, and thanking you in advance. FIREFLY.

FIREFLY: If the occurrence took place over a year ago, and he still continues to touch his cap to you, as you say, and you still continue to think about him, you had better make up. Why not speak the next time you meet him, even if he doesn't speak to you first? If this happening is bothering you, you had better get it off your mind at once, and the easiest way is to speak to him when you meet. If you wish your friendship to be resumed, and go half way, he will probably know that you have forgiven him. As the young man apologized, and as you were probably quite right in thinking that it was partly your fault (the girl is hardly ever entirely blameless in such things) he really did the best he could to make amends. Only, if you do make up with him and become friends again, you had better watch both him and yourself. Let your former experience be a lesson to you.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my early teens and go to Collegiate. At Collegiate I often see a boy, or young man, and he goes to the same church and I often see him there. I think I should like him very much, if only I could get to speak to him. Please, Annie Laurie, will you tell me how I could get him to speak. Hoping to see my answer in the paper soon.

ANXIOUS.

ANXIOUS: Probably, if the young man or boy is attracted to you, he will find some opportunity of meeting you. Is it absolutely necessary that you pursue him? There is a time for all things. If you concentrated your attention on your studies, you might be farther ahead and a good deal more attractive to men in a few years that you will be if you allow your attention to be distracted by thoughts of youths who are probably in just as raw a state at present as you are.

LOVE'S SYMBOL — — — By Juanita Hamel

In the olden days, the bracelet was the symbol of slavery. And in these modern times, Beauty, ever in search of something with which to enhance her loveliness, has chosen to deck her arm with the glittering symbol of her conquests. Sometimes you'll see two or three on her arm and you can count the number of her suitors. But watch for the day when there'll be just one braclet—then you'll know that she is Love's slave, and proudly wears the symbol of her slavery that all the world may know and envy her. To her that gleaming band means more than a kingdom; in fact, it is symbolic of her kingdom, where she is both ruler and slave,—slave to the most wonderful Master in the world—LOVE!

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

I'll Say.

Women have only two passions, vanity and love, says a student at the University of Chicago, who recently published as his master's degree thesis a treatise on Lord Chesterfield, the original "flower of chivalry." And—we agree with the gentleman! We could add, however, "And men have the same two!" This is a human description, not a sex one!

Woman is not complimented when one observes that "she looks very well in that dress. Woman demands compliments which assume that her beauty enhances the dress—thus "that dress looks very well on you."

This idea won a co-ed in New York Teachers' College $1000 prize money in an essay contest on "What a Woman Desires in Dress."

Just a Titter!

My Aunt Lizzie says that in spite of all our fussin', men has their place! Us girls gotta have their tobacco for the plant lice and moths, and their razor blades for our corns!

Ma says that her first advice to brides is never to tell him to bring up the canned fruit from the cellar. Ma says she never yet told pa to bring up one of those cans of green gage plums she canned the year before last, but what pa brings up one of them cans of pineapple she's been saving for when there's sickness in the family!

To-day's Verse.

Little hours and moments
Go trooping into years;
Time for a flash of joy, of hope,
A glimmering of tears.

Time for an inarticulate prayer,
Time for a puzzled sigh
And in a mist of dreams called days
Life has passed us by.

Why Success Came.

Anna Case, singer, peddled soap supplies as a girl to pay for her music lessons, helped neighbors with babies and dishes, and drove the family horse on trips between town and depot at fifty cents a passenger. She says that hard work gets a person started, and rest and plenty of it keeps them going after they have arrived.

Galli Curci, singer, says she succeeded because she took stock of her assets, knew that she had a voice as her chief likelihood for fame, then went after it!

Try These on Your Stove.

Oyster Sandwiches: Wash 1 quart oysters, drain, and put through food chopper, heat to boiling point and drain. Add enough cream or rich milk to the oyster liquid to make a pint. Heat in double boiler. Melt 1-2 cup butter, add 1-2 cup flour and when smooth add to liquid and stir until thick. Add 2 egg yolks mixed with 1-4 cup lemon juice, chopped oysters, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper and a few grains cayenne pepper.

Spread between bread cut lengthwise of the loaf and toasted on one side with the untoasted side buttered. Cut the sandwiches in narrow strips and serve hot garnished with water cress or parsley.

Marshmallows dropped in the cup before hot cocoa or chocolate is poured, and a bit of vanilla in the cocoa make its luscious.

The Thing To Do.

In introductions, the younger person is always presented to the older, and a man, unless he is very much older or extremely distinguished, is always presented to the woman. A simple way of remembering is to speak the name first of the party to whom the other party is being introduced.

Thus, "Mrs. Older, Miss Young"; "Mrs. Woman may I present Mr. Man?"

THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeannette Norton

SIMPLE PUDDING RECIPES.

Simple puddings make acceptable desserts Easily made, economical in the materials required, suitable for children as well as grown ups, the puddings are generally favored. Dried fruits, when added, should be carefully picked over for stems or seeds and separated if they stick together.

The recipes given below have been chosen for their nourishing qualities, and will be found easy to make and most delicious. They are wholesome and nourishing and will furnish variety to the daily menu.

Baked Apple Dumplings.

Make a simple pie-crust paste, roll and cut into squares. Have ready six pared, cored, tart apples. Put a small piece of butter in each apple with a little dusting of nutmeg and a teaspoonful of brown sugar. Roll the apples in a little sugar, then place them in the crust, pinch the crust at the top, brush over with a little soft butter and place the dumplings in a buttered pan. Place two tablespoonfuls of water in the pan and bake until the crust is done and the apple tender when pierced with a straw. Serve with a hard sauce.

Banana Pudding.

Make a boiled custard of a pint of milk, the beaten yolks of three eggs and a half cupful of sugar. When cooked, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and cool slightly. Put a layer of sliced, stale cake into a buttered pudding dish, cover with a layer of sliced banana, then pour over some of the custard, then another layer of cake, then banana, then custard. Make the top layer of custard. Cover with paper and bake for half an hour, uncover and brown slightly. Have ready a meringue beaten very stiff with a little powdered sugar and a few drops of vanilla added and spread it on top of the pudding. Return to the oven long enough to cook and lightly brown the meringue.

Peach Batter Pudding.

Drain a can of preserved peaches and cut the fruit in pieces. Make a batter of three beaten eggs, beat the whites and yolks separately and mix them, add a pint of rich milk, beat smooth, then add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, a half teaspoonful of salt, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder and about two cupfuls of the peaches. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake for about an hour in a moderate oven. Serve with a good pudding sauce.

Prune Souffle Pudding.

Soak and stew a pound of medium-sized prunes. When cooked, remove the stones and chop very fine enough of the prunes to make a cupful and a half of pulp. Sprinkle lightly with a tablespoonful of powdered sugar. Beat the whites of four eggs very stiff, fold them into the prune pulp, turn into a very lightly buttered, shallow pudding dish and bake long enough to puff and lightly brown the pudding. Serve with flavored whipped cream, a hard sauce or a good pudding sauce.

INDIAN RIVER.

INDIAN RIVER, Feb. 19.—Mr. William Flemming of Carberry, Man., spent a few days visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong of Indian River.

Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong of Indian River were Sunday visitors with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William McCall of Cavan.

WISE WORDS.

ORANGE LILY

The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin. —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

M. E. E.—You have a good deal of creative power and tenacity, which may have a coarse side if not watched carefully. However, your manifest destiny is to bring laughter and joy to others. Rather a nice one, is it not? You would do well to see that certain traits in your makeup do not serve to circumvent the life planned for you. You are too sensitive. Others do not wish to hurt your feelings or to harm you, and if you strive to overcome a jealous streak in your character, and look for the real good and worth in those about you, you will prosper. You have a fear of burglars and of being alone at night. You are generous and kind-hearted and love your home and its surroundings. Guard against a tendency to hoard money and miserliness. Do not allow disease to make any inroads on your vitality as medicine does not act quickly with you, be careful of your throat and lungs. You have an inclination towards cruelty and vindictiveness and are inclined to be changeable. Learn self-poise, and do not be led away by flattery.

I do not see any strong inclination toward music in your reading. You are intellectual and should make a good speaker. Civic work would suit you admirably.

You were born on Monday. Your colors are blue and cream.

L. W. H.—You are rather a changeable person, with a certain amount of social attractiveness, but no great depth. Although strong both mentally and physically, you are an uncertain element and will have to guard all your life against a fickleness in your own nature which will be hard to eradicate and may give you endless trouble, particularly in your relations with others. You are frank and energetic and are always in a hurry, not liking to await results. You have your own way of doing things, which is apt to confuse those about you, and resent the slower pace of those who cannot keep up with you. You have strong likes and dislikes, and have the faculty of minding your own business. You will live to a good old age and will have success in life if you try to overcome your tendency toward fickleness, refuse to worry and learn to value your own self-respect, that is, if you are worthy of your own self-respect. You cannot fool yourself in this regard. Do not try. Marry a girl born in April, August or November. Envy no man's success. It may be yours, if you try hard enough. Worry, anger and jealousy will haunt your life. Once you control them, you are their master and master of your destiny.

You were born on Friday. Your colors are all shades of pink.

E. K. S. I.—You have a naturally very bright disposition, and like pleasure and good cheer. Singing, dancing and the fine arts appeal to you, and you would also make a good teacher. You have understanding and sympathy with others, and although your success in life may not be of the material order, you should have a well-rounded existence. You are a good friend, kind and loyal and a promise with you is absolutely sacred. You will be most happy when you have gained absolute self poise, for losing your temper makes not only yourself wretched, but everyone else around you. Avoid scolders and fault-finders, who depress you. Follow out your own original ideas in things—make self-reliance your watchword and see that you are well prepared for your work. Failure will not come to you if you follow this course. Be careful of falls and accidents to the legs, hip and feet, also be careful of the stomach and intestines. Dress warmly in the winter season. Study the art of personal attractiveness, and pay more attention to the arrangement of your hair. Always dress as well as possible. Marry young and choose a mate born in May, July, February or November. Remember that there is something higher than the intellect. You were born on Saturday. The day you ask about, a Tuesday, is one on which to lend a helping hand to those around you and obey carefully the instructions of superiors. Black is your color.

G. M. J.—Although you are very young, you may as well realize your manifest destiny, which is one of domesticity. You belong to the class which is styled the parents of the races, and should marry while young. Choose your mate in one born in March, May or August. A quality of uncertainty in your nature will mar your life unless you strive to overcome it. You should be a good scholar and musician and would make a good eacher. You are fond of good clothes and like to have the latest thing in fashionable attire. You have many good qualities but are inclined to be selfish and critical and to "pick people to pieces," a most unlikeable habit. You are fond of travel and change of scene will be beneficial to you. Marry a bright, cheery man, who has not the habit of fault-finding. You will live to a good old age, and will grow old gracefully, if you watch a certain intemperance in eating and drinking. You must cultivate individuality, self-reliance and avoid criticism. You will spend some of your later years in travelling.

You were born on Friday. Your colors are scarlet and gray.

E. C. M.—You should be a very likeable person, if you have not allowed certain small faults to grow into your life. You are naturally of a very fine temperament, with creative and emotional ability and well equipped to cope with the circumstances of daily life. You will find your highest measure of happiness in bringing joy to others and in this way, securing it for yourself. You are kind-hearted and generous, when you do not allow a cetain quality of selfishness to obscure this warmth of heart. You are also at to criticize. You do not realize this yourself, perhaps, and would be the first to deny indignantly that you see any fault in your fellow-creatures. Without it is always the other person who is doing the criticizing, but if you will watch your conversation and thoughts closely, you will find just how much petty fault-finding creeps into your estimation of others—and spoils friendships for you. You have a connenial disposition out side of this element which may be cured if you watch for it. A fiery temper is also indicated in your reading. Learn the value of silence and of good books. You were born on Thursday. Your colors are red and brown.

RIOT LONG PLANNED.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—The Daily Mail's Shanghai correspondent says the riot at the French municpal jail on Thursday, in which five Chinese prisoners were killed, and eleven wounded, during an attempt of 10 Omen to escape from jail, was the culmination of two years of plotting.

The leaders in the attempted jail delivery, after having filed off their shackles, opened the doors of forty cells with a master key and the prisoners overpowered the warden.

After the riot had been suppressed four convicts hanged themselves.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"What shall we do now, Hickydoo?" asked Nancy. "Blue Whiskers stole our automobile."

The square wooden man stopped digging in his garden and thought for a minute.

"Please press my second button," he said slowly. "I'll have to look in my index again."

"Look for the bundle of pink papers at the back," said Hickydoo next.

So Nick got the bundle of pink papers, and then Hickydoo said, "Look among the 'A's.' See what it says about stolen automobiles."

So Nick found "A's" and the place where it said, "All about stolen automobiles."

Hickydoo nodded. "That's right," he said. "My index tells everything. Read what it says."

So Nick read "The first thing to do when anyone steals your automobile is to try to get it back."

"Very good advice," nodded June the kangaroo. "If anyone stole my tail, I should try to get it back, I'm sure. And it's much the same thing."

Nick went on, "The best time to get it back is at once, if not sooner. The sooner, the quicker."

"Very true," nodded Jupe, "although it would mean about the same thing to say, "The quicker the sooner.'"

"Will you please put the paper back in its place and shut the drawer?" next remarked Hickydoo. "I don't want my index to get out of order. I am very careful of my diet."

"What do you eat?" asked Nancy, surprised that a wooden man should eat anything at all.

"Facts!" said Hickydoo. "I eat solid facts and solid facts only. That's what I am raising now in my garden—solid facts to eat, facts about the earth, facts about the stars, facts about coal, facts about farming, facts about people, facts about automobiles, facts about fairies—"

"There!" said Jupe. "There are facts about fairies aren't there? I knew it."

"Well, I should say so. I'm a fairy myself," said Hickydoo in a surprised voice. "Not a beautiful fairy with wings, who lives in a rosebud, no sir, but a real honest-to-goodness fairy who knows magic. Anyone who knows magic is a fairy. If you just press my fifth button and take out the bundle of green papers and look for the 'F's' you'll find out all about fairies and wizards and magicians and sorcerers and—"

"I'm afraid we haven't time," said Nancy anxiously. "We'll have to go after Blue Whiskers right away and see if we can get him to give us the Blue Cherry he stole off the cherry tree."

Suddenly Nick thought of something terrible. "What if he's eaten it?" he cried.

"I'll bet you he has," squeaked Paddyfoot, the mouse, sticking his head out of Jupe's pocket. "He's very fond of cherries, I happen to know. You see I was his prime minister for years 'n years before he turned me into a mouse. He loves cherries.

"There is only one reason why he wouldn't eat it," went on Paddyfoot. "Much as he loves cherries, he likes cherry jam better. He may have taken it to the cook."

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Are you giving your teeth the care they should have? No greater error can be imagined than neglect of the mouth, gums and teeth.

It may well be that the dangers of abscessed teeth are far less than they are pictured. However, if they are only one-tenth as bad, they are bad enough to demand attention. I have seen many cases of serious disease which could be traced to bad teeth and gums.

Really, it is a wonder we do not have more trouble with the teeth than we actually do have. It is bad enough as it is, but it wouldn't be surprising if it were a dozen times worse.

Have you ever thought of what people put in the mouth? Infected food, tooth-picks, matches, whittled sticks, knife blades, pins, pencils, rulers, paper cutters, pen holders, keys, money —these are a few of the things to go into the mouth. Then on top of the rest and worse than all combined, are the dirty fingers, steeped in germs and other infecting agents.

It is amazing that any mouth escapes contamination. The danger of infected gums is never far away.

America leads the world in attention to the teeth. In some countries even the young faces are marred by the possession of decayed or lost teeth. In North America almost every school house is a place where dental hygiene is taught.

No mother is doing her full duty by her child unless she watches the tiny pearly teeth and, on the slightest sign of stain or decay, rushes the youngster to the dentist. Just because they are baby teeth is no reason for neglecting them. Serious decay in their first teeth will be transmitted to the permanent teeth...

Such neglect means that when the real teeth come they are not strong and healthy to begin with, but are already started on their way to decay. This is the reason why so many young children have frightful teeth.

Everybody should go to the dentist at least once every six months. It pays in dollars and cents to go often. If you put it off a year or two the dentist will find a lot of work which must be done at great expense.

The teeth must be kept clean by morning and night brushing. No matter how faithful this toilet exercise is performed, there will be lime and tartar for the dentist to remove on your periodical visits.

The teeth must be freed of these accumulations or else the gums are pushed away and even irritated by the masses which act like foreign bodies. In the spaces and sacs which are created, the secretions of the mouth ferment. Here the germs of pus production are sure to thrive.

When once the gums become pussy and the roots of the teeth are abscessed, a condition is created which makes for bad health. Neuritis, neuralgia, rheumatism, heart disease, kidney disease, ulcer of the stomach—these are among the serious ailments which may result.

It pays to care for the teeth. You will stay young longer and prolong your life materially by such care.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

M. H. M. Q.—What can I do to reduce a double chin?

2—What will banish freckles?

A.—Massage might help, also reducing generally. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2—Equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide will act as a bleach for freckles. Use a good cold cream after applying the preparation, since it may prove drying to the skin.

H. W. Q—How can I reduce?

A.—By eliminating from your diet as far as possible, sugars, starches and fats. Eat plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables. Exercise daily in the open air.

Nervousness, Dizzy Spells and Heart Trouble Relieved

Mrs. S. Wilderman Used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Ontario Lady Has Had No Return of Her Troubles Since Taking Dodd's Kidney Pills Four Years Ago.

Newmarket, Ont., Feb. 19. — (Special). — Once again Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved their inestimable value in the case of Mrs. S. Widerman, a well-known resident of this place. She writes: "My back would pain me so at times I could hardly straighten myself. When I used to stoop down I would get dizzy spells. My husband told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used four boxes and can say I have not been troubled since with either of the things I have mentioned, and that is over four years ago. I work every day."

That Mrs. Widerman's trouble came from the kidneys is evidenced by the relief she got from Dodd's Kidney Pills. When the kidneys become clogged or out of order, the circulation becomes sluggish, the impurities are not strained out of the blood and the result is weariness and lack of energy all over the body.

YOU BETCHA!

Howdy, friends! I'm just a kid and, say, I'm sittiin' pretty. Feelin' like I must get rid of just a happy ditty. Time, of course, just like it should, will soon make me a man. Then this song won't be so good—I'll sing it while I can.

Fella doesn't get a chance to be young, only once. Now's my time to live and dance and do my crazy stunts. Maybe wrong, and maybe right, the pranks I'm pullin' now. Still I'll learn by day an' night jest which is which, somehow.

Full o' pep and full o' vim, an' always set to go. Bein' just a kid in trim is thrillin', don'tcha know. Exercise galore fer me, like other kids have had. I kin stan' much more, ya see, than anybody's dad.

Make the best of youth, I'm told, an' let yer vigor rip. After while yer gittin' old an' pep is gonna slip. Betcher boots ambition hums. Betcher life I thrill. I'll be set when old age comes. Betcher life I will.

WHERE WOMEN DWELL ON THE HOUSETOPS.

In Hammamet, on the Barbary coast, women are still a veiled mystery, hidden from the eyes of men and guarded in a sacred secrecy. Their faces are unknown throughout their lives save to the men of their immediate family. And even the men of their families may see them only on certain occasions.

Even though enfolded in close draperies, women are rarely seen on the streets of the town. They live, for the most part, on the housetops. There, like prisoners, they perform the tasks of the household, bake their bread, wash and dry their clothes, and meet to gossip when the heat of the day is passing into dusk.

They have a strange, secret code by which they can communicate with each other, these women of the housetops, by a slightest sign they pass along the news of the day. They tell of the births, of the deaths, of the marriages. Those are the only things that really matter to them. For they have no interest outside of their homes. The news of the outside world has no effect upon them. They cannot even know of it, for they neither read nor write.

The man of the house may not intrude upon this sacred domain of his roof. Only when he is called upon to come up and perform some necessary task, is his presence permitted. And then he must be careful that his glance does not stray, that he does not appear to gape and stare and examine. He is a guest and must behave like one.

On her roof, and there only, may the woman of Hammamet go unveiled. When she must venture abroad upon the streets, she is draped from head to toe. Only one eye is visible, that she may guide her footsteps. When she goes to and from the baths, her husband follows her at a distance of thirty or forty feet, and that is perhaps the only thing that takes her out of her house.

On the Roof They Are Free.

Before a wedding may be performed in Hammamet, the tambours must be beaten for five days and five nights. For years, since she was big enough to hold a needle in her tiny fingers, the bride has been preparing for the event. She has been making embroidered skirts, velvet gowns, head-dresses, scarfs and the wedding gown, embroidered in sheets of gold. She has a collection of perfume and jewelry, heavy chains and bracelets.

For the five days when the tambours throb, the bride is being prepared for the ceremony. Her hair is hennaed each day. Her face is elaborately decorated with kohl, so that it seems a mask rather than a human face. Her feet and hands are decorated with a red-brown paste. When she is all ready, she is placed on exhibition for the female half of the population.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

PEGGY MEETS A QUEER LITTLE FELLOW.

Late one evening as Peggy was hurrying home something stirred in the grasses at her feet. Peggy ran over to the side of the road. Out jumped a creature and hurried away down the road.

"Don't fly away little bird, I'm not going to harm you. "Peggy cried.

"You see, Jabby Jerboa doesn't know that, or he'd stay and get acquainted," laughed a voice. A merry little elfin peeked from behind the bushes at Peggy.

"Why, Happy Giggles!" Peggy exclaimed. "What kind of a bird did you say that was?"

"Bird!" laughed Happy Giggles merrily. "I'm sure Jabby Jerboa will have a good laugh when he hears you calling him a bird. Haven't you met him yet?" Peggy shook her head. Happy Giggles caught hold of Peggy's hand and away they ran until they found Jabby Jerboa sitting on a twig swinging in the evening breeze.

"Hello, there, Jabby Jerboa, meet Peggy Brown," laughed Happy Giggles. "She thought you were a bird."

"Well, you're not the only one that has made that mistake," laughed the little creature. "Until after they see me. Take a good look. I don't mind it at all," he chuckled.

He was the cutest little brown

"He Jumps Like a Kangaroo."

mousie Peggy had ever seen. Just about three inches long with great long hind legs and a terribly long tail. His nose was long and pointed, his ears quite large and two great big black eyes sparkled with merriment.

"You certainly are a pretty little fellow," agreed Peggy. "I should say you belong to the Mouse family instead of the bird family."

"I sure do," chuckled Jabby Jerboa. "Come on over and meet my mate." He led Happy Giggles and Peggy over to a hole in the ground almost hidden by the tangled weeds. They ran down a small tunnel about twelve inches long to a lovely comfy room. Here on a bed of grasses, wool and feathers sat Mama Jerboa and her four little squeaking babies.

"Jabby Jerboa flew so far when I startled him I thought he was a bird," laughed Peggy. "But how can you folks fly? You have no wings."

"No my dear, we can't fly," laughed Mama Jerboa. "We simply jump into the air by the use of these long hind legs of ours. You should see me out hunting food with the youngsters all clinging to me, then you'd think we were a funny set. If you'll notice Jabby Jerboa when he jumps, he springs into the air like a kangaroo."

"Yes, and for my size I can jump just about as far as he can," chuckled Jabby Jerboa. "The reason you have never seen me before is, I very seldom come out until it's dark."

"Goodness, that reminds me, it's getting dark now," and bidding her new friends good-by, Peggy and Happy Giggles hurried home as fast as they could go.

ROSENEATH NEWS

ROSENEATH, Feb. 17.—Mrs. Sarah Robins has been quite ill for the past few days.

Mr. Joseph Down has sold his large brick residence to Mr. Robert Mouncey.

Mr. Charles Grigg was in Keene on Monday evening.

Mr. Charles Grigg was in Keene on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. James Morrow, of New Liskeard, are visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. Sarah Robins.

Mrs. S. Herrington, also Mrs. Milton McMillan and Mrs. Lavigne, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas of Peterborough.

Born.—To Rev. and Mrs. Lovelace, on February 10, 1926, a daughter.

A few from here attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Roddy of Burnley on Saturday morning. Interment took place at Warkworth Roman Catholic cemetery.

The Woman's Institute meeting was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. Halstead with about thirty members present. The programme was very interesting and beneficial. A committee was formed to arrange for a social to be held on March 17. Luncheon was served by the hostess, after which Mr. E. Brisbin conveyed a sleighload of ladies to their homes in the village and added more pleasure to the afternoon's outing.

A change has been made in real estate when Mr. Robt. Mouncey purchased the residence from the Downs' Bros. Mr. Joe Downs purchased a lot from Mr. E. Brisbin and expects to build in the spring.

The shower and dance on Tuesday night at the home of R. Thompson in honor of James Thompson and bride was largely attended. The young couple received many useful and beautiful presents, which showed the goodwill of their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. McAitken and little daughter who has been visiting her father, Mr. Alfred Sherwin, and other relatives, left on Thursday for their home in Mantario, Sask.

Mr. Richard Brock, Windsor, is in our midst renewing old acquaintances.

Mrs. M. McMillan and daughter are visiting relatives in Peterborough.

Mrs. George A. Dawe is spending a few days with friends in Warkworth.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY FEBRUARY 21 22.

Sunday's astrological forecast shows some benefic activities, especially in spiritual and professional directions, but is otherwise discouraging. There is some threat of an unwelcome upheaval and of domestic in harmony.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of activity, but attended by extravagances and disagreeable situations caused by indulgence in irascible conduct. A child born on this day may be self-indulgent, extravagant and wasteful.

Monday's horoscope points to active and interesting development in business and in employment, although all may be jeopardized by indulgence in fits of bad temper and other expressions of self-indulgence. Beware of duplicity in new projects, but renewal of contracts may be favorable.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of active developments and new agreements, especially as relates to employment, but they should be careful in the matter of strife and contention. A child born on this day should be talented and clever, but may defeat itself by ill temper and self-indulgence.

ROBBER MISSED $300.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., Feb. 20. — (Canadian Press.) — Walking into the P. Burns and Company store at Sapperton, at 9 a.m. Friday, as though he were a customer, a man suddenly produced a revolver and ordered W. Writt, the manager, and Miss D. Rose, cashier, to hold up their hands.

Keeping them both covered with his revolver he secured $50 from Writt, then departed quietly. He overlooked $300 Miss Rose had just placed in the cash register.

MOTOR ICE CUTTER SAVES TIME AND ELIMINATES MUCH WASTE IN STORING SUMMER COOLNESS

IS MUCH FASTER.

Nearly Perfect Cubes Cause Less Waste and Are More Easily Stored.

Anyone who doubts that this is the machine age should take a trip to Little Lake and view the ice-cutting operations which occupy the attention of a large gang of men.

Fifty-one men and twenty-three horses are required to haul and store the ice but by one circular saw, a saw which has cut 6,000 cakes of ice in one day and does easily in five hours, the work which formerly kept two teams of horses busy for as many days. The day of the slow laborious ice plow is gone. J. F. Allin has no desire to use one again and says that there never was anything like his little Ford-driven ice cutter for getting work done.

Simple Arrangement

The saw in itself is a comparatively simple arrangement and is called the Stanley ice cutter. A Ford engine is mounted on a swing chassis pivotted on runners. A shortened drive shaft housing connects the differential to the engine and the saw is attached like a single wheel to one axle. A lever controls the elevation of the rear end and as the cut is being made two men, walking backward haul the contrivance as it cuts its way through the ice. When the first cut is being made a guide line is struck and after that a 'follower' —two thin iron runners on an extended arm,—travels along the first cut in the ice. In this manner the lines are kept quite straight.

When a number of cuts have been made in one direction, the machine is then operated to cut at right angles, forming a checker-board patter of cuts when the alloted section is completed. As the saw does not penetrate more than two-thirds of the distance through the ice, horses and men can work on the checkered pattern in safety.

In some cases hand saws are used to cut the strips into long sections but sharp flat-tooted pries are faster and more effective. In separating a strip from the main body of ice the pry is forced into the crack at various points, then it is forced forward, widening the cut. As the space fills with water, the strip is allowed to spring back and the presence of the water forces the underneath uncut portion of the ice to break away.

Sharp-pronged peavies then are used to bring the strips to the open sluiceway, where another man armed with a pry breaks the strips into blocks. At the end of the sluice there is a raised platform, where a horse hauls the blocks up an inclined plane and on the waiting sleigh. Usually twenty-one blocks are carried as one load.

At the shed another group of men and a team of horses are used at a similar platform and the ice blocks are stored in layers on blankets of sawdust.

Waste Eliminated.

Mr. Allin declared that the ice was cut in almost perfect cubes by the new method, and as a result much waste would be eliminated He intends storing more ice this year than ever before, and in addition to securing his own supply, he has prepared thousands of blocks for dairymen and farmers, many of whom come from a radius of several miles around the city.

Mr. Allin has not only solved his ice harvest problem, but he has done much to relieve unemployment. He intimated that his weekly pay roll amounted to nearly $900. The operating cost of the machine cutter is a slight consideration entailing the purchase of seven gallons of gasoline, one quart of oil, and the wages for two men each day.

The ice plow, formerly used, consisted of a straight beam from which six curved blades depended. Each blade slightly longer than the one in front, so that a deeper impression is made by passing of each tooth. A team of horses was required to haul this instrument across the ice making a deeper impression in the cut with each trip.

Mr. Allin is converted to the machine method. None other would satisfy him now, for he is gathering a bigger crop in far less time than he has ever taken before.

The Ice Association

We use for our summer delivery three 2-horse wagons and three 1-horse wagons, Mr. Allin said.

There are a few firms delivering by motor cars, but they have not proven a success in this line of business owing pricipally to the number of stops.

The Ontario Ice Association was formed about five years ago, Mr. Allin being elected to the first board of directors. It was formed principally to place the ice business on a level to where it belongs. After several meetings were held, a code of ethics was adopted and subscribed to by the members, one clause stipulating that a member should not use unfair methods to the disadvantage of the other, and that every customer should be fairly dealt with. It is not necessary to dwell at any great length on the latter part of the above clause as the City of Peterborough is enjoying a good service at a price below any other city in Ontario.

At the conventions, the subject of selling ice by ticket or a monthly rate has often been discussed. For my part, said Mr. Allin, I prefer the monthly system, as men delivering ice in hot weather are too busy to attend to any office work on their routes.

Another clause reads: "That in case of disaster or emergency to avoid a shortage in the vicinity, the member nearest, who has a stock to spare is expected to supply the unfortunate member at a reasonable cost."

In a word, the aim and attitude of the ice dealer toward all should be regulated by that supreme principle of moral conduct enunciated in the "Golden Rule": "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."

These and several other clauses of the code have aptly justfied the formation of the Ontario Ice Association.

MR. JOLICOEUR TELLS HIS EXPERIENCE

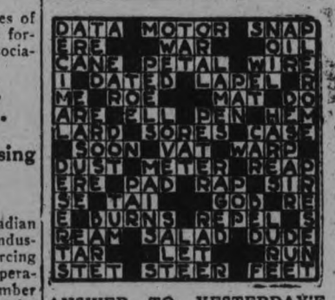
MR. JOLICOEUR

For years, Mr. Jolicoeur suffered with kidney trouble, headaches, backache, and the heavy, miserable feeling which usually accompanies any weakness or irritation in the kidneys. He tried "Fruit-a-tives", and, in telling the result, his letter says, "After having followed the "Fruit-a-tives" treatment, I have gained thirty-three pounds and I have been well ever since. I am pleased to recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to all those who suffer from Kidney Disease." J. M. Jolicoeur, 318 2nd Ave., Quebec.

"Fruit-a-tives" is one of the wonder discoveries of modern medicine. Made from fresh, ripe oranges, apples, figs and prunes, it acts directly on the kidneys as well as on the liver, bowels and skin. It can be depended upon to relieve kidney trouble and pain in the back. Sold everywhere, 25c. and 50c. a box.



ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'E CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Calomel Acts Upon the Liver

Takes away all previous days waste

To feel your best day in and out, to eat well, work well, sleep well, digest well, you must keep your liver active or the system will immediately become filled with poison causing a multitude of troubles as indigestion, headaches, gas on stomach, constipation, kidney pains, foul breath, biliousness, rheumatism, etc. One Tanol Calomel tablet taken before meals or two at bedtime, then the next morning jump from your bed, take a glass of water, and away goes all the previous days wastes and poisons. Be sure you get Tamol Calomel as it is much better than ordinary calomel; no salts or seidlitz are needed to remove from system. Get a few from F. C. Webber, druggist, Charlotte St., Peterborough, and you will be surprised how effective they are.

MARSHALS RAID RELIGIOUS SECT

Homes of Strange Negro Cult Raided By U. S. Officials.

MANY ARRESTS.

ATLANTC CITY, N.J., Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—Described as the "most diabolical plot" disclosed by the Department of Justice, raids and arrests at three "homes" of the "Live and Never Die" negro religious sect in Absecon were conducted by deputy marshals and Department of Justice officers yesterday.

Those arrested include seven "elders" and "sisters" of the cult and six young women whom the agents charge were victims of E. W. Robertson, "Messiah" and who had become mothers.

PATRONAGE SMALL ON MARKET TO-DAY

Produce Scarce On Both the Open and Inside Sections.

The farmers' market had a very small patronage on the open section this morning. There were only a few carts at the curb, and these were filled with pork and beef carcases at prevailing prices and a few vegetables. Honey sold for 10 and 14 cents a pound in mixed and clover quality. Potatoes were $3 a bag and Peewaukee apples 25 cents a peck. The fish man had salmon trout at 18 cents a pound, herrings at 10 cents, trout at 20 cents, and whitefish at 17 cents a pound.

In the basket section, eggs and butter were scarce, the former priced at 40 to 42 cents a dozen, the latter at 45 to 50 cents a pound.

In the lower entry a tiny boy embraced a fat collie puppie, and kissed him an affectionate farewell as his maternal parent dragged him away from the small, blue-eyed doggie.

WATERWORKS ANNUAL REPORT.

The following report was presented to the Peterborough Utilities Commission on Friday by Ross I. Dobbin, Superintendent.—

I beg to report herewith on the activities of the Waterworks Department for the year ending December 31st, 1925.

Distribution System.

The principal item of construction was the completion of the large Force Main down to Weller Street and Monaghan Road. The laying of 1500 feet of 14-inch main filled in the missing links and we now have one large main from the Pump House to Wolfe Street and Monaghan Road.

With the exception of the Force Main, extensions to mains were not many, there being only 2300 feet of 4, 5 and 6-inch pipe laid.

72 New Services were laid which is a smaller number than last year. On account of proposed paving on Stewart St., Rubidge and Reid Sts., north of Charlotte Street, all the old services were relaid and several new valves set.

No services were frozen, probably because the winter was not a severe one. However, work done previously in lowering services that had been frozen, has had results.

We had the usual troubles with fire hydrants most of which was due to careless use by others than our own employees. This is a dangerous practice, one that seems hard to eliminate.

43 New Water Meters were installed, these were mostly small size meters and were principally set in garages and apartments.

On account of the proposed paving many concrete valve chambers were constructed and some new valves set.

Main Pumping Station.

All the Pumps were painted and overhauled, and all valves packed and oiled.

The Steam Plant was used to pump all the water for the City on one occasion for 8 hours, when the turbines were completely frozen up, and on 5 other occasions was held in readiness to supply fire pressure when the gates controlling the turbines were frozen up.

On account of the completion of the large Force Main to the West End, pressures in the centre of the City were considerably increased, with the result that at the Pump House, the pressure carried at ordinary times was reduced by 15 pounds.

Should we experience a dry summer in 1926, the residents all over the City will get much better service.

Pumpage.

The total pumpage for the year was 942,million gallons, and we again report a decrease. Since 1920 there has been a continual drop and the total decrease has been over 20%.

The maximum rate of demand was a million gallons per day on August 31st, when also occurred the maximum days pumpage, 3,640,000 gallons.

Filtration Plant.

The operation of the Plant has gone on smoothly and it is continuing to deliver an adequate supply of pure and wholesome water. The amount of alum used was lower than in other years and no major troubles were experienced.

MORE SECESSIONS FROM PARTY RANKS

Hilton Young Has Left Liberals, and Others Are Leaving.

LONDON, Feb. 20.— (Canadian Press.)—Mosfortune continues to dog the Liberal party, with further secessions of prominent figures announced or reported. Commander Hilton Young, owing to Lloyd George's land policy, has broken loose from the party and henceforth will sit in Parliament as an Independent member. He has been the leader of the rich wing Liberals, and although he does not intend to join the Conservatives, his loss to the party is serious.

The Liverpool Daily Courier says five other Liberals who have figured prominently in the party have signified their desire to join the Conservatives. They are Sir Max Muspratt, Lady Muspratt, Mrs. F. C. Wilson, J. M. Griffiths and Edward West, all members of the Liverpool City Council.

Reports Of Small Supply Cause Upturns In Wheat

CHICAGO, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—With reports at hand stressing the indications that the world supplies of wheat at the end of the present season will be decidedly small and that the acreage for the 1926 crop will be somewhat less than last year, wheat prices averaged higher here to-day in the early dealings. The opening, unchanged to 1-8c off, May 167 to 167¼ and July 148¾, was followed by material upturns all around, but then by numerous irregular changes, with May displaying noticeable relative strength.

Main Tendency Upward In Uneven Market To-day

NEW YORK, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—Uneven price movements again characterized to-day's Stock Market, but the main tendency appeared to be upward. Selling continued largely in the hands of professional traders, with many of the day's fluctuations reflecting the usual pre-holiday readjustment of speculative accounts. The bear traders in seeking out new weak spots forced recessions of one to three points in the number of food, equipment, amusement, chemical and merchandizing shares. Heavy accumulation of a select list of low and medium-priced rails also had a steadying influence.

Trade Volume Was Low With Most Issues Firm

TORONTO, Feb. 20. Canadian Press. — Few substantial changes took place on the Standard Mining Exchange and trading was again low er in volume. The market was generally firm but a great number of issues closed unchanged from yesterday. Outstanding for strength was Mining Corporation, up 19 at 438, and Tough Oakes up 5 at 60, was an active and strong spot, as was Barry Hollinger, up 2¼ at 46. Dome eased 14 at 19.35; McIntyre firmed 20 at 27.45 and Teck Hughes closed a point higher at 369.

TORONTO, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—To-day's fairly quiet session of Toronto Stock Exchange was marked by moderately heavy turnovers in Brazilian and British Columbia Fishing and Canada Steamships Preferred. While Smelters and Twin City were actively dealt in. Steamships Preferred was the feature, advancing four points at 65 1-2. British Columbia Fishing gained 1 1-8 at 64 1-8 and Brazilian an eighth at 96 3-4, after touching 97 1-4 during the session. Twin City gained one at 76. Others were not so firm. Smelters easing two at 243 and Abitibi down 1 1-4 at 81 3-4. Davies lost 5-8 at 34 3-8 and Brompton a quarter at 34 1-2. Imperial Oil active leader in unlisteds firmed 3-8 to 36.

RINK RATS WIN FIRST OF SERIES

RETURN WEDNESDAY.

The Rink Rats, winners of the City series of the Peterborough Midget League, defeated the M.M.M. team of Lakefield, which had been granted a bye in the competition, by nine goals to one here this afternoon. The M.M.M. team consisted of much smaller boys than the winners, and put up a game battle against odds. The goalkeeper, Stuart, was the star of the team, turning aside shot after shot like a veteran. The second game of the series, which is for the Mayor Holloway trophy, will be played in Lakefield on Wednesday night. The teams:

M.M.M.— Goal, Stuart; defence, Northey and T. Leonard; Centre, Jewell; Wings, J. Leonard and Kemp; Subs, Wanamaker and Dever

Rink Rats.—Goal, N. Calladine; Defence, Playford and Starr; Centre, Ellis; Wings, Milliken and McMahon; Subs, Merritt and Leonard.

Referee—Joe Huard.

A Boon to Mothers

Mothers everywhere who realize the danger to delicate little stomachs of too much dosing appreciate the value of Vicks in treating croup and children's colds.

With Vicks there is nothing to swallow—you just rub it on. The body heat releases the ingredients—Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme, Turpentine—in the form of vapors which carry the medication directly to the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster.

Colds go overnight, croup is generally relieved within 15 minutes.

TROOPS FOR GUARD.

Agreement Does Not Give Control of Bagdad Line To Turks.

PARIS, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press)—The Franco-Turkish treaty signed at Angora is reciprocal a agreement relating to the use of the Bagdad railway for the transportation of troops and supplies, requiring the stationing of guards along the line to maintain order, it was said today at the Foreign Office.

Only about thirty miles of this line is inside Syrian territory and under French control. All the rest, about 300 miles, is in Turkish territory, just along the boundary.

The understanding is that the troops carried shall be for guard and police duty only, the whole arrangement to be under the supervision of the League of Nations.

The interpretation given to the treaty by British newspapers, that it is an agreement by France to hand over control of the railway to the Turks, is said to be erroneous.

Vast Expansion and Advanced Equipment make New Prices Possible

The history of Dodge Brothers and their subsidiaries' drastic price reductions is simple and brief.

A better and better product followed by greater and greater demand.

To meet that demand, an expansion of buildings and equipment involving an expenditure of more than $10,000,000.

Output vastly increased, with subsequent reduction in the cost of materials and production.

Installation of advanced labor-saving and quality-increasing equipment. For instance, one giant steel-body press costing $10,000 replaces ten former presses costing $7,500 each, and does the work more efficiently.

Result: The finest line of vehicles in Dodge Brothers history at prices that seem incredible in view of Dodge Brothers traditional quality—

That seem more incredible still when considered in connection with improvements that include—

Rich and attractive colors.
Smart and stylish body lines.
Four dependable cylinders.
Absolute smoothness of engine operation.
Greater power, snap and elasticity.

And advanced steel body and windshield construction that afford exceptional driving vision at a time when clear vision and safety are paramount in the mind of every motorist.

BLOOPING REGENERATIVE SETS SPOILED INTERNATIONAL TESTS

Some Fans Get Amusement By Reckless Dial Spinning.

SET OSCILLATES.

Whistles and Squeals Can Be Distributed For 1,000 Miles.

The hour was that which occurs in every 24 known as 10 to 11 p.m. Central time. The day was the 26th of January —this year. Somewhere out in the darkness to the Eastward a score of European stations were shattering distance and atomic quiet with all the power available from great dynamos and acres of storage batteries, in the hope that some small part of their great power might reach American shores in the form of enjoyable entertainment. The tubes of three carefully adjusted super-heterodynes glowed dimly in the quiet of the laboratory. Each was attached to an antenna and the dials went relentlessly back and forth in patient search of fragments of the music and speech speeding Westward.

"Whistle, whistle, crash, bloop, bang and a coupla bongs," answered the shorter but fatter special with the resistance coupled intermediates.

The third, not to be outdone, retaliated with a siren whistle that started high, went down to a grumble and again soared to a piercing screech. Suddenly the big special landed on an orchestra. For a moment the melody poured forth, clear and pure with but a slight background of the ever-present static. Then it died, with the grumble of a nearby blooper as its swan song. The search went on. At 200 meters, at 350, at 425, at 500, always the chorus of whistles, bloops, grumbles and clicks. Occasionally, the hum of vibrator or violet ray machine varied the monotony. One more snatch of music, one announcement was all the reward for the hours of building, the hours of search. Reports that trickled in during the rest of the week indicated that such was the result of the International tests for about 2,000,000 other set owners.

Who Is to Blame?

Many were the invectives used to comment on the condition of the atmosphere. New words were coined to properly express disappointment and chagrin. The older words were run to death. All of which has lead to much speculation and argument on one technical staff as to who is to blame. Let's first take the stations. Surely, no one can logically lay the finger of blame on them; the Americans were quiet at the times requested, the Europeans and South Americans were on their waves and not heterodyning. Second, there are the makers of sets. You cannot blame them. The radio public wants range, coast to coast reception and dance volume on everything from KFI to WEAF. To even approach such needs, regeneration must be possible on from one to three tubes. You people wanted it, you got it.

A recent survey made by the Department of Marine and Fisheries of Canada relative to radio broadcast conditions in the more populated centers in the Dominion indicates that approximately fifty per cent of the "preventable interference" which prevails is caused through the incorrect operation of regenerative receiving sets by the broadcast listeners themselves. An article prepared by Mr. Andrew J. Allen, secretary of the National Broadcast Listeners' league, states that the most difficult sources of interference to overcome, and which create as much annoying and widespread interference to radio reception in all cities at this time as any other cause, are the squeals, whines, whistles, squawks and howls of the radiating receivers.

"If the broadcast listeners would take effective steps to put a stop to the squealing of regenerative sets, probably 25 per cent of radio interference would be removed in many localities," says the Interference Co-ordination committee's report of the National Electric Light association. On this subject, Radio Guide states, "Apparently every one co-operates except the radio listeners themselves, just the people one would think would try the hardest to behave. Regenerative sets still hold all records for interference and practically every magazine and newspaper in the country has run articles warning about such outfits. Radio etiquette among broadcast listeners calls for the elimination of such interference. If each listener would remember that every time his set whistles coincidental with his tuning o it, he is sending out that same whistle to annoy all other listeners for a considerable area, it is believed that much of the trouble would soon be eliminated."

So there you are; no matter what agency investigates the complaints of the radio public as to squeals and howls during International Test week, or any other time, the blame comes right back to the aforementioned radio public's own door. Part of this interference is due to ignorance; much of it is wilful and in disregard of the rights of others. Do you know what causes squeals? Do you know what regeneration is? If you do not, and you'd like to, so you can do your bit toward making the world safe for a self-respecting radio set to operate in, then read on.

Principle of Regeneration.

The principle of regeneration, as used in radio receiving sets, is that part of the output of the detector, or a radio frequency amplifier, tube which feeds back into its own input and thus greatly increases the volume of the signal. The electric waves reaching the receiving set from the transmitting (broadcasting) station travel down the aerial and its lead-in, through the first coil in the set and so to earth through the ground wire. The energy set up in this first coil is transferred, either directly or by induction, into the grid of the first tube and influences it in such a way as to set it functioning.

The resulting output from the plate circuit of this tube is fed back in such a manner as to set up a "field" or influence, in the part of the circuit connected, as mentioned above, to the input or grid of the tube. This "field" induces in the input circuit a current of electricity of the same frequency as that of the received electric waves. The energy, therefore, which comes down the antenna wire is automatically strengthened by impulses from the output of the tube.

Unless properly controlled, this action will continue to build up until the saturation point or climax is reached, the tube being then said to be in a state of oscillation. When a receiving set is in oscillation, it causes howling and squealing in your own and your neighbor's receiving sets. Regeneration should therefore never be allowed to proceed to this point as it then constitutes a public nuisance.

Your Set Can Oscillate.

You may be one of hundreds of thousands who can say, "But, my set is not a single circuit regenerative receiver. Mine is a five tube, so made that it cannot oscillate." That may be perfectly true, but if your set has tubes, anywhere from one to ten, it can cause interference. That may upset all your ideas on the subject; it may not agree with statements you've seen elsewhere, but it can cause interference. This brings us to the point that whether your set is to be classed as a "blooper" depends upon the amount of the interference. So far in this article one would gather that interference is caused only when the set breaks into oscillation, to be recognized by the yowl in one's own set. That is the extreme; any tube set radiates, causing interference, when the regeneration is advanced to the point where distortion creeps in.

Some sets are supposedly "balanced" or neutralized so that high amplification can be had in the radio frequency amplifier tubes without the possibility of oscillation. Such construction is designed to set up a reverse feeding back around the radio frequency stages so that any regenerative feeding back will be offset and cannot build up into the condition known as oscillation. That is all very well at the particular wavelength at which the neutralizing was carried out but the further away in the broadcasting wavelength band that one gets, the greater the regeneration, and in most cases this closely approaches actual oscillation. These sets certainly can and do radiate.

You and many others may question the extent to which such radiation interferes with others. It is this which determines whether one is a blooper or not. A lighthouse keeper in New York harbor, who is located several mi es from shore, finds that his only form of interference is caused by whistling receivers whose interference must travel at least five miles to enable him to hear it. In another case an amateur is reported to have experimented with such a device and was actually able to exchange signals with another station over a distance of five miles with only a WD-11 tube used as a detector. An oscillatory circuit can be built around a 199-tube, with only 140 bolts B battery, and transmission accomplished, at times, over 1,000 miles.

In Cleveland two sets were conducted under joint auspices of the Cleveland Plain-Dealer and the Cleveland Radio association, to determine the extent of the area affected by oscillating radio receivers. In one of these tests the oscillating set was heard clearly within a radius of 50 miles. An interesting incident is contained in Mr. A. J. Allen's article, mentioned before. "I was trying to locate a neighborhood blooper which was a source of terrific annoyance and interference to myself and many other listeners. I tuned my set to the station the other fellow was trying to receive that night, and then I shut off my set and went calling. At a neighbor's house a square away, I found him sitting there toying with the dials while his highly oscillating set with brightly lighted tubes, was squealing all over 'Kingdom Come.' He was trying to get the station for which I had left my set tuned, and I said to him: 'Let your dials remain as they are, don't turn off your set, and come up to my house.'" My friend did as I suggested and when I turned on my set in his presence, in came his squealing interference. Then I said: 'Now call your wife on the telephone and tell her to move the dials back and forth and let's see what happens.' Every time she turned the dials past the point of resonance for the station we both had tuned in, you can imagine the terrific howls, yelps, whistles, squawks and squeals that surged in through my loudspeaker, since my set has enough volume to fill an auditorium.

"My friend was convinced that he was a 'Radio disturber,' and promised to get a non-radiating receiver, but he still uses that interfering 'blooper' although the occurrence happened some time ago, and he goes on disturbing other listeners within a radius of many miles. He is not a member of the Broadcast Listeners association of our city, but should be for his own good as well as that of other listeners whose enjoyment he spoils."

Such situations as this are retarding the use of radio. The sooner a compulsory remedy is found to prevent "radiated regenerative interferences" of this character from interfering with broadcast reception, the sooner will the art of radio come into general favor for all around usefulness as an indispensable scientific utility for social and economic advancement, in furtherance of private and public education, entertainment and human progress.

As a substitute for an audio-frequency transformer try a choke coil or autoformer. One end is hooked between the plate of the first and the grid of the second audio tub.e A fixed condenser of ½ or 1 mfd. then is inserted between the grid end of the choke coil and the grid of the second audio tube. The other end of the choke coil is connected to the positive B terminal.

Your leadin wire may be causing those scratchy noises in the receiver. Examine it to see if any strands are broken, causing high resistance, poor contact, weak signals and general lack of pep in the receiver. If the leadin is brought through the window with anything except a porcelain tube as a shield, it may be a "losser."

To increase volume, try filtering the detector plate voltage in a jar of water. This can be done by cutting the B detector lead in two and placing each of the ends so made 1 inch apart in a jar of water.

Condenser capacities usually are given in microfarads, one millionth of the unit of capacity the farad. Thus a condenser listed as .00025 mfd. has a capacity of 250 micro-microfarads.

A Chelten midget condenser hooked between the first plate coil and the grid or antenna coil on a radio-frequency set sometimes will keep the receiver from flying into oscillation so quickly.

WHAT BROADCASTERS ARE DOING.

Station WLW, Cincinnati, has been designated by Colonel O. C. Sherrill, city manager, as the official mouthpiece for that city. City rules and information which is to be put before the public will be broadcast from this station.

WBAL, Baltimore, will broadcast a tabloid opera once a month. The first of these radio operatic productions will be broadcast in March.

The Grebe stations at Richmond Hill, Long Island, give the time signals and the U. S. weather reports daily at noon and at 9:55 every night except Sunday.

The Travelers Symphonic Ensemble will broadcast a series of classical selections. The series will include some of the works of Schubert, Wagner, Grieg, Beethoven. The ensemble will be heard from the studio of WTIC, Hartford, Conn.

Floyd Falch, formerly assistant announcer and staff artist of WENR, Chicago, will take a similar position with station WBBM of that city.

Station WBZ, Springfield, Mass., is organizing a radio movie club. Moving picture topics will be the chief interest of the organization.

Lovers of Phantom Voices Clutch Dials In Desperation.

MYSTERIOUS LURE.

Radio Osculation Is Now An Intriguing Indoor Pastime.

BY ED FRIEDMAN
NEA Service Writer

Stage Door Johnnies, Finale Hoppers and Big Button Men from the Vest in this radioized age are deserting the chorus lassies for the Lorelei of the radio studio.

The present mode is to listen to a captivating radio solo, fall madly in love with the voice, send telegrams to the owner and rush wildly to the studio door to meet the melody maker.

Falling in love with a voice is esthetic. It is inspirational. It is mysterous.

The mystery and chances of finding the girl of your dreams is handicapped by the fact that radio studios pick their entertainers by ear and not by eye.

Then there is always the danger that the beautiful voice that comes out of the loudspeaker and causes hearts in lonesome bosoms to do a back spring and 10-yard sprint does not sound the same in chilly night air sans radio.

A singer with a double voice gave a program one night at a leading American radio station She sang in her sweetest soprano range. After her concert she was met at the studio door by an admiring youth who nearly fainted when she asked him, in a deep, mellow baritone, where his mother was.

These are the little mysteries and suprises which offer a new pastime to the hardened thrill seeker.

Th stage beauties have become commonplace and uninteresting. Nowadays a Curbstone Cootie can go to a musical comedy and before the curtain goes up two feet he can tell which pair of shapely ankles he would like to have standing next to his own balloon tire size tarsi.

Romeos whose hearts and ears are sensitive to the twittering melodies of feminine voices received a knockout punch from station KFI, Los Angeles, recently.

This station held a short kissing program during which various unnamed, but numbered girls kissed the microphone. Hearts were sent fluttering all over the country.

Number three proved champion at the gentle art of osculation. She received six proposals by wire and letters are still coming to the studio!

The radio kiss is claimed to have much in its favor as it will never lead to a divorce court and doctors call it hygienic.

But with all the mystery of the unknown that confronts the studio door Reggie when he asks for a blind radio date, it is possible that the singer who accepts the invitation is taking the greatest chance!

PRAISES AUTO CONGRESS.

Henri Jenny, delegate from Switzerand to the Second World Motor Transport Congress, describes that meeting as another Locarno. "When I analyze the meaning of this meeting," says Jenny, "I am forced to see a similarity between the Locarno of Switzerland and this Locarno of the automobile world, where almost 60 countries of the world have united in a fusion of common interests."

PLEASURE CARS WANTED.

An increase in the sales of passenger cars and motorcycles has been noticed in Peru. However, the limited demand for trucks remains unchanged.

CLOSED CARS ONLY.

"When the man of the future speaks of an automobile he will probably mean a closed car," says R. H. Mulch, vice-president of the Flint Motor Company. "The trend of the industry for some time past has been toward a larger and larger proportion of closed models, and the movement in this direction is constantly gaining momentum."

RADIO PAGES MAN 1,000 MILES AWAY.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30.—Radio paged a man, whose whereabouts were unknown to his sister, over a distance of more than 1,000 miles and found him!

Mrs. Robert Eakin of this city longed to see her brother, Alonzo Jones, who had been lost to her for 40 years. She told officials of WEAO of her desire and they broadcast her message.

Jones, living in Tomato, Ark., heard the message and promptly made his way to Columbus to visit his sister.

At this juncture Thomas Dutt presented the report of the form president, Andrew Brown, who h been delayed at Centreville b cause of the bad road condition Mr. Brown was present toward t latter part of the meeting, and t report which he had prepared given in full as follows:

To the Members of the Ontario Motor League, Peterboro Branch. Gentlemen, — During the pa years the Ontario Motor League h proven its worth so effectively th there is little possibility of my b ing able, in this annual report, enhance the good-will which h been so successfully built up, loc ly, Provincially and even intern tionally. I shall, as briefly as p sible, enumerate some of the act ties of this branch during the p year.

Our main activity, which w crowned with truly remarkable s cess, has been the development the tourist traffic. Not only do induce our American cousins come here, but we also look af them on arrival, distributing ro maps and describing routes to th who enquire. Approximately thousand road maps, folders, et descriptive of Peterborough and d trict, were placed in the hands American tourists last year, free charge, both by mail and in the offices.

Peterborough was the first c and district in Ontario, if not in Dominion, to make a careful sur of the revenue derived from Uni States tourist traffic. The Pe borough Branch of the O.M knows that U. S. tourists, in period from June 15th to Septem 15th, 1925, spent in Peterboro and district a quarter of a mill dollars. This computation, ba on American currency paid in our chartered banks, is an un estimate, for doubtless many U. tourists secured Canadian funds fore reaching Peterborough. Tak this fact into consideration, total would be much higher, poss $500,000.

It is conservatively estima that $40,000,000 was spent in tario by tourists from outside Province. By the end of Septem 1925, it was estimated by Gov ment officials that motor tour alone had brought into Can $150,000, a sum equal to a qua of the value of the Dominio wheat crop, and approximately eq to the value of the annual min output of Ontario, Quebec British Columbia combined.

The close of the tourist sea was to Peterborough just like closing of a large factory, giv employment to hundreds of wo men. The money the touri brought in was just like fo money to the community. It re sents perhaps the biggest and m profitable business we have.

Tourists come here, attracted our natural scenery, and patro our merchants and industries. the beauty of it is the scenery never wear out. No matter how the turnover, our stock can n be depleted.

A business like that is worth veloping. It is worth commerci ing just like any other busines commercialized. For every d

AT THE GRAND

"THREE LITTLE MAIDS"

Captain M. W. Plunkett's musical comedy success, "Three Little Maids," made its first bow to Peterboro audiences at the Grand Opera House last evening, and scored a decided success, which should assure it better crowds for today's two performances.

"Three Little Maids" is exceptionally pleasing. It bears the Plunkett trade mark in the snappy way in which it has been staged and in the loveliness of the costumes and scenery. The settings for the three acts of the musical comedy are artistic in the extreme, with a great deal of color, beautifully blended. The golf links at Market Mallory form the first background, with quantities of massed bright flowers. A Bond Street tea shop in the second act is a study in purple and lemon shades, and Lady St. Mallory's reception hall in the third act is wonderfully and very simply contrived its mauve walls cut by winrows of Madonna blue, with two large stained-glass panels as a highlight of color. The frocks of the chorus and principals show the artistic touch also, the soft blended two-tone costumes in the dance numbers, the sport outfits of the golfing girls in the opneing scene, and the trig dainty Dutch dresses of the waitresses in the tea-shop adding the final touch to a production that sparkles with youth, gayety and beauty.

The main character in the piece, of course, is Mr. Bruce Huntley, son of the famous G. P. Huntley, who fell and broke his ankle about ten days ago. His son gives a remarkable performance in the role made notable by his distinguished father, and introduces several new ideas in putting it over that are original in type, particularly his habit of taking the audience into his confidence at all times. The height of his figure, his ingenious manner of uttering literal bits of wisdom with refreshing frankness and his simplicity of style make his work quite out of the ordinary and distinctly interesting.

The framework of "Three Little Maids" centres about the three daughters of the Vicar of Market Mallory, who are taken by their aunt, Lady St. Mallory, to London, to assist in her Bond Street tea shop. Here their swains follow them and their several romances finally culminate in matrimonial engagements in the third act.

The "three little maids" are dainty young things who scintillate in a very pleasing manner from start to finish. Ada, Edna and Hilda Branscombe are roles respectively enacted by Arlene Jackson, Marie Hancock and Sheelagh Hayes, and their several suitors are Lord Cheyne (Bruce Huntley), Brian Molyneux ("Algy," Rance Quarington), and Henri de L'Orme, of the French Embassy (Ernest Morgan). The men carry out the prevailing illusion of fresh youthful vigor and springtime romance that characterizes the whole piece.

Two minor actors who are extremedly good are Fanny Jameson, the maid (Clare Reid), who has a stage manner distinctive and very entertaining, and her broad Scotch swain, Cyril, a caddy (Sandy Shaw). These two add much to the fun of the production and bring down the house with their song and dance duett, "A Real Town Lady, Why?" Miss Ray Hope makes an excellent Lady St. Mallory, fair and forty, and John Power make a very good vicar, Rev. Eustache Branscombe. A philandering Beau Brummell, with a handsome face and fine voice, is a second minor part enacted in a dual role by Rance Quarrington, and three proteges of Lady St. Mallory, who add immensely to the attraction of the tea shop, wearing beautiful gowns, are nthia Cayenta, as Lady Rosemary Beaubjen; Jean Grindley as Venetia Grafton, and Rose Lowery as Lady Marjory Crichton. The ensemble girls, fresh, young, pretty and beautifully costumed are Evelyn Geary Hilda Palmer, Ruth Elliott, Aileen Russell Winnifred Hulse, Helen Craddock, Teddy Locke, Phyliss May and Jean Gregg. The dancers in the cast are Miss Hilda Palmer as Sally, and Miss Evelyn Geary as Mimi.

The musical numbers are, of course, the biggest attraction of the piece, and are really very fine. Tuneful catchy and bright, rendered with charming effect, they blend in admirably with the general splendid finish of the production.

Miss Marie Hancock has some lovely songs, and is the possessor of a particularly pleasing voice, used very gracefully. She sings in a dainty duett with Rance Quarrington, "Do You Think You've Known Me Long Enough?" also "It's a Very Different Thing," and has a very fine solo in "What is a Maid to Do?"

Rance Quarrington has some splendid numbers, sung in splendid style. He has a catchy number in "Bumble Bee." Miss Arlene Jackson has a dainty bit in "Something Sweet About Me," and Ernest Morgan does "Pale Moon" very artistically, also "Love, You're a Wonderful Game," and "I'll Dream of You." "I'm Only a Caddie," is Sandy Shaw's contribution and Miss Sheelagh Hayes has a typical Plunkett number, somewhat obscure in its implications, in "She Was a Miller's Daughter." "I'm Vanting for Somevun" is a Dutch comedy song, and dance by Miss Clare Reid that received renewed applause last night.

Two very effective portions of the programme were a dance in flame-colored costume by Mimi (Miss Evelyn Geary) and a white veil dance by Sally (Miss Hilda Palmer) —Jeannette.

AT THE CAPITOL

VALENTINO AND VILMA BANKY ARE CO-STARRED

Romantic Star Seen in Three Guises in "The Eagle," New Film Play

Rudolph Valentino will make his first screen appearance in some time in "The Eagle," a glamorous picture of Russia before the revolution, which will be shown at the Capitol Theater beginning Monday. This is the star's first production since he aligned himself with United Artists Corporation.

Valentino appears in three distinct guises in this fast moving action story, which is also filled with comedy. He is seen first as a Cossack lieutenant, garbed in dashing uniform, then as the mysterious bandit, known as the Eagle because of his swift and marauding movements. While a bandit he masquerades as a French tutor and enters the home of his mortal enemy.

In "The Eagle" the star is supported by Vilma Banky, the beautiful Hungarian actress whom Samuel Goldwyn discovered in Budapest and brought to America, and by Louise Dresser, for many years a stage star, who has recently scored a great success on the screen, following her appearance in "The Goose Woman." Even the minor roles are played by actors of distinction.

Valentino was fortunate in having such a capable director as Clarence Brown for this production. Brown has made notable progress in the last two years and has definitely established himself as a master with such pictures as "Smouldering Fires," "The Goose Woman" and "The Acquittal."

"The Eagle' is based on "Dubrovsky," a Russian classic by Alexander Pushkin, "the Shakespeare of Russia." The screen version was prepared by Hans Kraly, who wrote "Passion," "Deception," "Her Sister from aPris" and many other notable successes.

BRITISH LAWS MAY BE REVISED

Permit of Longer Sentences in Cases of Multiple Offences.

MORRISS CASE.

LONDON, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press)—The reecnt case of Havley Morriss, wealthy merchant and land owner who was sentenced to three years' imprisonment for offences against young servant girls employed by him in his country home, possibly may be the forerunner of a complete revision of the British system of penology.

When the presiding judge gave Morriss three years and his wife nine months of hard labor for conspiring with her husband, he complained that the law did not allow him to inflict adequate sentences.

In the course of the debate in the House of Commons yesterday on the bill to remedy this alleged defect in law, the Home Secretary announced that as the culmination of his discussions with the Lord Chief Justice of the Morriss case, Parliament might be asked in a year or two to reconsider the whole of the existing system of penology. The house passed the second reading of the bill. Under it power would be given judges to impose sentences of penal servitude for certain multiple offences.

MAN HELD FOR KILLING MOTHER

Wasyl Kowbel Charged With Beating Her To Death With Piece of Wood.

RESULT OF QUARREL.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—Ten hours after the slaying of his mother, Mrs. Katie Kowbel, 34, was arrested early to-day by a Provincial Police constable of Emerson, Man. He will be brought to Winnipeg and charged with murder.

Mrs. Kowbel was killed at her home near Caliento, Man. The victim of the tragedy was a widow, 72 years old. When Wasyl refused to go to the bush to get some firewood, his mother is alleged to have picked up a stick to force him to do her bidding. In the quarrel which ensued, Wasyl is alleged to have beaten his mother to death. His weapon was a heavy piece of firewood.

EDWARD J. LYNCH.

MARMORA, Feb. 19.—The death occurred very suddenly on Thursday, Feb. 18th, of Edward J. Lynch at the age of 55. Deceased carried on business for several years as a lumber dealer and was universally respected. He leaves a widow three sons and a daughter to mourn his loss.

The funeral service is being held at the Sacred Heart church Saturday morning, after which the body will be taken to Hastings for interment.

B. G. DUSENBURY

NORHAM, Feb. 20—The high esteem in which the late Benjamin G. Dusenbury, who passed away at his home in Codrington early Monday morning, was held was in evidence from the large number of friends who gathered at his home on Wednesday afternoon to participate in the funeral service and also by the many wreaths, sheaves and stars of flowers which banked the casket. The service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. F. Everson, who spoke briefly from Acts 13 and 36. For David after he had served his own generation by the will of God, "Some Day the Silver Cord Will Break."

The late Mr. Dusenbury was born in Brighton township in July, 1859, and spent all his life within two miles of his birthplace. He was a lifelong Methodist and a liberal supporter of the Bethany United Church, being treasurer of the church at the time of his death. He leaves to mourn his loss besides his widow, two brothers, Bernard R. of Vancouver and Daniel J. of Chicago and one sister, Mrs. Richard Morgan of 3rd concession of Brighton.

FINAL GAME OF SCHOOL LEAGUE

SPLENDID RECORD.

Queen Mary hockey team won the championship of the Public School Hockey League to-day by defeating King George School 2-0 in the final game.

The game was scoreless until the third period, when the superior weight and strength of the West-End boys began to tell, and Ted Dormer netted the rubber for two counters. The lighter East Ward lads checked like hornets all the way and held their opponents off while they lasted.

In all six games played by the winners, only one goal has been scored against them, while they have counted forty-three.

CHOIR BANQUET GREAT SUCCESS

Presentation Made To Mr. Peaker, Who is Resigning as Organist.

SUCCESSOR PRESENT.

Knox Church was the scene of a happy gathering last night on the occasion of the annual banquet of the choir. Rev. M. C. Mackinnon acted as chairman. At the conclusion of the banquet an enjoyable programme was rendered. The hit of the evening was registered when the members of the Session and the Board of Managers shook their arduous duties from their minds and entertained the gathering to musical selections of an original nature. Charles Peaker, the present organist of Knox Church, who is leaving in a short time for St. Catharines, was presented with a club bag from the choir. Mrs. Hayman made the presentation and H. J. McCannon read the address. J. F. Morrison, J. W. Buyers and J. Gerrard made short speeches eulogizing Mr. Peaker's work and wishing him every success in his new Church.

The programme was as follows: Toast, the King, proposed by Malcolm Clarke; The Choir, proposed by J. F. Morrison, responded to by A. Pitchford; Knox Church, proposed by Frank Gray, responded to by Andrew McKenzie. Instrumental numbers by Mrs. M. C. Mackinnon and Charles Peaker and a humorous reading by Malcom Clarke.

J. F. Morrison in a neat speech introduced Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Devey to the choir. Mr. Devey is succeeding Mr. Peaker as organist.

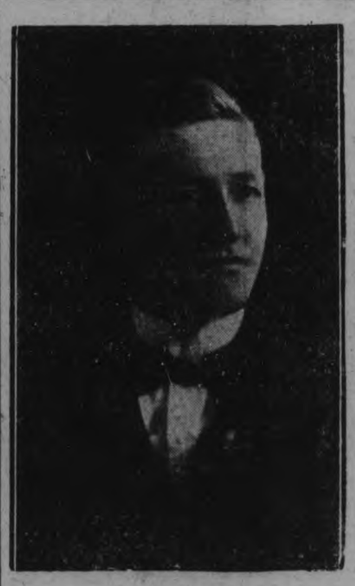
Palestine For The Jew. Why?



The eyes of the world are upon Palestine and the efforts of the returning Jews to make it again a land "flowing with milk and honey."

Since Britain was given a mandate over the land she has encouraged the return of the Jew and the setting up of a Jewish State.

Already, since the World War, millions of money, and the efforts of thousands of earnest workers have been concentrated on the re-establishment of a national home-land for the Jew in Palestine. What is significant about this great activity?

Are the old Bible prophecies in actual course of fulfillment before our eyes?

RUM RUNNERS SURE OF VESSEL WHICH ATTACKED

Positive That U. S. Cutter Seneca Fired Upon Eastwood.

HAVE PIECE OF SHELL.

Officers of Nova Scotia Ship Make Statements About the Attack.

HALIFAX, Feb. 22.—(Canadian Press.)— Positive identification of the United States' cutter alleged to have been the Seneca, that fired upon the Nova Scotia rum running schooler Eastwood while she was anchored about 20 miles off Long Island last week, may be effected through the piece of a partly exploded shell, now in the possession of Harry Linden, super cargo of the Eastwood.

Linden says: "We know the Seneca. We made no mistake. She has two crows nests on her forward star and one on her aft. It is ridiculous to suppose that the ship which attacked us might have been a pirate distinguished."

The super cargo said he had the partly exploded shell in his possession yhich he thought would identify the attacking ship. Captain John Spindler of the Eastwood last night made the following statement in reference to the denial of the captain of the Seneca that he had fired upon the Eastwood:

"I don't like to express myself too strongly over the telephone, but I will say he is telling a positive untruth. He did fire on us. We have proof to show he did."

Paris Degree Gives Peggy Joyce Her Fourth Divorce

PARIS, Feb. 22 — It was learned today that Peggy Hopkins Joyce has obtained a divorce on Nov. 23 from Karl Gustav Morner.

The records of the Palais of Justice give her name as Marguerite Upton, and her address as 45 Rue Raynourd. Morner's address is put down as Rue Pierre Guerin. No mention is made of his being a Count.

The records also say that the couple were married at Atlantic City on June 2, 1924, and that there are no children.

The divorce was granted on grounds that the husband was not faithful, forsook his domicile and was too fond of his friends. The wife alleged that after she had been married twenty-hour hours she saw that life in common with Morner was "insupportable."

Premier Will Answer Fisher Charges During Debate To-morrow.

TORONTO, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—This is private members' day in the Legislature, and the session will probably be brief. Tomorrow the debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne and the two amendments thereto will proceed. K. K. Homuth (Labor, South Waterloo) will be the first speaker. Mr. Homuth will attack the Government for its alleged lack of policy on the liquor question. He will also deal with local Waterloo County matters in reference to some Government appointments made recently.

It is also understood that Premier Ferguson is to reply to Harold Fisher (Liberal, West Ottawa), who hinted about members being at banquet parties where there was drinking. Mr. Fisher's statements were withdrawn, but have been the subject of considerable comment.

THE WEATHER.

Sunday morning showed that during the night the temperature had been down to 11 degrees below zero. No very cold weather was experienced last night, the lowest being 10 degrees above. More snow has fallen, and there is now a greater depth of the "beautiful" on the ground than at any other time this winter. Usually our heaviest falls of snow are during the first ten days of March. A month from to-day spring should be here, most of the snow have disappeared, many of the more hardy birds arrived, and all nature throbbing with new life. — W. P.

STATISTICS OF CHURCH UNION

PERCENTAGE 30.52

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Statistical officers of the United Church of Canada have completed their compilations and analysis of the voting by the members of the former Presbyterian Church in Canada on the question of uniting with the Methodist and Congregational churches and which union was consummated on June 10, 1925. An official statement issued Saturday on the basis of these compilations, which include the most accurate returns obtainable, according to the statement, indicate that the percentage of the former Presbyterian church membership which voted out of union was 30.52, or a little less than one-third. The total number of congregations now in the United Church of Canada is 8,699, of which 3,728 were former Presbyterian self-sustaining or aid-receiving charges. The total number of Presbyterian congregations which voted out of union, including eight which voted to remain independent, was 784.

Rev. Dr. George C. Pidgeon, moderator of the General Council of the United Church of Canada accompanies the statement with the following explanation:

"In giving any statement of the exact situation of the congregations of former Presbyterian Church in Canada one has to bear in mind the distinction between congregations and pastoral charges. In the terms of the United Church of Canada Act a congregation means a worshipping unit, or single preaching station, while a charge may be composed of one, or a number of such congregations. Under the provision of the Act the vote on the question of union was taken by congregations and not charges. In this statement, therefore, the figures deal with congregations rather than charges, because a great number of charges divided on the question of union, part entering union and part voting non-concurrence. No account taken of new congregations which have been formed either by Unionist or by Anti-Unionist minorities.

NOBLEMAN'S PLAY IS MUCH CRITICIZED

LONDON, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press)—The Earl of Lathome, who has been a playwright for his own amusement since 1919, produced a play on Saturday night more or less privately which makes some of London's experienced critics fairly writhe. E. A. Baughan, dramatic critic of the Daily News say: "The play is one of the most disgusting, brutal and low minded that it has ever been my lot to witness."

The Daily Mail describes the play as being thoroughly nasty minded and says everybody in its is either a fool or a waster or without common morals or decency.

ROTARY'S HEAD.

JOHN H. SEELS
President of Peterboro Rotary Club which held its anniversary meeting today.

ANNIVERSARY OF ROTARY MARKED BY FINE MEETING

Rotarian John Gibson Pleads For Better International Feeling.

A BIRTHDAY CAKE.

21st Anniversary of the Founding of Rotary is Fittingly Observed.

The Peterboro Rotary Club fittingly celebrated the 21st anniversary of the beginning of Rotary at the regular weekly luncheon today.

A special anniversary address was given by Rotarian John Gibson of Toronto, former president of the Toronto Rotary Club and former director of Rotary International. The birthday idea was carried out through the use of candles on every table and a huge birthday cake, topped with 21 lighted tapers, adorned the head table.

The programme was in charge of a committee of past presidents with Rotarian Fred L. Roy acting as chairman of the committee.

To Rotarian Roy as the first president of the Peterboro Club, fell the dual honor of cutting the birthday cake and of introducing the speaker of the day.

In introducing Rotarian Gibson Rotarian Roy dwelt upon the great interest the guest of honor had taken in the organization of the Peterboro Club and paid a warm tribute to the part he had played in putting the local organization on its feet.

Rotarian Gibson's address was an eloquent exposition of the sixth object of Rotary, the fostering of a better international understanding and world peace through a world brotherhood of business and professional men animated by the Rotary ideal of service.

It was a plea for every Rotarian to personally contribute toward international good-will by seeking to understand the people of other nations and by seeking to persuade others to do so. Rotarian Gibson pointed out how the worl had gradually develped to the point where international brotherhood could be looked forward to with a good deal of confidence. In the early histry of mankind there had been a virtual state of anarchy. Every man's hand was against every other man; every man felt that every other man's hand was against him. The first upward step was a realization of a family consciousness; of the fact that within the family circle there must be mutual concessions made. From the family this idea spread to the tribe ,and a tribe loyalty developed. Eventually a national spirit grew out of this tribal loyalty and today the time had arrived when it was seen that there was a duty not only to one's own nation, but to the people of the world.

Rotarian Gibson did not find this belief illogical. If a man were a good father or a good husband there was no reason why he should be not be a good citizen of his community, he was usually a good citizen of his country. There was every reason to feel that without sacrificing his national loyalty and obligations, he could be a good citizen of the world.

The address was thoroughly enjoyed and Rotarian Gibson was tendered a hearty vote of thanks.

In was announced at today's meeting by President John Seels that a Ladies' Night will be held on March 12th, and that an inter-city meeting with the Toronto Club is being arranged.

1,700,000,000 Train Rides In Britain Without Fatality

In the present century there have been two years—1901 and 1908—without a fatality, and in 1909, as in 1925, only one was killed, while in 1916, 1919 and 1923 there were only three. As 1,700,000,000 passenger journeys are made by train every year, chance of death is infinitesimal.

The problem of railway transportation in Great Britain is entirely different from that in the United States. Long hauls are negligible. Sleeping cars are needed only in two directions from London, toward Scotland, a short night's run, and to Plymouth. But in the many thickly populated districts of the country railway tracks form a work such as exists in America only near New York, Chicago and other large citns.

MINERS REMAIN AT WORK TODAY

Observe Washington's Birthday Digging Coal for Public.

PRODUCTION GAINS

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Feb. 22.—All mines of the anthracite coal field worked to-day as a patriotic observation of Washington's birthday, generally observed in other years by the closing down of the mines. This step was taken owing to the demand for coal that exists in the anthracite consuming territory.

Saturday night, after three days of actual work at the mines, it is reported that inside conditions are generally cleared up and that during this week production will be carried to within 85 per cent. of the normal. From this point to full capacity will be an easy step, mining officials declare.

Adding to the difficulty of the operating end was an unusual flow of water last week to the underground sections. This was due to a rainfall on top of a heavy fall of snow. A drop in temperature and a turning to snow instead of rain, checked this so that operations will not be hampered by high water levels.

Coke Demand Established.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 22. — Coal operators of the Connellsville field expect the lessons learned by Eastern consumers during the anthracite coal strike to benefit them in the future. They say it has been demonstrated that in place of the 25 per cent. ash left in the burning of hard coal only 11 to 12 per cent. is left in coke burning and 8 per cent. in burning bituminous coal.

Because of the small amount of ash residue and the intense heat generated by coke, producers here say that a market has been established in the East for domestic-sized coke and that future years will see a big increase in the demand.

While the price of coke has dropped from $10 a ton to around $3.50 at the ovens here, the demand, due to the settlement of the anthracite strike, while greatly lessened, has not fallen away to a point expected by producers.

REPORT PROMISED ON SOCIAL MORALITY

Mayor Says Police Committee Will Investigate Conditions in Cobourg.

COBOURG, Feb. 22.—Under the caption "Will report on social morality", Mayor Fred J. McArthur makes this statement officially in the Cobourg press relative to a discussion of the moral condition of the town, which took place at a session of the Town Council.

"A meeting of the police committee was called on Saturday night the object of which was to consider the charges and accusations made at last Council session, and to deal with all matters pertaining thereto, in every degree of fairness and thoroughness with the thought of placing responsibility where it belongs and removing blame and censure where not deserved. A full report will be brought in next Council meeting by the chairman of the Police committee.

HEIR TO FORTUNE OF TWO MILLION BURNED TO DEATH IN HOTEL CHAIR

Friend Barely Escaped From Room in Chicago Hotel—Cigarette Started Fire—Both Had Visited Cabarets and Victim Was Drunk.

DIVORCED AS INEBRIATE IN 1925

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—Frederick Beverly Pearson, 30 years old, with a $50,000 alimony settlement seven months back of him and a $2,000,000 legacy five years ahead of him, burned to death Saturday morning in a chair in his apartment at the Claridge Hotel, into which he had flopped, following an all-night jollification, to smoke a sobering-up cigarette.

John Howard Hogshead, son of the Rev. Luther Hogshead, pastor of the Rogers Park Evangelical Lutheran Church, Pearson's companion in the room, was awakened by the flames in time to escape with a few burns.

About 5 o'clock Saturday morning, not so very long after prohibition agents had raided a theatrical party at the Claridge, Pearson and his friend went, not to his apartment at the Ambassador, but to a room at the Claridge.

Sat Up For Telephone Call.

Philip Hanley, the bell boy who showed them to their room, testified at the inquest that Hogshead was "pretty sober," but that Pearson was "so drunk he could hardly get upstairs."

Hogshead, he said, tossed off his shoes and threw himself across one of the beds to get some sleep. His friend insisted upon sitting up and smoking. He was waiting, he said, for a telephone call from the Ambassador Hotel.

"The next thing I knew," Hogshead explained, "was when I woke up, choking in the smoke and flame."

He made his way down stairs. Bellboys came, firemen rushed in, and when the flames were out, there amid the wreckage, was the body of the young millionaire, burned to a crisp.

Had Tried to Reform Pearson.

Hogshead said that Pearson and he had attended the six-day bicycle races and then visited several cabarets. He added that Pearson had been drinking heavily. Hogshead declared that the flames cut him off from Pearson and that he had barely time to save his own life.

The Rev. Mr. Hogshead, when informed of his son's narrow escape, said the two young men had been companions for several months, but that his son had been trying to reform Pearson.

Mrs. Gladys Samma Pearson, Pearson's wife, had also attempted to reform him after she married him in January, 1922, but on July 3, 1925, she obtained a divorce, charging habitual drunkenness. Mrs. Pearson, at that time agreed to accept a $50,000 settlement instead of claiming a share of the $2,000,000 inheritance.

Under the will of the elder Pearson, who died six years ago, the young man was to come into possession of $2,000,000 on his thirty-fifth birthday, five years hence.

Murderers' Pay Very Low Skilled Men Get $20 a Week

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Feb. 22 (United Press).—Rafaele Daniolle, convicted gunman, told District Attorney Deed that gangsters are paid from $10 to $20 in retainers each to do their master's murdering. Single men get $10, married men $20 per week. A youth with a father to support earned $15 a week with his trigger finger.

"How many murders were you connected with?" Daniolle was asked.

"About thirteen or fourteen."

Magistrate Refused To Believe Evidence for the Defense.

PRISON TERM, TOO.

LINDSAY, Feb. 22.—At Saturday's session of the police court, "Pinky" Gassien, a well-known resident of the town, who has been convicted on former occasions of infractions of the O.T.A. was fined $1,000 and nine months' imprisonment for selling liquor. In default of payment an additional nine months must be served. Gassien conducted his own defence.

The charge was laid following the apprehension of a citizen named Yelland who was under the influence of drink. He informed License Inspector Porter and Provincial Officer Storey that he secured two six-ounce battle from Gassien's house, paying $2.50 for the supply.

Gassien, in his evidence, denied selling Yelland liquor. The money was produced, but the accused swore that he ordered Yelland out of the house. Another man, Martin, who was in the house at the time swore that he saw no liquor. Gassien further stated that Yelland told the court his story because he was mad because he did not secure liquor. Gassien's wife also gave evidence to the effect that there was no liquor sold or produced on the evening in question.

Police Magistrate Bradford, in reviewing the evidence, stated that he did not believe Martin's evidence and would not give it any consideration. Gassien, he declared, was a parasite and a nuisance to the public. He had been convicted on occasions for infractions of the Temperance Act, and still persisted in ignoring the law. A lengthy term in prison, he felt would give him time for reflection.

Car Collides With Radial Car at Curve Near Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Feb. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Five members of the Hawes family, of St. Catharines, were injured, two of them fatally, in an accident at Schwabb's curve, near Grimsby, last Saturday night when their automobile collided with a G. and B. radial car. They were removed to the General Hospital here, where Florence Hawes, 12 years old, succumbed yesterday morning to internal injuries. Fred Hawes, her 18 year old brother, who was said to have driven the car, succumbed last night to a fractured skull. He never regained consciousness.

Emma Hawes, another sister, received a fractured left collar bone. Mrs. Hannah Hagen, aged 26 years, suffered shock and painful lacerations. Mrs. Florence Hawes, mother of the injured children, who is 48 years old, received lacerations to her head and suffered from shock.

BLOOPING REGENERATIVE SETS SPOILED INTERNATIONAL TESTS

Some Fans Get Amusement By Reckless Dial Spinning.

SET OSCILLATES.

The hour was that which occurs in every 24 known as 10 to 11 p.m. Central time. The day was the 26th of January —this year. Somewhere out in the darkness to the Eastward a score of European stations were shattering distance and atomic quiet with all the power available from great dynamos and acres of storage batteries, in the hope that some small part of their great power might reach American shores in the form of enjoyable entertainment. The tubes of three carefully adjusted super-heterodynes glowed dimly in the quiet of the laboratory. Each was attached to an antenna and the dials went relentlessly back and forth in patient search of fragments of the music and speech speeding Westward.

"Whistle, whistle, crash, bloop, bang and a coupla bongs," answered the shorter but fatter special with the resistance coupled intermediates.

The third, not to be outdone, retaliated with a siren whistle that started high, went down to a grumble and again soared to a piercing screech. Suddenly the big special landed on an orchestra. For a moment the melody poured forth, clear and pure with but a slight background of the ever-present static. Then it died, with the grumble of a nearby blooper as its swan song. The search went on. At 200 meters, at 350, at 425, at 500, always the chorus of whistles, bloops, grumbles and clicks. Occasionally, the hum of vibrator or violet ray machine varied the monotony. One more snatch of music, one announcement was all the reward for the hours of building, the hours of search. Reports that trickled in during the rest of the week indicated that such was the result of the International tests for about 2,000,000 other set owners.

Who Is to Blame?

Many were the invectives used to comment on the condition of the atmosphere. New words were coined to properly express disappointment and chagrin. The older words were run to death. All of which has lead to much speculation and argument on one technical staff as to who is to blame. Let's first take the stations. Surely, no one can logically lay the finger of blame on them; the Americans were quiet at the times requested, the Europeans and South Americans were on their waves and not heterodyning. Second, there are the makers of sets. You cannot blame them. The radio public wants range, coast to coast reception and dance volume on everything from KFI to WEAF. To even approach such needs, regeneration must be possible on from one to three tubes. You people wanted it, you got it.

A recent survey made by the Department of Marine and Fisheries of Canada relative to radio broadcast conditions in the more populated centers in the Dominion indicates that approximately fifty per cent of the "preventable interference" which prevails is caused through the incorrect operation of regenerative receiving sets by the broadcast listeners themselves. An article prepared by Mr. Andrew J. Allen, secretary of the National Broadcast Listeners' league, states that the most difficult sources of interference to overcome, and which create as much annoying and widespread interference to radio reception in all cities at this time as any other cause, are the squeals, whines, whistles, squawks and howls of the radiating receivers.

"If the broadcast listeners would take effective steps to put a stop to the squealing of regenerative sets, probably 25 per cent of radio interference would be removed in many localities," says the Interference Co-ordination committee's report of the National Electric Light association. On this subject, Radio Guide states, "Apparently every one co-operates except the radio listeners themselves, just the people one would think would try the hardest to behave. Regenerative sets still hold all records for interference and practically every magazine and newspaper in the country has run articles warning about such outfits. Radio etiquette among broadcast listeners calls for the elimination of such interference. If each listener would remember that every time his set whistles coincidental with his tuning o it, he is sending out that same whisite to annoy all other listeners for a considerable area, it is believed that much of the trouble would soon be eliminated."

So there you are; no matter what agency investigates the complaints of the radio public as to squeals and howls during International Test week, or any other time, the blame comes right back to the aforementioned radio public's own door. Part of this interference is due to ignorance; much of it is wilful and in disregard of the rights of others. Do you know what causes squeals? Do you know what oscillation is? Do you know what regeneration is? If you do not, and you'd like to, so you can do your bit toward making the world safe for a self-respecting radio set to operate in, then read on.

Principle of Regeneration.

The principle of regeneration, as used in radio receiving sets, is that part of the output of the detector, or a radio frequency amplifier, tube which feeds back into its own input and thus greatly increases the volume of the signal. The electric waves reaching the receiving set from the transmitting (broadcasting) station travel down the aerial and its lead-in, through the first coil in the set and so to earth through the ground wire. The energy set up in this first coil is transferred, either directly or by induction, into the grid of the first tube and influences it in such a way as to set it functioning.

The resulting output from the plate circuit of this tube is fed back in such a manner as to set up a "field" or influence, in the part of the circuit connected, as mentioned above, to the input or grid of the tube. This "field" induces in the input circuit a current of electricity of the same frequency as that of the received electric waves. The energy, therefore, which comes down the antenna wire is automatically strengthened by impulses from the output of the tube.

Unless properly controlled, this action will continue to build up until the saturation point or climax is reached, the tube being then said to be in a state of oscillation. When a receiving set is in oscillation, it causes howling and squealing in your own and your neighbor's receiving sets. Regeneration should therefore never be allowed to proceed to this point as it then constitutes a public nuisance.

Your Set Can Oscillate.

You may be one of hundreds of thousands who can say, "But, my set is not a single circuit regenerative receiver. Mine is a five tube, so made that it cannot oscillate." That may be perfectly true, but if your set has tubes, anywhere from one to ten, it can cause interference. That may upset all your ideas on the subject; it may not agree with statements you've seen elsewhere, but it can cause interference. This brings us to the point that whether your set is to be classed as a "blooper" depends upon the amount of the interference. So far in this article one would gather that interference is caused only when the set breaks into oscillation, to be recognized by the yowl in one's own set. That is the extreme; any tube set radiates, causing interference, when the regeneration is advanced to the point where distortion creeps in.

Some sets are supposedly "balanced" or neutralized so that high amplification can be had in the radio frequency amplifier tubes without the possibility of oscillation. Such construction is designed to set up a reverse feeding back around the radio frequency stages so that any regenerative feeding back will be offset and cannot build up into the condition known as oscillation. That is all very well at the particular wavelength at which the neutralizing was carried out but the further away in the broadcasting wavelength band that one gets, the greater the regeneration, and in most cases this closely approaches actual oscillation. These sets certainly can and do radiate.

You and many others may question the extent to which such radiation interferes with others. It is this which determines whether one is a blooper or not. A lighthouse keeper in New York harbor, who is located several mi es from shore, finds that his only form of interference is caused by whistling receivers whose interference must travel at least five miles to enable him to hear it. In another case an amateur is reported to have experimented with such a device and was actually able to exchange signals with another station over a distance of five miles with only a WD-11 tube used as a detector. An oscillatory circuit can be built around a 199-tube, with only 140 bolts B battery, and transmission accomplished, at times, over 1,000 miles.

In Cleveland two sets were conducted under joint auspices of the Cleveland Plain-Dealer and the Cleveland Radio association, to determine the extent of the area affected by oscillating radio receivers. In one of these tests the oscillating set was heard clearly within a radius of 50 miles. An interesting incident is contained in Mr. A. J. Allen's article, mentioned before. "I was trying to locate a neighborhood blooper which was a source of terrific annoyance and interference to myself and many other listeners. I tuned my set to the station the other fellow was trying to receive that night, and then I shut off my set and went calling. At a neighbor's house a square away, I found him sitting there toying with the dials while his highly oscillating set with brightly lighted tubes, was squealing all over 'Kingdom Come.' He was trying to get the station for which I had left my set tuned, and I said to him: 'Let your dials remain as they are, don't turn off your set, and come up to my house.' My friend did as I suggested and when I turned on my set in his presence, in came his squealing interference. Then I said: 'Now call your wife on the telephone and tell her to move the dials back and forth and let's see what happens.' Every time she turned the dials past the point of resonance for the station we both had tuned in, you can imagine the terrific howls, yelps, whistles, squawks and squeals that surged in through my loudspeaker, since my set has enough volume to fill an auditorium.

"My friend was convinced that he was a 'Radio disturber,' and promised to get a non-radiating receiver, but he still uses that interfering 'blooper' although the occurrence happened some time ago, and he goes on disturbing other listeners within a radius of many miles. He is not a member of the Broadcast Listeners association of our city, but should be for his own good as well as that of other listeners whose enjoyment he spoils."

Such situations as this are retarding the use of radio. The sooner a compulsory remedy is found to prevent "radiated regenerative interferences" of this character from interfering with broadcast reception, the sooner will the art of radio come into general favor for all around usefulness as an indispensable scientific utility for social and economic advancement, in furtherance of private and public education, entertainment and human progress.

As a substitute for an audio-frequency transformer try a choke coil or autoformer. One end is hooked between the plate of the first and the grid of the second audio tub.e A fixed condenser of ½ or 1 mfd. then is inserted between the grid end of the choke coil and the grid of the second audio tube. The other end of the choke coil is connected to the positive B terminal.

Your leadin wire may be causing those scratchy noises in the receiver. Examine it to see if any strands are broken, causing high resistance, poor contact, weak signals and general lack of pep in the receiver. If the leadin is brought through the window with anything except a porcelain tube as a shield, it may be a "losser."

To increase volume, try filtering the detector plate voltage in a jar of water. This can be done by cutting the B detector lead in two and placing each of the ends so made 1 inch apart in a jar of water.

Condenser capacities usually are given in microfarads, one millionth of the unit of capacity the farad. Thus a condenser listed as .00025 mfd. has a capacity of 250 micro-microfarads.

A Chelten midget condenser hooked between the first plate coil and the grid or antenna coil on a radio-frequency set sometimes will keep the receiver from flying into oscillation so quickly.

MYSTERIOUS LURE.

Radio Osculation Is Now An Intriguing Indoor Pastime.

BY ED FRIEDMAN
NEA Service Writer

Stage Door Johnnies, Finale Hoppers and Big Button Men from the Vest in this radioized age are deserting the chorus lassies for the Lorelei of the radio studio.

The present mode is to listen to a captivating radio solo, fall madly in love with the voice, send telegrams to the owner and rush wildly to the studio door to meet the melody maker.

Falling in love with a voice is esthetic. It is inspirational. It is mysterous.

The mystery and chances of finding the girl of your dreams is handicapped by the fact that radio studios pick their entertainers by ear and not by eye.

Then there is always the danger that the beautiful voice that comes out of the loudspeaker and causes hearts in lonesome bosoms to do a back spring and 10-yard sprint does not sound the same in chilly night air sans radio.

A singer with a double voice gave a program one night at a leading American radio station She sang in her sweetest soprano range. After her concert she was met at the studio door by an admiring youth who nearly fainted when she asked him, in a deep, mellow baritone, where his mother was.

These are the little mysteries and suprises which offer a new pastime to the hardened thrill seeker.

Th stage beauties have become commonplace and uninteresting. Nowadays a Curbstone Cootie can go to a musical comedy and before the curtain goes up two feet he can tell which pair of shapely ankles he would like to have standing next to his own balloon tire size tarsi.

Romeos whose hearts and ears are sensitive to the twittering melodies of feminine voices received a knockout punch from station KFI, Los Angeles, recently.

This station held a short kissing program during which various unnamed, but numbered girls kissed the microphone. Hearts were sent fluttering all over the country.

Number three proved champion at the gentle art of osculation. She received six proposals by wire and letters are still coming to the studio!

The radio kiss is claimed to have much in its favor as it will never lead to a divorce court and doctors call it hygienic.

But with all the mystery of the unknown that confronts the studio door Reggie when he asks for a blind radio date, it is possible that the singer who accepts the invitation is taking the greatest chance!

PRAISES AUTO CONGRESS.

Henri Jenny, delegate from Switzerand to the Second World Motor Transport Congress, describes that meeting as another Locarno. "When I analyze the meaning of this meeting," says Jenny, "I am forced to see a similarity between the Locarno of Switzerland and this Locarno of the automobile world, where almost 60 countries of the world have united in a fusion of common interests."

PLEASURE CARS WANTED.

An increase in the sales of passenger cars and motorcycles has been noticed in Peru. However, the limited demand for trucks remains unchanged.

CLOSED CARS ONLY.

"When the man of the future speaks of an automobile he will probably mean a closed car," says R. H. Mulch, vice-president of the Flint Motor Company. "The trend of the industry for some time past has been toward a larger and larger proportion of closed models, and the movement in this direction is constantly gaining momentum."

To the Members of the Ontario Motor League, Peterboro Branc

Gentlemen, — During the pa years the Ontario Motor League h proven its worth so effectively th there is little possibility of my b ing able, in this annual report, enhance the good-will which h been so successfully built up, loc ly, Provincially and even inter tionally. I shall, as briefly as p sible, enumerate some of the act ties of this branch during the p year.

Our main activity, which w crowned with truly remarkable s cess, has been the development the tourist traffic. Not only do induce our American cousins come here, but we also look af them on arrival, distributing ro maps and describing routes to th who enquire. Approximately o thousand road maps, folders, et descriptive of Peterborough and d trict, were placed in the hands American tourists last year, free charge, both by mail and in th offices.

Peterborough was the first c and district in Ontario, if not in Dominion, to make a careful sur of the revenue derived from Uni States tourist traffic. The Pe borough. Branch of the O.M knows that U. S. tourists, in period from June 15th to Septem 15th, 1925, spent in Peterboro and district a quarter of a mil dollars. This computation, ba on American currency paid in our chartered banks, is an un estimate, for doubtless many U tourists secured Canadian funds fore reaching Peterborough. Tak this fact into consideration, total would be much higher, poss $500,000.

It is conservatively estima that $40,000,000 was spent in tario by tourists from outside Province. By the end of Septem 1925, it was estimated by Gov ment officials that motor tour alone had brought into Can $150,000, a sum equal to a qua of the value of the Domini wheat crop, and approximately e to the value of the annual mi output of Ontario, Quebec British Columbia combined.

The close of the tourist sea was to Peterborough just like closing of a large factory, giv employment to hundreds of wo men. The money the tour brought in was just like fo money to the community. It re sents perhaps the biggest and m profitable business we have.

Tourists come here, attracted our natural scenery, and patro our merchants and industries, the beauty of it is the scenery never wear out. No matter how the turnover, our stock can n be depleted.

A business like that is worth veloping. It is worth commerci ing just like any other busines commercialized. For every d

Lady Byng Sends Sympathy To George Vezina and Wife

MONTREAL, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—Lady Byng, who was present at Thursday night's National Hockey League game at Ottawa between the Canadiens and Senators, sent a note to Managing-Director Leo Dandurand, of the Canadiens, after the second period, sympathizing with him in the loss of Georges Vezina, former goaltender of the French-Canadian club, and inquiring as to his present condition.

In the note Lady Byng asked that her sympathies be extended to Mrs. Vezina, and that her message be carried on to Georges himself.

Georges Vezina is still undergoing treatment for the illness which caused his retirement from hockey at the beginning of the present season.

JUNIOR COLTS TIED OUTLAWS

SUMMARY OF PLAY.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 19—The Town League games at Covert's Arena Thursday night were keenly contested affairs. The Outlaws and Junior Colts were deadlocked at three goals each at the end of the allotted playing time and the Clerks were hard pressed to win from the Cloth Co. five to three. The Colts couldn't get going in the first period and the Outlaws were all over them, notching two goals, and looking like sure winners, but the Colts pulled themselves together in the second, and had their share of the play, counting the only score of the period, a rather fluky one; Stewart stopped the shot, but lost control of the puck and it rolled in the cage. The Colts outscored the Outlaws two to one in the final, the tying goal coming much as their first counter, the puck barely rolling over the blue line. The officials were very strict, and handed out numerous penalties, about equally divided. Blume was good for the Outlaws, and had he stayed on the ice in the last period instead of with the penalty timers his team might have emerged with a win.

A Scrappy Game

The Clerk-Cloth Co. game was a scrappy one from the first rush to the end of the game. Labrash evidently came on the ice with a chip on his shoulder, and on his first excursion down the ice, he was tripped by Nicholson, and retaliated by swinging his stick across the Cloth Co. defence man's legs, and continued his bad behaviour all the first period, drawing five penalties during the period.

The officials kept a steady stream of players to the penalty box, the Clerks getting the majority of trips to the timers and it nearly cost them the game. They were playing short handed the better part of the game and in the last session, had three doing time at once, but the Cloth gang were only able to score one goal in the two minutes so well did Labrash and Parsons check the Cloth boys, and the pair nearly got that one back when they carried the rubber from end to end only to miss the goal.

Luchom and Flint played steady defensive hockey and used their bodies to good advantage, while the front line outskated the Cloth boys, and the Clerks deserved their win.

The Clerks are still out in front in the league race but probably have their hardest games ahead with the Hydro and Outlaws.

OSHAWA TAKES HOME BIG LEAD IN INTERMEDIATE O.H.A. SERIES BY BEATING HAVELOCK HERE, 7-1

Railroaders Are Completely Outclassed By Lakeshore Group Winners.

BETTER FINISH.

Work Around Nets Deciding Factor of One-Sided Hockey Match.

(By C. J. B.).

Oshawa Intermediates displayed all the form that enabled them to win the Lakeshore group from such powerful teams as Belleville and Kingston, and swamped Havelock here, 7-1, in a one-sided game last night. In centre ice the game was fairly even, but around the nets the Trent Valley League champs were woefully weak.

Oshawa was superior in every way. The players were faster, worked better together, had more skill around the goals, and their stickhandling was much better than that of the home team. Smith had a distinct edge on Davidson, his rival in the Havelock goal.

The showing of the Havelock forwards was disappointing. Wright was particularly off color, but only during the second period did any of them produce the brand of backchecking which enabled them to beat Peterborough. On the attack they usually shot from outside and Smith would drop his stick and make a baseball catch with both hands. When they did go inside they went too far and had to shoot from a bad angle, or else had Smith do a nose dive along the ice to break up the shot. Combination attacks were few and ended with the pass in front of the nets being missed.

On the other hand the Oshawa players checked back all the way, and displayed a knowledge of just how far to go in on the goal. Loose pucks lying in front of the nets were as good as goals, whereas the Havelock players never followed each other in to get the rebounds. The Motor City boys played a nice combination game, going down two and three abreast and skating around the Havelock defence quite easily. Davidson was tricked several times, but made up for them with some wonderful stops and by clearing from some tight places.

Hard checking was displayed by both teams, with play becoming rather rough on a few occasions. Barney Quinn was the bad man of the piece, serving six terms in the cooler, principally for body checking outside the penalty area. Houck carried his stick high all night and deserved more than the two penalties he received.

A fight in the penalty box enlivened the proceedings just when the rapid scoring of Oshawa in the third period threatened to take away all the interest from the game. An Oshawa fan who had been contributing lustily to the general uproar got into an argument with Barney Quinn, whom he said called him a Polack, and wished to take it out of his hide. Others in the box came to the assistance of the rival disputants and the fiasco ended with several fans being escorted to the door by officers and the box being cleared of all who couldn't show cause for their presence there.

The play of Lowe and Johnston stood out for the winners. Lowe scored four of his team's goals, twice being assisted by his defence mate, while they smothered the Havelock attacks with skill. Houck and Lott played a good game on the forward line, while Rowden contributed a number of dangerous rushes. Doug. Brennan was the best man on the Railroad crew, and Pollock checked hard, if somewhat ineffectively.

Steve Vair of Toronto was referee and was strictly impartial. He kept the game clean by handing out penalties freely, and very few offsides escaped him, although he was panned by rabid partisans of both teams. Large contingents accompanied the rival hockeyists and they kept up a constant roar of yelling and cheering, varied with occasional renderings of "Hail! Hail! the gang's all here."

First Period.

The game had hardly got under way when Lott and Lowe gave the fans a glimpse of the Oshawa strong point when they combined to beat the defence, only to have Davidson intercept the final pass of the rush, allowing Doug. Brennan to go back and give Smith a bullet-like drive to handle. Barney Quinn then stopped Lott with a body check on the blue line, and when Lott, recovering his balance, charged him, both gladiators were waved off. When they returned Houck displayed the back woods way of checking, chopping at Quinn's stick and skates until Referee Vair invited him to take a rest. Quinn went in for another spell a moment later and then, just after the halfway mark, Lowe scored on a rebound from Johnston. Four minutes later, when Quinn was in for his third enforced rest, Lowe robbed Brennan just as he started a rush, circled Hooper and drew out Davidson, which gave him the open net to shoot at for the second goal of the game. Penalties were the only marks made after that. Just before the period ended Johnston tripped Doug. Brennan and then Lott tripped Charlie Brennan, leaving the Oshawa team two men short when the bell rang.

Second Period.

Both teams had a fair share of the period in the second session, and the lead might have been overcome had Havelock displayed a little more finish around the goal. As it was, each scored one. Doug. Brennan bounced a shot over Smith's stick, raising the hopes of the Havelock fans, and then Lott made the lead two again on a close-in play. Only one penalty was issued during this session, Quinn being the culprit. Johnston was hurt by a body check in this period. He remained on the ice but was obliged to retire later.

Third Period.

The Oshawa attack, which had been falling short of the results it promised, bore full fruit in the last period when four goals were scored. Lowe started the count with his third goal of the night a minute after the period opened. Quinn and Houck then staged a battle behind the Havelock goal, and were chased for five minutes. Palmer and Hooper quickly followed for body checks. Lowe added another counter then when he received a perfect pass from Johnston, and Lott counted the last two. On one of his goals he shot and Davidson caught the puck between his pads as he rolled on the ice. When he went to get up the puck dropped loose and Lott slammed the rubber over the goalkeeper into the net. Quinn tripped Stephen to wind up the penalties for the game.

LOSING STREAK FINALLY BROKEN

SCORE 3-2.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—After a string of fourteen consecutive defeats, New York Americans broke their streak at the expense of Pittsburgh here last night, 3 to 2, in a gruelling hockey game. A dazzling shot by Simpson in the final period proved the deciding market. Less than three minutes of the third period was reeled off when Simpson took the puck from mid ice, stood about ten feet in front of the net and shot. Worters shook it out, but Simpson followed up his heave and before Worters had time to return had the disc nestling in the mesh.

OVERTIME GAME WON BY TWEED

GERALDIS STAR.

TWEED, Ont., Feb. 20.—One of the fastest games of the Hastings County League this season was witnessed here last night when the Tweed hockey team defeated Marmora 3-1. Twenty minutes' overtime was played. The ice was in good shape, and the night was ideal. The losers started out fast, and for a few minutes made things interesting for the Tweed players, but after that the Tweed boys appeared to have Marmora outskated.

The first two periods were scrappy and each player rushed for goals. There was nice combination on each side. Bond opened the scoring in the beginning of the third period from a pass by Berry. Then Alex. Geraldi followed shortly with a long shot from left centre ice which tied the score, 1-1.

McWilliams for Marmora made a couple of great rushes but was stopped by the Tweed defence. Alex. Geraldi, Tweed's snappy defence man, made several nice rushes which looked each time like a goal, but Jack and Brady were always in their places. Bond covered nearly all the ice. The teams came on for the ten minutes' overtime with each player working hard but unable to score. When the last of the overtime was about finished Alex. Geraldi picked up the puck from centre ice, getting through the Marmora defence to score. Time was called. He came up the ice so fast and tried to clear the goal-post, but unfortunately hit his head on the goal-post and was carried off the ice, but was soon back again. The puck was again centred, Berry getting it, but he lost to Max Geraldi, who came through on a lone rush and scored again, making the tally 3-1.

The puck was centered again, but time was called.

A. Geraldi, Houston and Max Geraldi starred for Tweed, while Jack, Bond and Berry were the shining lights for the visitors. The game was remarkably free of offences, the only penalty imposed being one minute on a Marmora player. The line-up:

Marmora—Goal, Neal; r. defence, Jack; l. defence, Brady; centre, Bond; r. wing, Berry; l. wing, McWilliams; subs., Jones and Auger.

Referee—Leo Barrett, Belleville.

COLLEGES COMPETE.

McGill Third in Winter Sports at Hanover.

HANOVER, N.H., Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press.)— Four eastern colleges were bunched for the lead of the first annual championship of the International Winter Sports Union here after the ski races and skating events had been concluded yesterday in a drizzling rain. New Hampshire stood first with 15 points, followed by Dartmouth with 14, McGill 13, and Williams 11. Loyola had two points, while Bates was yet to score. Conditions for the ski races were bad on account of rain which caused the cancellation of one of the ski proficiency events.

The meet will be concluded today with snow shoe and ski cross-country races and a ski-jumping contest.

RUM RUNNERS SURE OF VESSEL WHICH ATTACKED

Positive That U. S. Cutter Seneca Fired Upon Eastwood.

HAVE PIECE OF SHELL.

HALIFAX, Feb. 22.—(Canadian Press.)— Positive identification of the United States' cutter alleged to have been the Seneca, that fired upon the Nova Scotia rum running schooler Eastwood while she was anchored about 20 miles off Long Island last week, may be effected through the piece of a partly exploded shell, now in the possession of Harry Linden, super cargo of the Eastwood.

Linden says: "We know the Seneca. We made no mistake. She has two crows nests on her forward star and one on her aft. It is ridiculous to suppose that the ship which attacked us might have been a pirate distinguished."

The super cargo said he had the partly exploded shell in his possession yhich he thought would identify the attacking ship. Captain John Spindler of the Eastwood last night made the following statement in reference to the denial of the captain of the Seneca that he had fired upon the Eastwood:

"I don't like to express myself too strongly over the telephone, but I will say he is telling a positive untruth. He did fire on us. We have proof to show he did."

KAISER CHANGES MODE OF LIVING

Drops Role of Poverty on Prospects of Getting Millions.

GIVES BIG DINNERS.

DOORN, Holland, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press)—With the prospect of receiving millions from Germany as a recompense for the loss of his vast estates, the former Kaiser has dropped his role of poverty and has embarked on a series of receptions and dinners reminiscent of the old Imperial days. The change in the mode of life at his Chateau here is marked. Not only are entertainments given there on a grand scale but the ex-Kaiser and his wife accept invitations to functions elsewhere.

Paris Degree Gives Peggy Joyce Her Fourth Divorce

PARIS, Feb. 22 — It was learned today that Peggy Hopkins Joyce has obtained a divorce on Nov. 23 from Karl Gustav Morner.

The records of the Palais of Justice give her name as Marguerite Upton and her address as 45 Rue Raynourd. Morner's address is put down as Rue Pierre Guerin. No mention is made of his being a Count.

The records also say that the couple were married at Atlantic City on June 2, 1924, and that there are no children.

The divorce was granted on grounds that the husband was not faithful, forsook his domicile and was too fond of his friends. The wife alleged that after she had been married twenty-hour hours she saw that life in common with Morner was "insupportable."

HOMUTH LEADS ADDRESS DEBATE ON RESUMPTION

To-day is Private Members' Day and Will Have Short Session.

FERGUSON TO REPIY.

Premier Will Answer Fisher Charges During Debate To-morrow.

TORONTO, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—This is private members' day in the Legislature, and the session will probably be brief. To-morrow the debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne and the two amendments thereto will proceed. K. K. Homuth (Labor, South Waterloo) will be the first speaker. Mr. Homuth will attack the Government for its alleged lack of policy on the liquor question. He will also deal with local Waterloo County matters in reference to some Government appointments made recently.

It is also understood that Premier Ferguson is to reply to Harold Fisher (Liberal, West Ottawa), who hinted about members being at banquet parties where there was drinking. Mr. Fisher's statements were withdrawn, but have been the subject of considerable comment.

THE WEATHER.

Sunday morning showed that during the night the temperature had been down to 11 degrees below zero. No very cold weather was experienced last night, the lowest being 10 degrees above. More snow has fallen, and there is now a greater depth of the "beautiful" on the ground than at any other time this winter. Usually our heaviest falls of snow are during the first ten days of March. A month from to-day spring should be here, most of the snow have disappeared, many of the more hardy birds arrived, and all nature throbbing with new life. — W. P.

ONE KILLED AND FOUR HURT WHEN ENGINE FALLS

FALL 50 FEET.

Accident Occurs on Construction at Chelsea—Man Crushed.

OTTAWA, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—One man was killed and four others seriously injured on Saturday at Chelsea Que., near here, when a gasoline locomotive and two carloads of cement swept the stopblock from end of a trestle and fell 50 feet to the ground. The men were engaged in constructing a pier for the proposed new dam in the Gatineau River at Chelsea Falls. The dead man is James Oski, 50, of Hull. Oski was crushed beneath the falling engine and instantly killed. Jack Thompson of Chelsea, engineer on the locomotive, fell with the engine and was seriously injured. George Henry Limer, 42, of Port Arthur, Ont., suffered contusion of both legs and lacerations of his fingers.

STATISTICS OF CHURCH UNION

PERCENTAGE 30.52

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Statistical officers of the United Church of Canada have completed their compilations and analysis of the voting by the members of the former Presbyterian Church in Canada on the question of uniting with the Methodist and Congregational churches and which union was consummated on June 10, 1925. An official statement issued Saturday on the basis of these compilations, which include the most accurate returns obtainable, according to the statement, indicate that the percentage of the former Presbyterian church membership which voted out of union was 30.52, or a little less than one-third. The total number of congregations now in the United Church of Canada is 8,699, of which 3,728 were former Presbyterian self-sustaining or aid-receiving charges. The total number of Presbyterian congregations which voted out of union, including eight which voted to remain independent, was 784.

Rev. Dr. George C. Pidgeon, moderator of the General Council of the United Church of Canada accompanies the statement with the following explanation:

"In giving any statement of the exact situation of the congregations of former Presbyterian Church in Canada one has to bear in mind the distinction between congregations and pastoral charges. In the terms of the United Church of Canada Act a congregation means a worshipping unit, or single preaching station, while a charge may be composed of one, or a number of such congregations. Under the provision of the Act the vote on the question of union was taken by congregations and not charges. In this statement, therefore, the figures deal with congregations rather than charges, because a great number of charges divided on the question of union, part entering union and part voting non-concurrence. No account taken of new congregations which have been formed either by Unionist or by Anti-Unionist minorities.

NOBLEMAN'S PLAY IS MUCH CRITICIZED

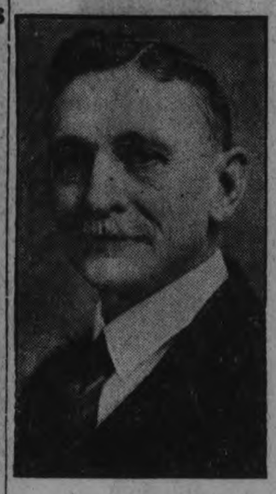
LONDON, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press)—The Earl of Lathome, who has been a playwright for his own amusemeint since 1910, produced a play on Saturday night more or less privately which makes some of London's experienced critics fairly writhe. E. A. Baughan, dramatic critic of the Daily News say: "The play is one of the most disgusting, brutal and low minded that it has ever been my lot to witness."

The Daily Mail describes the play as being thoroughly nasty minded and says everybody in its is either a fool or a waster or without common morals or decency.

ROTARY'S HEAD.



JOHN H. SEELS
President of Peterboro Rotary Club which held its anniversary meeting today.

ANNIVERSARY OF ROTARY MARKED BY FINE MEETING

Rotarian John Gibson Pleads For Better International Feeling.

A BIRTHDAY CAKE.

21st Anniversary of the Founding of Rotary is Fittingly Observed.

The Peterboro Rotary Club fittingly celebrated the 21st anniversary of the beginning of Rotary at the regular weekly luncheon today.

A special anniversary address was given by Rotarian John Gibson of Toronto, former president of the Toronto Rotary Club and former director of Rotary International. The birthday idea was carried out through the use of candles on every table and a huge birthday cake, topped with 21 lighted tapers, adorned the head table.

The programme was in charge of a committee of past presidents with Rotarian Fred L. Roy acting as chairman of the committee.

To Rotarian Roy as the first president of the Peterboro Club, fell the dual honor of cutting the birthday cake and of introducing the speaker of the day.

In introducing Rotarian Gibson Rotarian Roy dwelt upon the great interest the guest of honor had taken in the organization of the Peterboro Club and paid a warm tribute to the part he had played in putting the local organization on its feet.

Rotarian Gibson's address was an eloquent exposition of the sixth object of Rotary, the fostering of a better international understanding and world peace through a world brotherhood of business and professional men animated by the Rotary ideal of service.

It was a plea for every Rotarian to personally contribute toward international good-will by seeking to understand the people of other nations and by seeking to persuade others to do so. Rotarian Gibson pointed out how the worl had gradually develped to the point where international brotherhood could be looked forward to with a good deal of confidence. In the early histry of mankind there had been a virtual state of anarchy. Every man's hand was against every other man; every man felt that every other man's hand was against him. The first upward step was a realization of a family consciousness; of the fact that within the family circle there must be mutual concessions made. From the family this idea spread to the tribe and a tribe loyalty developed. Eventually a national spirit grew out of this tribal loyalty and today the time had arrived when it was seen that there was a duty not only to one's own nation, but to the people of the world.

Rotarian Gibson did not find this belief illogical. If a man were a good father or a good husband there was no reason why he should be not be a good citizen of his community, he was usually a good citizen of his country. There was every reason to feel that without sacrificing his national loyalty and obligations, he could be a good citizen of the world.

The address was thoroughly enjoyed and Rotarian Gibson was tendered a hearty vote of thanks.

In was announced at today's meeting by President John Seels that a Ladies' Night will be held on March 12th, and that an inter-city meeting with the Toronto Club is being arranged.

1,700,000,000 Train Rides In Britain Without Fatality

In the present century there have been two years—1901 and 1908—without a fatality, and in 1909, as in 1925, only one was killed, while in 1916, 1919 and 1923 there were only three. As 1,700,000,000 passenger journeys are made by train every year, chance of death is infinitesimal.

The problem of railway transportation in Great Britain is entirely different from that in the United States. Long hauls are negligible. Sleeping cars are needed only in two directions from London, toward Scotland, a short night's run, and to Plymouth. But in the many thickly populated districts of the country railway tracks form a work such as exists in America only near New York, Chicago and other large citns.

MINERS REMAIN AT WORK TODAY

Observe Washington's Birthday Digging Coal for Public.

PRODUCTION GAINS

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Feb. 22.—All mines of the anthracite coal field worked to-day as a patriotic observation of Washington's birthday, generally observed in other years by the closing down of the mines. This step was taken owing to the demand for coal that exists in the anthracite consuming territory.

Saturday night, after three days of actual work at the mines, it is reported that inside conditions are generally cleared up and that during this week production will be carried to within 85 per cent. of the normal. From this point to full capacity will be an easy step, mining officials declare.

Adding to the difficulty of the operating end was an unusual flow of water last week to the underground sections. This was due to a rainfall on top of a heavy fall of snow. A drop in temperature and a turning to snow instead of rain, checked this so that operations will not be hampered by high water levels.

Coke Demand Established.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 22.—Coal operators of the Connellsville field expect the lessons learned by Eastern consumers during the anthracite coal strike to benefit them in the future. They say it has been demonstrated that in place of the 25 per cent. ash left in the burning of hard coal only 11 to 12 per cent. is left in coke burning and 8 per cent. in burning bituminous coal.

Because of the small amount of ash residue and the intense heat generated by coke, producers here say that a market has been established in the East for domestic-sized coke and that future years will see a big increase in the demand.

While the price of coke has dropped from $10 a ton to around $3.50 at the ovens here, the demand, due to the settlement of the anthracite strike, while greatly lessened, has not fallen away to a point expected by producers.

REPORT PROMISED ON SOCIAL MORALITY

Mayor Says Police Committee Will Investigate Conditions in Cobourg.

COBOURG, Feb. 22.—Under the caption "Will report on social morality", Mayor Fred J. McArthur makes this statement officially in the Cobourg press relative to a discussion of the moral condition of the town, which took place at a session of the Town Council.

"A meeting of the police committee was called on Saturday night the object of which was to consider the charges and accusations made at last Council session, and to deal with all matters pertaining thereto, in every degree of fairness and thoroughness with the thought of placing responsibility where it belongs and removing blame and censure where not deserved. A full report will be brought in next Council meeting by the chairman of the Police committee.

HEIR TO FORTUNE OF TWO MILLION BURNED TO DEATH IN HOTEL CHAIR

Friend Barely Escaped From Room in Chicago Hotel—Cigarette Started Fire—Both Had Visited Cabarets and Victim Was Drunk.

DIVORCED AS INEBRIATE IN 1925

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—Frederick Beverly Pearson, 30 years old, with a $50,000 alimony settlement seven months back of him and a $2,000,000 legacy five years ahead of him, burned to death Saturday morning in a chair in his apartment at the Claridge Hotel, into which he had flopped, following an all-night jollification, to smoke a sobering-up cigarette.

John Howard Hogshead, son of the Rev. Luther Hogshead, pastor of the Rogers Park Evangelical Lutheran Church, Pearson's companion in the room, was awakened by the flames in time to escape with a few burns.

About 5 o'clock Saturday morning, not so very long after prohibition agents had raided a theatrical party at the Claridge, Pearson and his friend went, not to his apartment at the Ambassador, but to a room at the Claridge.

Sat Up For Telephone Call.

Philip Hanley, the bell boy who showed them to their room, testified at the inquest that Hogshead was "pretty sober," but that Pearson was "so drunk he could hardly get upstairs."

Hogshead, he said, tossed off his shoes and threw himself across one of the beds to get some sleep. His friend insisted upon sitting up and smoking. He was waiting, he said, for a telephone call from the Ambassador Hotel.

"The next thing I knew," Hogshead explained, "was when I woke up, choking in the smoke and flame."

He made his way down stairs. Bellboys came, firemen rushed in, and when the flames were out, there amid the wreckage, was the body of the young millionaire, burned to a crisp.

Had Tried to Reform Pearson.

Hogshead said that Pearson and he had attended the six-day bicycle races and then visited several cabarets. He added that Pearson had been drinking heavily. Hogshead declared that the flames cut him off from Pearson and that he had barely time to save his own life.

The Rev. Mr. Hogshead, when informed of his son's narrow escape, said the two young men had been companions for several months, but that his son had been trying to reform Pearson.

Mrs. Gladys Samma Pearson, Pearson's wife, had also attempted to reform him after she married him in January, 1922, but on July 3, 1925, she obtained a divorce, charging habitual drunkenness. Mrs. Pearson, at that time agreed to accept a $50,000 settlement instead of claiming a share of the $2,000,000 inheritance.

Under the will of the elder Pearson, who died six years ago, the young man was to come into possession of $2,000,000 on his thirty-fifth birthday, five years hence.

Murderers' Pay Very Low Skilled Men Get $20 a Week

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Feb. 22 (United Press).—Rafaele Daniolle, convicted gunman, told District Attorney Deed that gangsters are paid from $10 to $20 in retainers each to do their master's murdering. Single men get $10, married men $20 per week. A youth with a father to support earned $15 a week with his trigger finger.

"How many murders were you connected with?" Daniolle was asked.

"About thirteen or fourteen."

LINDSAY LIQUOR FINE OF $1,000

Magistrate Refused To Believe Evidence for the Defense.

PRISON TERM, TOO.

LINDSAY, Feb. 22.—At Saturday's session of the police court, "Pinky" Gassien, a well-known resident of the town, who has been convicted on former occasions of infractions of the O.T.A. was fined $1,000 and nine months' imprisonment for selling liquor. In default of payment an additional nine months must be served. Gassien conducted his own defence.

The charge was laid following the apprehension of a citizen named Yelland who was under the influence of drink. He informed License Inspector Porter and Provincial Officer Storey that he secured two six-ounce battle from Gassien's house, paying $2.50 for the supply.

Gassien, in his evidence denied selling Yelland liquor. The money was produced, but the accused swore that he ordered Yelland out of the house. Another man, Martin, who was in the house at the time swore that he saw no liquor. Gassien further stated that Yelland told the court his story because he was mad because he did not secure liquor. Gassien's wife also give evidence to the effect that there was no liquor sold or produced on the evening in question.

Police Magistrate Bradford, in reviewing the evidence, stated that he did not believe Martin's evidence and would not give it any consideration. Gassien, he declared, was a parasite and a nuisance to the public. He had been convicted on occasions for infractions of the Temperance Act, and still persisted in ignoring the law. A lengthy term in prison, he felt would give him time for reflection.

THREE IN HOSPITAL.

Car Collides With Radial Car at Curve Near Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Feb. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Five members of the Hawes family, of St. Catharines, were injured, two of them fatally, in an accident at Schwabb's curve, near Grimsby, last Saturday night when their automobile collided with a G. and B. radial car. They were removed to the General Hospital here, where Florence Hawes, 12 years old, succumbed yesterday morning to internal injuries. Fred Hawes, her 18 year old brother, who was said to have driven the car, succumbed last night to a fractured skull. He never regained consciousness.

Follows Hounds Soon After Recovery From Recent Accident.

MELTON MOWBRAY, England, Feb. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales is back in the saddle. Undeterred by his recent fall in which he suffered a fracture of the collar bone he joined the members of the Blankley Hunt and followed the hounds on Saturday. His collar bone is said to have knitted nicely.

In Convent For 40 Years Nuns Amazed At Changes

MEXICO CITY, February 22.—(Canadian Press. — Some of the nuns from isolated convents closed by the government, have appeared in the streets for the first time in forty years. They literally entered a new world, and appeared amazed and mystified at the changes that they saw. Never before had they seen automobiles or street cars! They appeared to be rather helpless.

Y.W.C.A. PARTY FOR CHILDREN

Over 200 Tiny Tots Take in Valentine Social.

PRIZES GIVEN.

Over 200 children, mostly in fancy costume, thronged into the big gymnasium at 10 o'clock. A programme of games and drills composed the programme. The boys' class entertained the others by an exhibition of tumbling, rope climbing, etc. The Juniors danced the Highland Fling, and the Junior Dancing Class, the Dance of the Puppets; and the Babies, little tots from 2 to 6 years, gave a drill and little dance. A Grand March was then played and the judges, after great difficulty, called the following children to the platform, awarding little prizes:

Gertrude Comstock Old-Fashioned Lady; Ellie Saunders, Original Polish Peasant; Bertha Belleghem, prettiest costume, Valentine Sweetheart; Maudie Heron, pretty Cupid. The following received honorable mention: Jean Ackerman, Summer Dandy; Betty McLeod, Red Riding Hood; Elizabeth McIntosh, Old-Fashioned Girl; Katheleen Lawrence, Little Dutch Girl; Wilda Saunders, Gypsy Queen; Florence Trebilcock, Indian; Alex. Heron, Pirate; Patsy Graham, Pierrot; Roy Murphy, Hobo.

Refreshments were then served in the domestic science room and every child went home clasping a Valentine and very happy and well pleased with the party.

The tonic and laxative effect of Laxative BROMO QUININE Tablets will fortify the system against Grip, Influenza and other serious ills resulting from a Cold.

PASTEURIZATION OF CREAM FOR BUTTER MAKING, NEW PROPOSAL

Provided in Bill Introduced in Legislature By Hon. Mr. Martin.

GRADING REQUIRED.

Dispense With By-election For Minister, Also Outlined.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Hon John S. Martin introduced a bill in the legislature Friday afternoon to provide for the compulsory grading of cream. The act is to come into effect by proclamation as there are some sections which could not be put into force immediately.

Besides providing for the grading of cream the act also contains clauses to increase the sanitation of butter making plants. The actual work of grading cream will take place at the creameries with officers of the department of agriculture always being available to assist and instruct.

Pasteurizing Cream.

Another clause provides for the pasteurization of all cream used in butter making. This clause will not be made effective immediately as it involves in many cases extra equipment but creameries are given notice that they will be expected to prepare for it in the near future. It is also proposed to grade butter makers so that first and second class certificates will be issued according to the training and education of the butter maker. Another clause gives the minister power to co-operate with the Federal Minister of Agriculture or act himself in the matter of having butter marketed in uniform packages.

European Trips.

Friday being set apart for the answering of questions, Premier Ferguson continued by giving information as to members of the government who had gone to Europe and the cost. The total cost to the province of the trips of ministers, it developed, was $6,500.

The premier stated that Mr. McCrea was in England in connection with the general promotion of the mining industry of Northern Ontario. He was there from April to June and the trip cost the province $3,000.

Hon. J. S. Martin, minister of agriculture, had gone to Wembley as commissioner for Ontario and to Denmark to investigate the dairying industry. His expenses were $2,000.

Hon. Forbes Godfrey was in Geneva for the International Labor Congress. He was away seven weeks, and his expenses paid by the province were $1,500.

The premier added that Hon. Lincoln Goldie, provincial secretary, had been in Europe for seven weeks and the premier himself for ten weeks, but as they had no official mission no part of their expenses were paid by the province.

Drastic change in the custom of Ontario elections will result if the amendment to the Legislative Assembly Act introduced by Mr. Nickle is passed by the Legislature. The bill provides that it shall be unnecessary for persons selected as Cabinet Ministers to return to their electorate for re-election after having assumed that post in future elections.

Not Wedded To It.

"While I am introducing this bill I am not so firmly wedded to it that I could not be prevailed to drop it," stated the Attorney General. "It seemed to me, however, that it was a great waste of money to have another election to validate the selection of men for the cabinet."

Hon. W. E. Raney stated that at first glance he was disposed to the bill going further, but at the same time the Progressive leader objected to the act which permitted a school inspector to run for the legislature as half of his salary was paid by the province.

"I do not make this statement because my late opponent was a school inspector, although that is what brought the matter to my mind," he stated.

Married Women's Act.

Hon. Mr. Nickle introduced a bill to amend the Married Women's Property Act; the Magistrates Act, and the Public Authorities Protection Act, the amendments and consolidations being recommended by the Revising Commission.

Mr. Sinclair asked if C. R. McKeown, (Conservative, Dufferin) was speaking with the sanction of the Government at a public meeting in Toronto Thursday night when he declared that public sentiment behind the Ontario Temperance Act would be wiped out within a year. The Premier replied that he never tried to put restrictions on any man's freedom of speech. He was not responsible for the speech.

As To The O.T.A.

"This Government believes that no laws should be on the statute books that cannot be enforced," said the Premier. "As long as the O.T.A. is on the statute books it will be enforced. If we have anything to say about it the Government will take the house and the public into its confidence."

W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal leader, took occasion to deny the rumor that he was slated for the bench. "That rumor is as vague as the Government's temperance policy," he declared.

MUSICAL RECITAL.

A very interesting recital, with a large attendance of parents and friends of those taking part, was held on Friday evening last at the home of Miss Marion Adams, whose pupils gave an entertaining programme of instrumental music, assisted by Mrs. E. Kitney, vocalist.

The recital was preceded by a talk by Miss Adams, who outlined the purposes of the "B Sharp" Club, sponsored by her, as a development of the child in three ways; first, toward a broad, sound musicianship, second, to train the pupil to play for audiences, and third, to develop the student socially.

The recital was followed by the presentation to Miss Adams of a large bouquet of flowers from her pupils, and by the service of dainty refreshments. The programme was as follows:

Piano solo, "Jack and Jill," by Whipple Kelly; piano solos, "Fire Bells" and "The Canoe Ride," by Doris Skinner; papers, "How Music Began," and "Music of the Early Church," by Isabel Cragg; piano solo, "March of the Tin Soldiers," by Harry Marsh; vocal solo, "When My Ships Come Sailing Home," by Mrs. E. Kitney; piano solo, "Soldier's March," by Isabel Cragg; paper, "Notation," by Allison Gordon; duet, "In the Attic," by Margaret and Betty Lytle; piano solo, "Sailing," by Margaret Preston; reading, "Young Students," by Annie Gordon; piano solo, "Good Night, Dearie," by Margaret Lytle; duet, "Evening," by Margaret Preston and Miss Adams; vocal solo, "Roses," by Mrs. E. Kitney, and encore, "Tiptoe"; piano solo, "The Sick Mama Doll," by Betty Lytle; piano solos, "Musette," and "Rondo Villageois," by Marguerite Kidd; piano solo, "Sonatina, First Movement," by Allison Gordon; paper, "Minnesingers and Meistersingers," by Marguerite Kidd, and piano solo, Beethoven's "Sonata," Opus 49, by Dorothy Bamforth.

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITHOUT the blister. Apply it with the fingers. You feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

DO THIS AFTER SEVERE ILLNESS

How To Speedily Gain Strength and Put On Needed Weight.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines extracted from the livers of the common codfish to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

So nowadays, medical men who keep up with the times are ordering a tablet containing the vitamines that give to frail folks vigor, strength and weight—a tablet that is known as McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablet—and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped of their natural strength after any severe illness.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 pounds or more in 30 days. As a matter of fact your druggist is authorized to return your money if you don't take on 5 pounds in 30 days.

Be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Extract Tablets. McDermid and Jury, James Lynch, Bond's Drug Store, and druggists everywhere, have a big demand for them, and millions are sold monthly all over North and South America. They are sugar-coated and as easy to take as candy. 60 tablets 60 cents.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

PETERBORO COUNTY FARMERS ENDORSE MINER'S INDICTMENT

Crow is Generally Much Disliked by Local Agriculturists.

BLACK AS PAINTED

Very Few Put in Good Word—More Harm Than Good.

Jack Miner's indictment of the crow as a pest to the farmer, and a tyrant in the feathered world, is generally endorsed by Peterborough farmers, who are almost undivided in their support of the famous naturalist's methods of disposing of the "flying rat." While in other quarters some people have come forward in defence of the crow, there is no evidence of any sentimental regard for it in this district. The belief here is that the crow is as black as he is painted and then some, and the grain grower's comment on Jack Miner's warfare is a 'more power to his elbow."

Reeve A. Middleton.

Albert Middleton, reeve of Smith township, approached by The Examiner for his opinion on the controversy, gave his emphatic approval to any plan likely to exterminate the crow. Mr. Middleton stated that there was no question of the fact that the crow was an enemy to the agriculturist. In his opinion, while the crow undoubtedly preyed at times on noxious insects, the good accomplished in this way was more than counterbalanced by his depredations at seeding time. Seeds sown in fields situated near woodlands were especially liable to attacks by crows. They were also destructive to peas, said the reeve, who added that it was well known that the carrying away of chickens was also one of the crow's vices. The crow, added Mr. Middleton, was not protected by law in any way, and could be slaughtered at any time. He believed there was a by-law prohibiting the carrying of a gun in the township, but while he did not think the by-law had been repealed, it was not nowadays enforced. He added that he had found the use of strychnine very effective. Eggs, containing the poison, were laid out in the fields, beyond the range of poultry, and the large numbers of dead crows scattered on the ground showed that the poison had done its work.

Deputy-Reeve G. H. Simpson.

George H. Simpson, deputy-reeve of Smith, was equally emphatic in his condemnation of the crow. There was no doubt in his mind that the crow was an expensive guest to the farmer. "Some say the crow eats a lot of harmful insects," remarked Mr. Simpson, "but I am sure he does more harm than good. If I had my way I would take a chance on it and kill them all off." With regard to the charge that the crow is a medium for the spreading of hog cholera, Mr. Simpson stated that he had no knowledge of any specific instances where this had occurred. As to the claim that the crow was an asset in combating the corn-borer, Mr. Simpson pointed out that the corn-borer was unknown in this area, and placed against the crow's dubious worth in this respect, the undoubted fact of its raiding proclivities among chickens and smaller song-birds. "There is the robin," observed the deputy-reeve, "a bird we all think a great deal of. Well, the crow steals its eggs and carries off its young." Mr. Simpson also spoke of the crow's fondness for ripping up the sod and devouring the newly sown seed. A few eggs with the tops knocked off and containing some strychnine, placed at strategic points on the fields, invariably resulted in mortality among the crows, and a number of carcasses lying around as a warning to the others. Mr. Simpson thinks that Jack Miner's trap, with which 510 crows were captured, must be an ingenious contrivance, for he gives the crow credit for a great deal of cunning and intelligence not very far below that of the fox.

E. A. Scott.

E. A. Scott, president of the Peterborough U. F. O. Club, also agreed that the numbers of the crows ought to be reduced. The crow, like everything else, had been placed on the earth for a purpose, but it was difficult to see exactly what useful function it performs. "In March it is the first bird to come north and when it arrives we know Spring is near. In some years the crows tear the seed corn out of the ground. Last year a North Monaghan man had to plant his fields all over again on account of the havoc wrought by the crows. The soil was light and sandy and the blackbirds got at the seeds as well. After the plant has grown three or four inches high it is quite safe from damage from the crows. A good way is to sow a little deeper than usual, then put the roller over the ground, making it firmer and less easily torn up."

Citing cases where arsenic had been used successfully as a means of extermination, Mr. Scott said this method had to be used with caution on account of the danger to poultry. Personally, he preferred to use coal tar, and coal oil with turpentine. This made the seeds unpleasant to the taste and resulted in the crows leaving them alone. While recognizing that Jack Miner is an expert on bird life and its practical relation to farming, Mr. Scott doubts if the naturalist will succeed in appreciably thinning the ranks of the crows, which breed all over Canada. He mentioned that most of the corn seed used in the neighborhood came from Jack Miner's district. He declared he had often seen the crow robbing the nests of smaller birds and stated he had often gone to the rescue of chickens which the crows were attempting to carry off.

While the crow did some good, he did not think it was worth its board.

The crow was a remarkably intelligent bird, he thought, and was also remarkably impudent. The ordinary scarecrow was little protection. After a day or two the crows commonly perched on it without the slightest sign of fear.

C. E. Moore.

C. E. Moore, vice-president of the Peterborough U. F. O., expressed himself as having very little use for the crow. "I agree entirely with Jack Miner," he said, "the crow is certainly not much of a help to us. It probably does some good in devouring harmful insects, but there are other birds more useful in this district. And then there is no doubt ore the crow' liking for corn. When they get after corn, they are very severe on it, digging up the plants after they have come up through the ground. They tear up whole rows of corn, in many cases leaving very little for the farmer. They are nemies of both game birds and poultry. If they find a hen's nest, they will carry away all the eggs, and will seize young turkeys and chickens, whenever possible. They destroy songbirds. In act, they are like the cannibals of the South Sea Islands. Their choice of diet gets them into disfavor. I think we would be well rid of them."

There is some talk among the farmers here of making application to Jack Miner for a set of blueprints of the net trap.

Obituary Written For Hen Details Wonderful Career

The first obituary of a hen ever issued in California (perhaps in the entire world) was published recently by Miss Etta M. Wilkerson, of Auburn, in explanation of the elaborate funeral services with which she buried her "Dolly Gray" in an expensive and specially manufactured casket. The obituary reads: "Dolly Gray, Light Brahma, born at Janesville, Iassen county, June 1, 1916; died at Auburn, Placer county, October 29, 1925. Began laying on Thanksgiving Day, 1916, producing one egg a day until the morning of death; and two a day twice during 1917. Total output, 3,359 eggs, or one short of 280 dozen. Deceased was born in an incubator, raised a pet, loved humans, and feared the first full-grown chicken she saw. She was trained by a public school teacher, could recognize the voice of her owner over the telephone, and answered 'yes' or 'no' by nods of the head."

SHIPPING BOARD HANDLED MORE

Increase of $31,000 in Live Stock Shipped From Peterboro.

TOTAL OVER $100,000

The reports presented at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Live Stock Shipping Board for 1925 showed an increase of over $31,000 over 1924, the total value of the livestock handled being $103,190.43. Of this amount $96,433.58 was paid to the owners; the balance was taken up in paying for freight, yardage feed, commissions, etc.

After paying for all losses and expenses for the year, the revenue account showed a balance of $286.68. Any animals killed or injured in transit are paid for at market value.

Since the board was organized in May, 1922, the total value of livestock marketed is $290,972.82.

The members of the board for 1925 were C. E. Moore, president; Stanley Higgins, vice-president; G. E. Galvin, E. Corkery, Bruce Savigny, James Killen and Charles Brown, secretaries; auditors were Jas. A. Young and Henry D. Coons; stock shipper, C. H. Brown.

POULTRY FEEDS WELL WRITTEN

Department of Agriculture Has Issued Good Booklet.

MANY ARTICLES

Several inquiries have been received recently for a good book on poultry feeds. I have just received from the federal department of agriculture their Bulletin No. 1—new series. It is entitled "Poultry Feeds and Feeding," and was written by George Robertson, assistant Dominion poultry husbandman. Every poultry keeper who reads this cannot do a better thing for himself than to write immediately to the publication branch, department of agriculture. Ottawa, for a copy of this bulletin. It is by an acknowledged authority and while it is a book of only 30 pages it is very comprehensive.

There are articles on balanced ration, grain by-products, green feeds, animal feeds and mineral feeds. Feeding methods are discussed in a special illustrated article. The vitamine content of feeds is shown in a convenient table with separate columns for vitamines A, B and C. Wheat is highly spoken of as poultry food and the interesting statement is made that shrunken wheat is considerably richer in protein than the higher grade wheats, but it must be perfectly sweet, as musty or fermented feeds are always dangerous to use.

A second valuable table in this interesting bulletin is that on the composition and digestible nutrients of feeds. This shows the percentages of protein, carbohydrates and fat in 75 or 80 different feeds as well as the digestible percentage of each constituent as compared to the total. Mineral salts in feeding stuffs are dealt with by the same tabulated method. This is certainly a book that every poultryman should have as it answers his feeding problems in a concise definite manner without the necessity of wading through pages of unnecessary reading.

BIRD FARMER

Edwin J. Baker is the manager and owner of one of the largest pigeon growing farms in the middle west, located at Brookville, Ind. His pigeon and squab farm houses 5000 birds. Baker attributes his financial success with the farm to the fact that he has raised pigeons in such quantities that enable him to buy feed in large amounts.

RAWDON FARMER HAS CLEAN HERD

No Reactors to First Test Among Ayrshires of Fred. Howes.

UP-TO-DATE FARM

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 22.—Fred Howes of Rawdon Township, is another young farmer who has taken up the raising of pure bred stock and he is coming to the front as one of the most successful in the Ayrshire Breeders' Club of Menie, of which he is a member. Mr. Howes has a fully accredited herd of 23 Ayrshires, not one of which reacted when submitted to the tuberculin test. He is the first breeder in either Northumberland or Hastings County to have an entire herd come through clean on the first test.

Mr. Howes is enterprising in all branches of farming and his buildings and methods of cultivation are up to date in every particular.

Farm Notes

BAILIEBORO, Feb. 22.—The farmers of this district welcomed the recent snow, which has covered up the bare places in the fall wheat fields, and upon the new seeds.

For some time the fields have been quite bare of snow, and it has been giving the farmers considerable anxiety over their fall wheat, and newly-sown seeds. During the past three weeks the frequent rains have left considerable ice on the fields, and the farmers believe that this is extremely hard upon their winter crops.

The roads are now in excellent condition and the farmers are making use of them in getting their heavy hauling completed, such as hauling their grain to the elevators, both to Port Hope and Fraserville, drawing home their next winter's supply of wood, hauling gravel for their annual statute labour, and ice, etc., and also getting in their seed grain, so that they won't have anything to hinder them when the time comes to commence spring work owing to the fact that wheat has commenced to drop in price; hundreds of bushels daily are being hauled to the local elevators at Port Hope and Peterborough. It is generally considered that after this week the majority of the wheat from this district will be out of the farmers' barns.

The roads are now in excellent condition for hauling heavy loads.

LOCKING A NUT

Two Good Methods of Preventing Them From Slipping.

One way to lock a nut is to screw it down as tightly as possible, then saw down through the top of the protruding end of the bolt with a hack-saw. When these halves are spread apart with a cold chisel, nothing will force the nut off.

Another plan is to saw down through the bolt, file a notch on one corner of the nut, then put in a wire and twist it, If the lock is to be on a machine with excessive vibration, the nut may work loose unless locked, and wear the threads away.

Incidentally, more farm folks should have hack-saws. A good one costs less than $1, and it will cut wood or metal.

INVENTORY IMPORTANT.

An annual inventory is considered one of the best checks that a farmer has on his financial situation. This inventory gives the farmer a true and complete picture of the year's work and results.

When the winter's supply of waterglass eggs is consumed, persons who have kept eggs in this way may find it difficult to remove the hard crust which clings to the sides of the crocks. Hot water may be used to get this material off, and if this fails, adda few drops of hydrochloric acid

Poison bran mash scattered at sunset over volunteer wheat or late alfalfa will control the army worm.

Every neglect in poultry raising has its cost.

A CANADIAN STABLE AFLOAT DESCRIBES NEW CATTLESHIP WHICH CROSSED LAST MONTH

CARRIES 1,168

S. S. Ontario Carries a Permanent Crew of Experienced Herdsmen.

"A Canadian stable afloat." Such was the expression used by Charles Bauckham, secretary of Livestock Steamships Limited, in describing S. S. Ontario, which sailed from St. John, N. B., on January 24th as the first boat out of a Canadian port to carry an exclusive cargo of live cattle destined for the British market. Her exact destination was unknown at the time of sailing; her clearance papers stipulated merely "a British port." Some time before reaching the coast of Britain she will be directed by wireless, by the shippers of the cattle aboard, to put into some particular port—that port having been determined by the comparison of cabled reports from various British market centres, received after the date of putting to sea. Her first cargo consisted of 1,168 head of cattle, shipped by Livestock Producers of Canada, Limited.

Comfort the Keynote.

In the fitting up of the interior of S. S. Ontario, maximum comfort for the cattle was the watchword at all times. All five decks are partitioned off into box stalls, each stall large enough to accommodate four head without crowding. Feed and water troughs are so arranged that they can be thoroughly cleaned every day. Water is at hand in pipe lines, and does not have to be carried in pails. Facilities are at hand for the removal of manure from the pens every day and for the supplying of fresh dry bedding as required. Each deck is provided with turbine ventilators of a capacity to produce a complete change of air every six minutes.

This policy of comfort for the cattle was not dictated by any particular humanitarian feelings on the part of the owners of the ship, but rather by sound business judgment. One of the most serious drawbacks to the cattle exporting business in the past has been the heavy shrinkage in weight during transit, brought about very largely by the lack of such equipment as is mentioned above. Cattle shipped in the regular mixed-cargo boats have been very often crowded into quarters which were dark, poorly ventilated, and without any proper facilities for feeding, watering or cleaning. All water had to be carried in pails, with the result that the cattle were often forced to go thirsty. Usually no attempt at cleaning the pens was made during the entire voyage. As a result the cattle lost much weight during the voyage and their appearance on arrival was not such as to appeal to the eye of the prospective buyer. It is anticipated by the officers of Livestock Steamships Limited that the better care of the stock which their facilities will make possible, will eliminate shrinkage entirely, and may even bring about an actual gain in weight during the ocean voyage.

Another factor bearing upon the matter of shrinkage, which the new company has seen fit to improve—and which is quite as important as that of suitable quarters—is that of adequate and proper attendance. In the past it has been the custom to employ as cattle attendants any men who might wish to earn their passage across the ocean in that way. These men usually know little or nothing about cattle, and not being experienced sailors they are often incapacitated for a considerable portion of the trip—both of which conditions operate directly against proper care of the cattle during the voyage. Moreover, they are merely transients and not interested in the work as a permanent means of subsistence. Livestock Steamships, Ltd., has engaged as cattle attendants upon S. S. Ontario, a permanent crew of thirty-five experienced cattlemen, who in the first place know how to care for cattle, and who in the second place must give service in order to hold their jobs. It would be difficult to overestimate the value of such a permanent staff to the cattle shipper, as compared with a transient staff.

A New Era.

The sailing of the S. S. Ontario on January 24th marks the commencement of what may easily be a new era in Canada's export trade in live market cattle. If the facilities offered by this boat bring as much satisfaction to shippers as is anticipated, and as logically may be expected, the export business will feel an impetus greater than any it has experienced in many years. And there is no doubt of the power of the market in Britain to absorb many more Canadian cattle than have been shipped in the past. During a visit to the British Isles last summer, Mr. Kennedy, president of the new company, and also president of Livestock Producers of Canada, Limited, probably the largest exporters of cattle in this country at the present time, found that only ten per cent. of the live cattle being imported by Britain were of Canadian origin, the balance coming almost entirely from Ireland. This condition existed in spite of the fact that many British dealers declared their preference for Canadian cattle. From his inquiries at that time, Mr. Kennedy became convinced that Canada can ship four times as many cattle per year as were shipped in 1925 without causing any glut on the markets overseas.

The S. S. Ontario is not to be the sole boat in this livestock service. Her owners plan to establish a complete line of as many steamers as may be found necessary to take care of the business offering. Options have already been taken on three more steamers of the same type, which can be fitted up similarly to the first. A regular schedule of sailing dates will be worked out, each boat being scheduled to make a complete round trip every 27 days. All boats will be operated on the principle of wireless-control of destination, which allows the shippers every possible opportunity to take advantage of latest cabled market reports. All boats will carry a permanent crew of experienced cattlemen as attendants. The service of these boats will be available to all shippers at the standard rates charged by all steamship lines. In the case of cargo being composed of shipments consigned by several different exporters, the shipper owning the largest number on the boat will control the destination of the boat on that trip, but if the other do not concur in that destination they will have the privilege of landing their cattle at any other port at a slight additional cost. During the summer months the boats will operate from the Port of Quebec and in the winter from the Port of St. John.

Improved shipping facilities on the Atlantic will have a direct effect upon livestock production in Ontario and all other provinces of Canada, in at once stimulating a demand for export cattle. With the accommodation available in the past very few shippers could make money in the export trade, and in consequence the great bulk of our cattle have had to be slaughtered for home consumption. As pointed out in an editorial in "Ontario Farmer" some time ago, our abbatoirs have not been able to ship chilled meat to Britain on account of the fact that it has to be sold there at practically the same prices as chilled meat from the Argentine, which are too low to permit of a profit. The British consumer does not differentiate between chilled meat from Canada, which is not more than two weeks in transit, and chilled meat from the Argentine which has to be kept in the "cooler" for six weeks or more; "chilled meat" is simply "chilled meat" to him, and ony a country with all-year pasture can supply him at the price which he will pay for it. Only by shipping our cattle alive, to be slaughtered there and sold as fresh killed beef, can we obtain prices which will make production profitable under Canadian climatic conditions.

Those Behind the Venture.

The chief moving psirit of this new venture is Mr. H. P. Kennedy. With him are associated Capt. Albert Jensen, steamship operator of London and Copenhagen, Charles Bauckham, Manager of Sterling Trusts Corporation, Toronto, and a group of business men in Toronto, Winnipeg, and Edmonton. Most of those interested were present at St. John to watch the loading and departure of S. S. Ontario on her maiden trip.

The importance which is placed upon this new trans-Atlantic cattle service is evidenced by the presence also at St. John, on January 24th, of Dr. J. H. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Dominion, Dr. D. Jamieson, Chairman of the Ontario Agricultural Inquiry Commission and five other members of the Commission, R. T. Gilroy, President United Farmers of Ontario, Joseph E. Thompson, Speaker of the Ontario Legislature, and other prominent men interested in agriculture, livestock markets and transportation.

An interesting sidelight on the situation lies in the fact that the S. S. Ontario on her maiden voyage experienced one of the worst gales which Atlantic shipping has experienced in years. A wireless message was received by Mr. Kennedy when the boat was two days out of port and in the midst of the storm, stating that no serious trouble was being experienced with the cattle and that the ship was proceeding satisfactorily.—Ontario Farmer.

A complete dormant spray controls not only scale, but European red-mite, leaf-roller and aphis. Lime-sulphur alone won't do all these jobs. Some of the miscible oils will.

Biddy Fooled Again; This Time By Nature

The hen is very easily fooled. Like all willing workers, she is continually having something put over on her. Turn on the electricity in the hen-house morning and evenings, when the days are short and she will work by artificial light and never seems to know the difference.

This winter, nature herself, has pulled one on Biddy. The weather has been so mild that she is quite convinced that "Spring has came," and is shelling out the eggs just as freely as she usually does in April. The consequence is the market is overstocked and fancy prices for eggs this winter gone a glimmering. Twenty-eight cents is being paid at country points. In B.C. the situation is such that eggs are being sold to the eastern markets by the car lot on consignment.

HENS A HOBBY

Most any preacher likes to eat chicken but it is a little more unusual when you find ones who likes to raise them. The Rev. C. W. Marlow of Pendleton, Ind., enjoys caring for chickens so well that he makes it his hobby. In raising chickens, just as a hobby, he has become widely known as a breeder of Rhode Island Reds, and an authority on poultry in general. He is called upon to judge poultry at shows all over the country.

COSTS MONEY TO SELL HOLSTEINS

Seymour Man, Not Member of Association, Must Pay Registry Fees.

NOT ALL VELVET

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 22.— All the financial turnover in the pure-bred stock business is not velvet as the following transaction will show. William Anderson, of Seymour West, recently sold a male calf, seven months old and of Holstein breed, to J. Duff of Warkworth. As Mr. Anderson is not a member of the Holstein Breeders' Association it will cost him $3.00 to have this animal registered. The registration fee for members is now $1.50. In addition to the registration fee, Mr. Anderson will be required to pay $1.00 to have the transfer officially recorded.

The calf, which will be officially known as King Josco Dekol, belongs to a well-developed branch of the great Holstein family, his dam being Madaline Jane Dekol and his sire, King Josco Calamity, both of the latter having been bred by Herbert McMillan of Norwood, from whom Mr. Anderson purchased the dam some time ago.

WANT CLEANER FOR THEIR SEED

Seymour Fair Board Asks Department to Install One.

ONE FOR PERCY

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 22.— The directors of the Seymour Agricultural Society have requested the Department of Agriculture to install at Campbellford a seed cleaning plant for the benefit of the farmers of the district. The chances are that such a plant will be in operation before the opening of the Spring seeding so that the farmers will be able to sow seed that is perfectly free from every variety of noxious weeds. One man can handle the machine that cleans the grain and a small fee per bushel will be charged the farmers who make use of it.

Grain grown in Northumberland county is rated high in all the seed markets of the country but there is a beliefs that by still more thorough cleaning its quality may be further improved.

At Warkworth, Too.

The Percy fair directors are also negotiating for the establishment of a similar station at Warkworth.

HIGH GRADE SIRE BROUGHT TO SMITH

C. E. Moore Has Purchased Holstein With Good Record and Pedigree.

Lakeview Dutchland Johanna Lad, number 35713, sired by Dutchland Colantha Sir Mona, dam Lakeview Daisy, an eight-year-old Holstein bull, has recently been purchased by C. E. Moore, Smith township, from J. J. Johnston of Parkhill, Ont. This bull is a high testing animal, combining good show qualities and high dairy production. He is descended from two famous families, the Colantha Johanna family and the Pieterje Posch family. His dam, Lakeview Daisy, has an official record of 34.33 pounds of butter and 696.10 pounds of milk in seven days. Her best seven days milk was 707.10, with an average test of 4.7 per cent.

This sire's first two daughters to be tested have given 16,000 and 18,000 pounds of milk with an average test of 4.00 per cent. He will be a great addition to the splendid Holsteins now in this district.

This much is certain—there is no use in getting poor tools. Buy those bearing a good name. Do not go out and buy a whole bunch of tools at one time; buy them one at a time as they are needed.

LOW FEED COST VERY IMPORTANT

Wise Use of Annual Hay Crops One Source of Saving.

FOR POOR YEARS.

Feed costs are not determined wholly by the amount of the different food materials consumed. The initial cost of such materials is probably of equal importance.

In endeavours to lower the cost of feeding, one source of saving too frequently lost sight of is the wise use of annual hay crops. Such crops are not for seasons when the regular meadows promise to yield abundantly, but can be used with considerable financial advantage where either hay or grain crops fall below the mark in the spring or early summer months.

During the past five years a large number of grasses and clovers, suitable for annual hays, have been planted, both alone and in combination, at the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa. Some valuable data has been secured as to the possibility of using such crops to safeguard against winter shortage of feed.

On the whole, mixtures of grasses and legumes have been more satisfactory than either seeded alone. The largest average amount of feed per acre has been secured from a mixture of the Japanese Foxtail millet and either the white or yellow blossomed sweet clover. The rate of seeding for this mixture was 15 lb. of sweet clover and 20 lb. of the millet seed per acre. Three and a half tons of cured hay per acre has been the lowest yield secured and six and a half tons the highest yield. The sweet clover is quite fine when grown in such a mixture, consequently the usual difficulty of curing this crop is not experienced. The quality of hay secured is also quite good.

The lowering of feeding costs by feeding hay produced at the rate of three and one half to six and one half tons per acre instead of often a poorer quality of hay, produced at the rate of one half to three quarters of a ton to the acre in poor hay years should be quite apparent. The experiment is worth a thorough trial on the part of any feeder threatened with feed shortage.

The observant dairyman will find that some cows in his herd return more profit for the same amount of feed than others. The cow to keep is the one that returns the greatest amount of profit over the cost of feed.

Pay Nearly as Much as New Zealanders for Third of Distance.

ADVANTAGE OFFSET

Antipodean Has Open Winter and Can Produce Cheaper Cheese.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 22. — The dairy farmers of this district, and they will compare favorably in point of intelligence and business success with any in the same class in Canada, are not worrying over the Australian treaty which these days appears to be giving some members of Parliament so much concern. That treaty has never been a serious issue here, even though at the recent Federal election some of the political spellbinders made the most of it in their platform performances. The Canadian duty on any of his products, the market for which is in Europe, is of little interest to the farmers of this country, no matter what the partisan workers may tell him to the contrary. The Canadian farmer recognizes the New Zealander as a competitor in the production of cheese but this competition has to be met with in England and not at home.

What Farmers Want.

If the dairy farmers of Canada ask the present or any other government for further concessions it is not likely that tariff changes will be one of them. They have an association Dominion-wide in its scope and this organization has a committee at work, the aim of which is to secure a reduction in ocean freight rates and in marine insurance.

In both these particulars the Canadian dairyman is at a disadvantage as compared with his fellow-producer in the Ant.

The [illegible] farmer is 11,000 miles from the cheese market in Liverpool, while Montreal, the great shipping port for Canadian cheese, is only 3,087 miles from England. It costs the Canadian dairyman $1.32 to ship 100 pounds of his cheese to Liverpool. The New Zealander, nearly four times the distance away, can send the same number of pounds of his cheese to the same market for $2.04. If he were charged at the rate which the Canadian pays, the New Zealand dairyman would be taxed $7.14 for every 100 pounds of cheese he sends to Liverpool, or approximately one-third of the value of the shipment. Climatic conditions in New Zealand are more favorable for the dairy business and these conditions rather more than offset the advantage which the dairyman in Canada has over him in the matter of [illegible] from the leading market of the [illegible] year. The [illegible] New Zealand got together and were able to secure a reduction in marine insurance rates which meant to them a saving on the year's output of over $150,000.

It costs less to ship cheese to British Columbia from New Zealand than it does to send it from the latter place to Liverpool. That is conceded but it is just as true that Ontario cheese can be sent to England at a lower charge per pound than to the West. Even if New Zealand had a monopoly of the cheese market of British Columbia to the eastern dairyman, so long as the British market was open to him, would have no occasion to worry.

Now that it has become one of the leading industries of the country, bringing as it did millions of dollars of foreign money to this country last year, the dairy business may well claim the paternal interest of the Dominion Parliament and it would appear to be entitled to something more dignified in the way of consideration than to be made a political football, a topic for purely partisan debate. The Canadian farmer, who by intelligence and industry has built up an industry that has already put his country on the commercial map of the world, and is still in its infancy, knows what he wants and the issue is safe with him.

FEEDING TURKEYS TO BEST ADVANTAGE

Process of Fattening Should Start Gradually Four Weeks Ahead.

In fattening turkeys for the market do not confine them closely. When the time arrives for the process, which should be four weeks before they are required for table use, start feeding gradually with mashes and whole grain. Feed the mashes in the morning and at midday and the whole grain in the evenings. The reason for feeding the latter late in the day is that if mash formed the evening meal the birds would become very hungry before morning. The mash should be made of equal parts of ground oats, barley meal, cornmeal and wheat bran. Ground buckwheat can be used instead of the ground barley, if desired.

The ground grains should be mixed thoroughly before moistening and the mash fed in a moist condition, but only enough water or skim milk should be used to make the meal stick together and not to become sticky or sloppy. Moisten the mash about two hours before feeding. Whole corn is also the best grain for fattening but only sufficient should be given that the birds will clean up nicely before going to roost, and if the weather is not cold extra care should be taken. Provide fresh water and grit in abundance.

Twenty-seven hundred tractors are now in use on Kansas farms, according to the best available estimates. The total investment in these tractors amounts to about $21,600,000.

RAISE COLTS.

Professors in agricultural colleges are urging farmers to raise more colts, as a shortage of horses is expected within the next 10 years. Colts born in 1926 will not be ready to go to work before 1930.

CIVIC GRATITUDE.

It is a matter for congratulation that the City Council has at last taken steps to pay a civic tribute to the memory of the late Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls to whose great generosity the people of Peterboro owe the best of their parks, the Nicholls Hospital and other community assets.

Many of our citizens are doubtless ignorant of the fact that it was due to Mrs. Nicholls' great interest in Peterboro that this city possesses Inverlea Park, Nicholls Oval and Jackson Park, all three gifts from this generous benefactress.

Without these magnificent breathing places Peterboro would be very sadly off for parks, and it is rather a disturbing commentary on the community's sense of gratitude that so many years have been allowed to pass without a concrete demonstration of civic appreciation.

The decision to erect a memorial gate at one of the parks as the first step in a programme of placing proper memorials testifying to Peterboro's gratitude to the late Mrs. Nicholls will be approved of, the Examiner is sure, not only by those older citizens who know just what her generosity meant to this community, but also by those many new citizens who are just now learning of the part played by Mrs. Nicholls in giving this city a park system that stands comparison with those of any Ontario centre.

THE ESTIMATES.

The elation of the city fathers at being able to keep the tax rate at the same level as last year—36 mills on the dollar—will be shared by the citizens generally.

There were fears, in spite of pre-election protestation of economy, that when the task of preparing the estimates was undertaken the Council would find itself powerless to prevent an increase, and these forebodings were increased by the announcement of a material increase in the Board of Education estimates.

However, there will be no increase—and while a reduction would, of course, been wildly applauded, the majority of citizens will heave a sigh of relief that at any rate conditions will be no worse.

The members of the Council deserve credit for the earnest manner in which they have tackled the annual battle of the estimates, and for their very evident anxiety to keep a tight curb on expenditures.

Even more so perhaps are they to be praised for an absence of the spirit of let-George-do-it that often characterizes the preparation of the estimates, a spirit that is demonstrated by a keen desire to see that the saving is done by the other fellow's department.

In other words, the estimates are often prepared by each Chairman using the pruning knife sparingly on his own estimates and very freely on those of other committees.

This year's Council has shown very little of this tendency, and has dealt with the estimates in a businesslike manner and with a sincere desire to prevent unnecessary expenditure.

UNNECESSARY BY-ELECTIONS.

Hon. Mr. Nickle's bill proposing to make it unnecessary for members of the Legislature chosen for positions in the Cabinet to appeal to their ridings for another endorsation through the medium of a by-election, should carry.

The need of such a precaution in regard to the appointment of Cabinet Ministers has long since passed.

There is no reason under present conditions why a newly-appointed Cabinet Minister, if he is an elected member, should be forced to the inconvenience and expense of another election merely because such a course may have been necessary in the old days when Ministers were appointed directly by the King, and it was considered desirable that the people should ratify the selections made.

In the Mother of Parliaments it is significant that Mr. Baldwin is proposing a similar measure doing away with by-elections for Cabinet Ministers, and the British bill goes further than Mr. Nickle's, who limits his measure to within three months after the election of the member appointed.

A similar bill might well be passed at Ottawa, doing away with ministerial by-elections in the Federal field, as Mr. Baldwin proposes to do in Britain and Mr. Nickle advocates for Ontario.

The present system is meaningless and hopelessly out of date.

THE NEW MINISTER.

The Cabinet reconstruction promised by Mr. King and necessitated by the heavy casualties sustained by the Government at the hands of the electors last October is beginning to take shape.

The way has been paved for the entrance of Hon. Charles Dunning, Premier of Saskatchewan, into the Federal arena by the resignation of the member for Regina, Mr. Darke, and the Westerner leader comes into the Cabinet as Minister of Railways, the portfolio hitherto held by Hon. Geo. P. Graham.

This veteran Minister, it is announced, is to remain in the Cabinet, but without portfolio.

The Government will undoubtedly be strengthened by the addition of Hon. Mr. Dunning, whose reputation as a legislator and leader has been built up by sound service in Saskatchewan, and whose career is a striking demonstration of the opportunities Canada offers to a young man of ability, vision and determination.

The new Minister of Railways, who is only forty years of age, was born in Leicestershire, England, and came to Canada at the age of seventeen years, settling in Saskatchewan, and from a start in a small way as a farmer has steadily climbed the ladder of success until less than two dozen years after his arrival in this country he becomes a Minister of the Crown, holding the most important portfolio of railways—surely an example of what the Dominion holds out to those who are willing to work and to plan.

The Valentine from the Utilities Commission came a little late, but the City Council's welcome was none the less hearty.

HOW TO SUCCEED.

There is a foolish idea prevalent among worldly-wise young people that the old-fashioned virtues are no longer suitable as a rule of conduct in modern life, says the Hamilton Spectator in an editorial to young people. They seem to assume that though they may have been good enough for our unsophisticated forefathers, no intelligent person can take any stock in them today. "Honesty is the best policy," "cheats never prosper"—moral stand-bys like these are beginning to lose their appeal, it is to be feared. Rumors about corruption in high places, the notion that business success is frequently the result of sharp practice, the indifference with which crime and law-breaking are too often regarded—how do the homely proverbs about holding to the narrow path of rectitude fit in with these ugly facts? But it is not the proverbs that are amiss; they are forever right. Any one who thinks that crookedness of any sort, whether it be on the large or small scale, can permanently succeed, is to be pitied. Dishonesty may for a time seem to get results—but only for a time. The day of reckoning always comes, sooner or later. Nothing can come out of wrong-doing but ultimate loss. Be assured, there is only one way to achieve permanent success of any sort, and that is by the good old method of personal integrity. Everything which weakens character weakens also the prospect of success. That fact is recognized by hard-headed business men quite as much as by sentimentalists. Work, thrift, temperance, moral living, honesty in every undertaking, these are still the best rules of life. They are eternal, and no change in the habits or customs of society can possibly affect their validity.

The opinions in this respect of a very prominent Canadian banker, Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, are worth considering. Here is a list of "rules for young men" drawn up by Sir Frederick, which are of the greatest practical value. Intemperance he describes as the "greatest handicap with which any young man can burden himself." Concerning the practical business of "getting on" in life, Sir Frederick emphasizes the importance of concentration. "Genius is but prolonged attention," he says. Another splendid piece of advice he gives is to have an "occasional introspection," that is to say, a periodic self-examination to find out our weaknesses with a view to remedying them. "We all have faults," he points out, "many of them can be overcome, but we must find them out first." The necessity for taking care of the body—by regular exercise, keeping fit generally—is another point which is stressed. Work, which "will open all the doors of life;" punctuality, the observance of the Ten Commandments generally—the best basis on which any nation or individual can rise to real greatness—these are the essentials of a useful and successful career. In the actual matter of money-making, it is refreshing to find the banker giving it quite a secondary place. To make money is termed a "natural tendency today," but the men who make it their sole aim are styled "poor creatures at best," who "rarely enjoy the genuine affection of their fellowmen." Every word in this banker's "advice" ought to be seriously pondered by the young person who imagines there is any other way but the old-fashioned, honorable way of really "getting on."

THE "DAILY DOZEN" FOR DOLLAR DISORDERS.

These exercises represent a program which will put almost any one on the road to economic health and happiness—and keep him there. Result along with the extra sunset years of life which the health exercises will bring, there will be that financial independence and freedom from money worries, without which old age becomes a sad tragedy instead of glorious contentment.

Exercise Number One—Earn All You Can Honestly. The annual income of the people of this nation is about $60,000,000,000, or $545 per person, or $2,180 per family of four. But 86 per cent. of all workers are reported to get less than $2,000 per annum. Only 1 per cent. get as much as $8,000 a year.

Exercise Number Two—Plan Your Spending Carefully. Here is an opportunity to exercise real skill. And it's a lot of fun, too, if you go at the planning in the right spirit.

Exercise Number Three—Spend for What You Need Wisely. That's a good trick if you can do it. According to the "American Education Digest," here is how the average dollar is disposed of—living cost 24 1-2 cents, luxuries 22 cents, waste 14 cents, miscellaneous 13 1_2 cents, investment 11 cents, crime 8 1-2 cents, government 4 1-2 cents, school 1 1-2 cents and church 3-4 of a cent.

Exercise Number Four—Record Money Transactions Accurately. Having planned well and spent wisely the recording gives you a delightful picture of how it all happened. No modern business concern of any importance would dare to operate without keeping accurate books.

Exercise Number Five—Save Part of Your Pay Regularly. That sounds trite. So does the admonition to brush your teeth daily—good advice, nevertheless.

Exercise Number Six—Consult Your Banker Frequently. This business man is much more human than he is frequently pictured in fiction. You may be surprised to find out what an important service he renders to society and what a valuable counsellor on money matters he can be to you.

Exercise Number Seven—Invest What You Save Safely. What endless tragedies could be avoided if folks would take up this exercise!

Exercise Number Eight—Protect Your Loved Ones Adequately. You owe them this much consideration. There are two primary ways of doing this exercise. The first is by carrying life insurance. Then protect your loved ones by making a will so that the estate you create by life insurance and otherwise will go surely and quickly to those who should have it.

Exercise Number Nine—Avoid Waste Diligently. What we Americans thoughtlessly throw into our garbage cans would feed an army.

Exercise Number Ten—Keep Your Credit Established Firmly. In other words, keep out of debt, pay your bills promptly, and thereby maintain your self-respect and your standing as an asset to your community.

Exercise Number Eleven—Own Your Own Home Surely. Home-owning hearts are usually happiest.

Exercise Number Twelve—Give What You Ought Liberally.—E. A. Hungerford, in Forbes Magazine.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

As a city Peterboro cannot be accused of being extravagant in its expenditures on public recreation.

In view of the fact that the member for Regina has resigned to make room for him, Hon. Chas. Dunning might be termed a Darke horse candidate.

The Peterboro branch of the Ontario Motor League is apparently in for a busy year's activities. It should have the co-operation of all motorists.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal
Winnipeg

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21. — Canadian Press. — Prices for winter wheat grades of flour were marked down 10c a barrel on Saturday, a decline that was attributed on the local produce market on Saturday to the continued limited demand. The market for spring wheat flour was small.

The market for millfeed and rolled oats was firm at $32.25 a ton.

Egg receipts were 2838 cases as against 1138 for the corresponding day a week ago and an increase of 22 cases over the same day last year. With the United States eggs ruling at lower levels, the Canadian market has assumed a normal aspect for the season of the year.

Fresh imports from across the border are increasing. A decline of 3c a dozen for fresh seconds was the only feature of the week's egg market .There continues to be a steady demand for the higher grades.

Six thousand five hundred packages of antipodean butter were received locally last week, 3500 of the total arriving on Saturdady.

The market is steady with stocks in hand limited. Purchases continue to be made to fill immediate requirements only.

Cheese receipts over the week's period ending Saturday declined from the previous week, from 1122 boxes to 985. There was an absence of foreign demand and the trading was limited, the business throughout the whole week being quiet.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Fegruary 20. — Canadian Press. — Largely as a result of the fact that Chicago contract stocks of wheat have nearly reached the vanishing point, wheat prices here took an energetic upward swing to-day. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, ¼c to 2c net higher,May, (new) $1.69 to $1.691-8, and July $1.49 3-8 to $1.48 7-8, with corn showing ¼c to ½c advance; oats unchanged to 3-8c up, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 15c.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, February 20. Canadian Press. — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Sterling demand, $4,87 3-4.
Sterling cables, $4.83¾

District Markets

Prevailing prices in towns and villages in The Examiner's territory at the end of the week.

AT CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 22.—Potatoes are scare here although farmers coming to town say there is an average stock on hand in the country, but they do not care to move them until the arrival of warmer weather. There is no public market here, but the stores are selling potatoes at $3 a bag or 40 cents a peck. Eggs bring 40 cents a dozen; dairy butter 40, and creamery butter 50 cents a pound. Apples are retailing at 25 cents a peck for Spies and Tolman Sweets. Pressed hay is $15 and loose hay $12 a ton for first quality. The latest quotation for wheat is $1.25 a bushel. Very little of other kinds of grain is offered.

AT HASTINGS

HASTINGS, Feb. 22.— Present market and produce prices prevailing in Hastings and district are: Grade eggs 25 to 32 cents a dozen; dairy butter 35 to 40 cents a pound; creamery butter 50 cents a pound; milk 10 cents a quart; whipping cream 60 cents a quart; potatoes $2.25 to $2.50 for 90 pounds; carrots and parsnips, 25 cents a peck; cabbage 10 and 15 cents a head; Canadian onions 35 cents a peck.

Fresh green such as leaf lettuce, head lettuce and green onions are being imported by local dealers for sale.

Timothy hay is $12 a ton; oats 50 to 55 cents a bushel; wood, green, body maple, $10 a cord; dry hardwood $12.

AT THOMASBURG

THOMASBURG, Feb. 22—Prices in Thomasburg at the end of the week were: Pork, rolls 30c a pound; breakfast bacon 40c a pound; dairy butter 38c a pound; eggs 25c and 30c a dozen according to size; beef 10 cents a pound; sugar $7 a 100 pounds; onions $2 a bushel; Flour $4.50 a hundred; beans, hand picked, $2.75 a bushel. The farmers are selling hay at $10 a ton; wood at $7 and $10 a cord, and potatoes at $3 a bag.

AT MILLBROOK

MILLBROOKE, Feb. 22.—Prices prevailing in the local stores at the end of the week included creamery butter at 45 cents, and dairy butter selling at 35 cents a pound; eggs are 35 cents a dozen; potatoes 50 cents a peck, $3 a bag; chickens are hard to get and sell at 25 cents a pound for the average fowl, while stall fed chickens are 30 cents a pound. Large Spanish onions are 10 cents a pound and the cooking variety, with red skins, are 5 cents a pound; celery is 25 cents a bunch.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OUR HERITAGE.

Fellowship of Prayer

Monday, Cleansing the Temple.
Read John 2:3-7. Text 2:17.
Zeal for thy house shall eat me up.

Meditation — Jesus' wrath flamed against the raw graft of the temple ecclesiastics and the cupidity of the traitors who exploited the people. He exposed its root in a misplaced emphasis of popular thinking. Zeal for the house of God crowded out zeal for God Himself. The leaders made a great show of literal compliance with the law while they cheated the worshippers not only out of their money but out of their religion. Jesus valued ritual righteousness. He viewed baptism by John as of that type and declared for the fulfilment of all righteousness, even that of ritual, but like the prophets He repudiated ritualism when it became the substitute for ethical righteousness. To Jesus Christ the kingdom of reverence, justice and brotherhood was the Pearl of Great Price.

Prayer. — O Almighty God, unto whom all hearts are open, all desires known, and from whom no secrets are hid; cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of Thy Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love Thee and worthily magnify Thy Holy Name, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

WEDDING BELLS.

SPENCER—MALONEY

A pretty wedding took place in St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, Lakefield, Tuesday morning, Feb. 9 when Mary Frances, daughter of the late Daniel Moloney and Mrs. Maloney of Douro, became the bride of Leo Spencer, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Spencer of Smith.

Promptly at 9 o'clock, the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her brother, Roger, the ceremony was performed and the nuptial mass celebrated by the pastor, Rev. J. J. Garvey in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends.

The bride wore a dainty gown of rose satin-faced canton with trimmings of gold with hat to match, and carried a bonquet of white carnations. She wore the bridegroom's gift a rope of pearls. The bridesmaid, Miss Josephine Maloney, sister of the bride, wore rosewood satin-faced canton with hat to match, and carried pink carnations. She wore the groom's gift, a pearl and amethyst necklace. The groom was supported by his brother, Peter.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, only immediate friends being present. The young couple left later for a trip to Toronto and Niaga. The bride's travelling dress being brown satin and hat of same shade and muskrat coat. They will reside in Smith.

OBITUARY.

JAMES WINDRIM.

OMEMEE, Feb. 22.—The death of James Windrim occurred on Monday night at the age of sixty-five years, at the home of his brother, William Windrim, of Ops. The deceased gentleman, whose home was in Fenelon Falls, had been residing with his brother for some ttime and had been in failing health all winter, but his death was due to pleuro-pneumonia, which he contracted about a week previous. The body was taken on Wednesday morning to Fenelon Falls by the 9 o'clock C.N.R. train, where interment took place.

OMAHA TERRORIZED BY SNIPER IN THREE WEEKS' STALKING SIEGE; TWO DEAD, THIRD VICTIM MAY DIE

Maniac Eludes Police After Seven Outrages—Business at Standstill.

DOORS ARE LOCKED

Whole Community in Fear —Little Clue to Slayer.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 22.—Omaha on Saturday felt the cumulative force of six days of terror caused by the insane sniper who, within the week, had killed two people, probably fatally wounded another, shot still another in the face, fired through a dozen or more lighted windows and had carried on his work so boldly as to spread terror and consternation throughout the entire city. Saturday night Omaha was a closed town, except for the few drug stores, cigar stores, etc., which are open as usual.

Theatres are open, but are playing to empty houses. Even the matinee attendance is affected by the terror.

Merchants did not have the usual heavy trade Saturday. The crowd was absent, and those who were on the floors were not in a buying mood. The Thompson Belden Company, one of the largest department stores in the city, has withdrawn its newspaper advertising until affairs become normal.

"People are not buying," said President Beldon. "They are afraid. No use to advertise for the present."

Churches are also feeling the effects of the tension. The People's Church, which usually has from 250 to 300 at the Friday night meeting, had just three people in the building Friday night, and one of these was the pastor.

Terror Spreads to Council Bluffs.

The terror spread Friday night to Council Bluffs, Iowa, immediately across the river from Omaha, when the maniac killer fired six shots into Ross Johnson, a railroad detective. Saturday night Council Bluffs was as badly scared as Omaha and was as tightly closed as this city.

For three weeks the sniping maniac has been loose about Omaha, but for the first two weeks he kept his outrages confined to shooting through lighted windows. Ten days ago he grew bolder. As long as the shooting was confined to windows, the police were inclined to credit the acts to mischievous boys, although a number of people reported narrow escapes. Investigation shows the bullets were of the .22 long caliber.

A week ago Friday, William Peterson, a contractor, in the neighborhood where the shots had been fired, leaned over to crank his car. As he did so a bullet struck him in the chin. It was a .22 bullet.

Two Victims Killed.

The following Sunday night William L. McDevitt left his home for a walk. Five minutes later, within half a block of his house, he was shot in the back of the head and killed. Near by was found a .22 exploded shell.

Monday night bullets were sent through a lighted window in the Sisters of Mercy Home, a block from McDevitt's house. The bullets were .22 calibre.

Tuesday evening Miss Esther Manthe entered a drug store in the next block. As she stood at a counter making a purchase a bullet crashed through the show window and struck within a few inches of her head. A .22 shell was found.

Wednesday night Dr. A. D. Searles, prominent physician, who had remained in his office late because of a storm, was shot and killed. On the floor of his office was found a .22-long exploded shell. His office was brilliantly lighted at the time.

Thursday night was an off night with the killer, and if he fired shots at any one the police have not learned of it.

Friday night Ross Johnson, Wabash Railroad special detective, patrolling the Wabash freight yards in Council Bluffs, heard a slight noise and the next moment felt a bullet plow through his back. Before he could turn around three other bullets struck him.

Johnson pulled his own gun and fired. As he did so he was struck by two more bullets and then the killer ran. Johnson declares he heard no shots and says the maniac's gun was equipped with a silencer. Johnson is desperately wounded, with one bullet near his spine, another in a kidney and four minor wounds. He is unlikely to live.

Later, empty shells of .22 long calibre were found where the killer had stood when he fired at Johnson.

Description of the Maniac.

From Johnson, before he lapsed into unconsciousness, the police obtained their first description of the killer. He is a young man, heavy set, short, and wears a cap and leather coat.

It is believed the killer is endeavoring to get out of Omaha, and officers in all directions have been given the description, with the warning that the man will undoubtedly shoot whenever an attempt is made to arrest him.

Because of the lack of motive in shooting so many people, specialists in neurotics say the man is undoubtedly a maniac with a homicidal tendency, who, normal at times, will suddenly fly into a rage without any provocation and seek to kill. He has demonstrated his ability as a marksman by his work in hitting Johnson six times out of six shots.

The week's terror has put Omaha's nerves on edge. The slightest thing out of the ordinary starts trouble. Saturday the arrest of a negro automobile thief caused a blockade for a quarter of a mile.

The Real Cause Of Constipation Is A Bad Liver

Mrs. Jean Bocheir, Nelson, B.C., writes:—"For many years I have been troubled with my liver, and suffered terribly with constipation.

I HEARD ABOUT

Milburn's

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

and have been greatly improved since I started to take them.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are not a new and untried remedy. They have been on the market for the past 32 years; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Friday, when a cadet at Central High School accidentally discharged a rifle, girl students went into hysterics under the belief that the killer had invaded the building. On Friday Frank Pesek was so anxious to see the newspaper and news of the killer that he dropped dead of excitement when he was unable to open the paper quickly.

Saturday night every window shade in Omaha was closed. Doors were locked and Omaha citizens staying at home. Social affairs are being omitted, and while clubs are open, as usual, curtains are drawn.

Police have abandoned the usual routine and have concentrated all their efforts to discovering the killer. Practically the entire police force of both Omaha and Council Blubs, together with large numbers of volunteer officers, are devoting their entire time to this work. They are combing the Council Bluffs railroad yards.

PILES GO QUICK

Without Salves or Cutting.

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy and called his prescription HEM-ROID. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent. and then decided it should be sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside application. Get a package of HEM-ROID from McDermid & Jury to-day. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands and will do the same for you.

LAKEFIELD NEWS.

LAKEFIELD February 22. — A very successful young people's dance was held on Saturday evening at The Grove, for the boys of the school. It was a Valentine Masquerade and the variety of unique costumes was bewildering and most attractive. A cat was exceedingly cleverly portrayed and also a mouse and a frog; a spinning top and pierrots galore frolicked merrily till about 11 o'clock, when the party broke up.

About 125 were present, including the 75 boys of the school, and spent a happy evening dancing to the music by Eric Fawcett at the piano and J. Cockburn and MacDonald at the traps. Several of the boys impersonated girls very cleverly, and the fun of guessing "Who's Who" kept everyone on the alert.

The dance was held in the new dining hall, which was decorated for the occasion with hearts and poinsettias.

Misses Florence and Mary Mackenzie and Miss Joan Hedley of Toronto Mrs. Sproat of Vancouver, and Eric Fawcett of Peterboro were among the out of town visitors.

Many Parties.

The season of St. Valentine has brought even a larger number of parties than usual this year. Parties for the wee tots and the older boys and girls who enjoy the romantic glamor which is heightened by the liberal use of hearts, cupids, arrows, etc., in the decorations. Valentine parties were given among the older people, who regard their days of romance as past, but who enjoy using the many attractive decorations which are to be procured at this time.

Star Hockey Player.

Miss Billy Mackenzie, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie of The Grove, who is a pupil at Bishop Bethune College, Oshawa, has been keeping up the family traditions as a hockey player with her school team. She has been specially mention in the press for her play and on Saturday last, in the game between Bishop Strachan School and Bishop Bethune College, in which the score was 1-0 for the latter team, Billy scored the goal. Those who remember her phenomenal and promising play at the age of eleven with the Ladies' O.H.A. in the games with Campbellford two years ago will be interested in her success.

FRANCS DROP TO 28.09 TO DOLLAR ON THE BOURSE

Sold for Less Than Sixth of the German Mark.

DOUMER SILENT

Use of Morgan Loan to Support Exchange is Urged.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—On the eve of the tenth anniversary of the beginning of the Battle of Verdun, when Germany made her colossal effort to crush France and failed, the French franc Saturday sold for less than a sixth of the German mark. At noon when the Bourse closed it required 137 francs to buy a pound sterling and 28.09 francs to purchase a dollar. Blame it on whom you like, those are the facts and there are the figures.

In the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies, on whose performances the Finance Minister on Friday blamed the fall of the franc, demands were heard that M. Doumer use the dollar balance the Government holds in the Bank of France as a result of the Morgan loan to enter the exchange market and support the franc. Asked if he would do so, M. Doumer answered.

"That is an indiscreet question to which I cannot respond. I cannot afford to give a warning to those who are taking a big chance in speculating against the franc."

Only a short time ago it was officially stated that the product of the last American loan was intact and it is understood that the Government has an additional $40,000,000 at its disposal.

Balance the Budget.

The swelling public demand for parliamentary action to balance the budget gives the best prospect for a way being found out of the deadlock which now exists. The Senate Finance committee intends to report to the upper house on Tuesday and M. Briand will try to get a vote by Thursday night. It is also understood that he will insist on the sales tax being put back in the fiscal measure. The sales tax got only 112 votes out of 623 in the Chamber, yet M. Briand seems to think he can put it through.

In the Chamber he will face in the first place the opposition which cut down his 4,000,000,000 new taxes to 1,600,000,000 and in the second place must fight against Deputies who say that under French constitutional law the Senate has no right to originate financial measures. But M. Briand is apparently betting on having broken the Left Bloc and on the force of public opinion.

In the event that the fails to put through his measures he will resign. In that case President Doumergue may ask a Right or Centre man to form a Government. It is not believed he will call again on M. Herriot or any of his lieutenants not only because of their poor record but because recently there has been created a financial situation which is believed almost to preclude a Left Government.

This situation is due to holders of national defense bonds at three, six, nine and twelve months having exchanged them at maturity against one-month bonds. Should the Left take power again there is not the slightest doubt that there would be demands for reimbursement which it would exceed the ability of the Treasury to meet.

While the Left calls this a bankers' plot, the fact remains that the bankers are now in the position to create an impossible situation for any Socialist or near-Socialist Government.

BY-ELECTIONS EXPECTED SOON

One at Regina Set For March 23—Other Ministers To Be Named.

EULER POSSIBILITY.

OTTAWA, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—The resignation of the Rt. Hon. George P. Graham from the Ministry of Railways and Canals and the appointment to the portfolio of Hon. Charles Dunning, Premier of Saskatchewan, on Saturday marked the first of several cabinet changes forecast since the general election in October.

Mr. Dunning is expected in the Capital within a few days to be sworn into the Privy Council. Mr. Graham last night declined to comment on his own resignation.

F. H. Darke, Liberal member for Regina, has resigned to permit Mr. Dunning to stand for election in that seat. Nomination day has been set for March 16, and polling day for March 23rd.

Other bye-elections will undoubtedly follow the one in Regina next month, but it is stated now unofficially that any new minister will be selected from the Liberal ranks in the House of Commons. The most probable new member of the Cabinet is W. D. Euler, Liberal member for Noth Waterloo.

$50,000 FUND TO AID DEPENDENTS OF TWO SEAMEN

Captain Fried and Rescue Crew End Week of Honors.

NEW YORK GUESTS

Fund Already Near $40,000 Mark—Medal to the Captain.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22. — After a week of rare honors and lavish entertainment and adulation such as New York never before bestowed on merchant seamen, Captain Geo. Fried and his heroic rescue crew of the steamship President Roosevelt, sailed early Sunday for European ports on a three weeks' voyage.

With them they carried assurance of more substantial recognition of their heroism in the fact that the funds subscribed for the relief of the dependents of the two men who lost their lives and as a tribute to the living rescuers had already reached the approximate sum of $40,000 with a probability that the total would be $50,000 before closing.

The captain and his rescue crew were covered with medals and glory, and although they are men of action rather than words, as a week of speechmaking proved, each of them as he left port seemed eager to say something in appreciation of the treatment they all had received, but each was too choked by sentiment to talk freely.

Climax to Week of Honors.

The climax to their week of honors and entertainment came on Saturday night at Carnegie Hall when Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur, presented to Captain Fried the last of his medals. The hall was filled with "paying guests" to give the heroes a send off. Captain Fried and the others responded—as had been their wont—briefly but feelingly and with an evident preference for a raging sea rather than a sea of beaming faces.

Captain Fried began his day Saturday by a visit to Governor and Mrs. Alfred E. Smith at the Hotel Biltmore. It is significant of the character of Captain Fried that during the last day or so he made it his business not merely to be entertained but to call upon those responsible for his honors and entertainment and thank them for it.

As an incident of the day, told by others than Captain Fried, it was learned he had given to Major Deegan a lighthouse similar to that he gave Mayor Walker, and to Mr. Mand he had presented a $200 clock.

Part of Captain Frieds letter to Mayor Walker was as follows:

"I would like to say this: My officers, my crew and myself fully recognize as the 'tumult and the shouting dies' that although we were the centre of all this enthusiasm, we were after all but a symbol. Humbly we thank God that it was given us to do our duty when occasion arose. But we are proud to feel that in like circumstances any American crew of any American ship would have striven as we strove and succeeded, as it was granted to us to succeed. The greatest pride of the men of the S. S. President Roosevelt is not that they have been called heroes, but that they had the strength to do their simple duty."

VALENTINE TEAS

HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

A very successful and well attended Valentine tea was held on Friday afternoon, at the residence of Mrs. Harold Wilson, 306 Monaghan Road, under the auspices of the Prince of Wales' Home and School Association. The house was decorated attractively with Valentine novelties and narcissus. The guests were received by Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. George Worboy, president of the society. Tea was poured by Mrs. A. Jones and Mrs. F. Gillespie, assisted by Mrs. T. Sproats, Mrs. H. Beatty, Mrs. S. Watson, Mrs. Kingdon, Mrs. Kirkwood, Mrs. J. Freeman and Mrs. A. McWilliams. During the afternoon, an enjoyable musical programme, in charge of Mrs. George Davis, was given, including vocal solos by Mrs. H. Doig, Mrs. A. Spicer and Miss Eleanor Brown, violin numbers by Alex. Runnett, a reading by Gordon Kirkwood, a piano duet by Tom and Bob Allen and a duet by the Misses Muriel Wilson and Olga Johnston.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 22.—The ladies of the United (Presbyterian) Church held a very successful Valentine Tea at the home of Mrs. W. J. Charlton on Thursday afternoon. The house was decorated in red and white, with hearts the chief motif. The electroliers were decorated with hearts and streamers of red and white. The guests were received by Mrs. Charlton and Mrs. (Rev.) P. L. Jull, and the small daughter of the house, Miss Cora Charlton, attired as a Valentine, assisted also. Mrs. F. J. Burgess conducted the ladies from the living room to the tea room, where Mrs. H. J. Sutton and Mrs. James Walton poured tea and Mrs. W. A. Fairbairn, Mrs. W. G. Morrison, Mrs. O. H. Charlton and Mrs. J. Blakeley served.

During the afternoon an excellent programme was rendered which was much enjoyed by all present, among those who took part were: Mrs. Osborne, Mrs. Burrows and Miss Nelson, who sang and Miss Dorothy Sutton, who played a piano solo. Mrs. J. C. Strickland gave two violin selections accompanied by Mrs. J. W. Todd and Mrs. C. S. Tanner and Mrs. J. A. Porter rendered a piano duet. The financial returns were very gratifying and the ladies felt repaid for the effort as it was a delightful social function, and was attended by a very large number of ladies. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Charlton for the generosity in giving her home for the afternoon.

PLANE TO ARGENTINE.

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—Commander Franco, who is spending the week-end at Mar Del Plata, is represented as being greatly surprised when told of reports published in some of the Buenos Aires papers Saturday to the effect that the Spanish Cabinet had definitely decided to end the Spain to South America air flight here, and present the Plue Ultra to Argentina.

The Silent Partner

Bill Lovell and Steve Preston, partners of the firm Lovell and Preston, were having a quiet chat.

"Bill", said Steve, "how would you like a new partner?"

"You're not thinking of quitting, are you?" asked Bill in alarm. "Why, we work together like a well-oiled machine . . . I'd rather carry on alone than have a new man with me."

"That's just the way I feel", said Steve; "yet if I died, my share of the business would go to my estate and goodness knows who would take my place. The same holds true if anything happened to you."

"It would be a catastrophe for the one that was left," agreed Bill.

"Let's insure ourselves against such an event", suggested Steve. "We'll each take out a North American Life Business Policy for the amount we have invested, each making the other the beneficiary. The premiums will be a legitimate business expense."

That conversation took place eight years ago. Last year Lovell died. Preston, with the insurance, bought his partner's interest and carried on. The trade missed Lovell but the loss was personal and didn't affect the business.

A North American Life Business Policy is a silent partner in many successful business firms. Let us explain how it will serve you. Our booklet, "You're a Business Man", tells of its many advantages.

ST. ANDREW'S UNITED

The subject for the evening service was "International Good-Will." The Rev. J. W. Gordon based his subject on the 3rd Chapter of Phillipians verses 10 to 14. The pastor stated that for some time there had been a disturbing thought in his mind which had to do with the great British Empire. Newspaper reports, he said, indicated that the British Empire is passing through perilous times. Lord Balfour said in Washington that the Anglo-Saxon races have given the world its democratic institutions. Mr. Gordon went on to show the condition of affairs as they are today within the Empire. Less coal was being sold, he said, to outside countries, less cotton was being maufactured and ships for British owners are being elsewhere than in the British Isles.

You can think what you like about prohibition, said Mr. Gordon, but the only prohibition nation in the world has the best workmen. In the Old Country the drink bill for last year amounted to two and a half million dollars. Three Governments in attempting to rectify conditions have found their position absolutely hopeless.

A vaster problem than the future of the British Empire is the future of the white race. What happens to it will happen to the British Empire, said Mr. Gordon. The white race now controls and dominates 47-53rds of the world's habitable surface. There is a crisis on in the world today in the attitude of the yellow and dark-skinned races against the white race, and circumstances are slowly cornering up the human race to the fact that the only hope for the world lies in the Bible.

The Rotary movement which has spread around the world has for its slogan—International Good-Will. It is composed mostly of business men. One of the hopeful things about it is that it has applied the spirit of service where the sore is keenest—where the flesh is rawest. The spirit of any movement is the thing that determines its usefulness. The Church, said Mr. Gordon, has always, taught that it is the spirit of God within a man that influences him towards the greater and nobler things of life.

GILMOUR MEMORIAL.

"Christ's Attitude Towards War" was the subject of Rev. W. S. Edgar's sermon at the Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church. Taking as his text, Isaiah 9, 6. "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace," Mr. Edgar said:

The Prince of Peace is the beautiful title applied by the inspired prophet to our Lord and Master. Certain critics, of course, have taken exception to this name being given to Jesus. But to what other character in the world's history can this name be applied? Can we say truly of any other that he was the Wonderful, the Counsellor and the Prince of Peace?

"Now of all the titles—and they are legion—applied to our Lord in Scripture, it will be readily admitted that there is none more pleasing than that of the Prince of Peace. We may fairly infer that this title implies that Jesus, by His teaching and influence, would be on the side of peace, as opposed to war. He has other titles with a similar implication. He is called the Shiloh, the transquilizer or peace bringer, and in Thessalonians 3, 16, Paul describes Him as 'The Lord of Peace.' He is a Priest after the order of Melchizedik who was a King of Peace. Christ it is Who makes peace, who gives peace, who preached peace. He is our peace. He brought peace as a prophet, as a priest and as a king. Peace on earth was announced at His birth. Peace He bequeathed as His legacy to His disciples just before His death. Among the first words in His public ministry was a benediction on the peacemaker, and His first message to His disciples after His resurrection was that well-known Eastern salutation, 'Peace be unto you'."

The Gospel of Christ is a gospel of peace: it brings about peace between heaven and earth, between God and man, and this same Gospel will spread the blessings of peace over the whole earth if the rulers and peoples who profess His name obey His voice and seek to do His will.

Some people deprecate all endeavors to abolish war, pointing to Christ's words, as recorded in Matthew 24, in which He predicted wars and rumors of war, but a careful reading of the chapter shows that this prediction was to be fulfilled during the life-time of His hearers. Verse 34 says, "Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

The whole spirit and genius of Christianity is opposed to the principle of one man killing another in warfare. Christ would oppose war because (1) War does not settle a dispute. What I mean by that is, war does not prove which side is in the right. All that war decides is the question, Which of the contending nations is the stronger? It is the savages' and bandits' method of settling disputes, and is altogether unworthy of civilized and especially Christian countries.

(2) Christ would condemn war because of the unnatural relationships in which it places men towards each other. At the outbreak of the Great War many instances were recorded of young Germans and young Frenchmen who had worked together for years as waiters in Parisian hotels, being called up for service, and taking leave of each other, the best of friends, yet they were called away for the business of fighting each other to the death. Even members of the same family were called upon to take opposite sides. I remember reading of a German family who lived in South London on the best of terms with their English neighbors. The eldest son, born in Germany, was called up at the outbreak of hostilities to serve in the army of the Fatherland. Two other sons, English born, were in the Territorials; and the grief of the family thus divided may easily be imagined. The common people of the contending nations had no quarrel with each other. It was their masters who had quarrelled.

(3) Christ would disapprove of war because of the legacy of hatred left behind. The peace declared between nations that have been at war is often only a peace in name. For many years, under the surface of the national life, there smoulders the fierce fires of enmity, rage and jealousy, ready to blaze up at the first favorable opportunity. "Christ would outlaw war because of its great waste. He was a great economist. After multiplying the loaves and fishes and feeding the multitude, he commanded the disciples to gather up the fragments. War is the greater waster. Think on the host of lives sacrificed in war and then think of the high value placed by Christ on a single soul. Then there is the waste of material things, and the expense of the upkeep of the armies and navies and engines of destruction, appalling in time of war and heavy in peace time.

The Christian life is often spoken as a warfare, but ours is a bloodless battle—against wrong, impurity and intemperance. We have to fight the good fight of faith.

Never has the desire for world peace been greater and more widely spread than to-day. The Church has always stood for world peace, and to-day there are innumerable secular agencies at work towards this end.

The Locarno treaty, signed on October 15, seems to indicate a pacific spirit and the apparent willingness to forget the past. The spirit of the Locarno Treaty is the spirit of Jesus Christ. May that spirit grow and become established as the ruling spirit of the nations and the Scriptural prophecy be fulfilled when swords will be beaten into ploughshares, spears into pruning hooks and the nations shall learn the art of war no more.

ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

(Contributed.)

"The Jew, and the Approaching World's Storm," was the subject which drew a congregation that taxed the seating accommodation of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last evening, it being the fourth in the series of five addresses on the Jews being given by the pastor, Rev. Wm. Allan. In order that there might be no misunderstanding of his views, Rev. Mr. Allan made it clear that he had no sympathy with the sect known under several different names, such as the International Bible Students, Millennial Dawn and Russelites. This sect, he pointed out, deny the Deity of Christ. It teaches that the dead are still in the grave, that no matter how people live in this life they will have a second chance in a future estate, and that ultimately all the wicked will be annihilated. All these teachings, Rev. Mr. Allan said, are directly contrary to Scripture and he, therefore, had no sympahty with them.

Napoleon is reported to have asked his spiritual advisor on one occasion for proof that the Scriptures were inspired. The proof he was given was the marvelous fulfilment of Biblical prophecies concerning the Jews. It is customary, Rev. Mr. Allan said, for people to discount many of the unfilled prophecies in the Scriptures, on the ground that they are so improbable we are not warranted in accepting them. People who adopt this attitude, said Rev. Mr. Allan, would do well to study the improbable character, at the time they were given, of prophecies which are now known to have been fulfilled to the minutest detail. When Noah predicted the Flood over a long period of years, he was laughed at. Yet science shows today that the world at one time was covered by just such a flood. When Daniel prophecied, some 2,000 years ago that there would be only four world empires, the last of which would be the Roman Empire, it was a remarkable prediction that has been fulfilled to the letter. Spain sought world domination; later France under Napoleon, and more recently, the Emperor of Germany, but all failed because their ambitions were not in line with God's program for the world.

Christ predicted that He would be crucified and raised again on the third day. Scoffers refused to believe this, and the power of Imperial Rome was placed at the disposal of the leaders of the Jews in order to see that his grave was not interfered with. Yet the world recognizes today that Christ arose and the Christian Church has been founded on that belief.

There are people who teach that the world is growing better, that through the operation of the Holy Spirit, people's hearts are being purified and that ultimately sin will be eradicated and the world prepared for the advent of Christ. All this is contrary to the plain teachings of the Scriptures. It is true that marvelous progress has been made along educational and philanthropic lines. But reforms of this character are powerless to change the hearts of men, and there can be no lasting peace on earth until the Prince of Peace comes and establishes His universal sway. Previous to the recent world war, ministers of the gospel and other leaders confidently predicted that there would be no more great wars because of such agencies as the League of Nations, international goodwill and education. It was also said that the socialists of Germany would prevent Germany from going to war. All these proved false prophecies. The so-called Christian nations of Europe were leaders in the war when it came, and the socialists of all countries joined in it and fought against themselves. It was declared to be a war of God among the people on both warring sides, which was a manifestation of the impossibility. It was due to the fact that mankind had rejected God, and does not own His sway.

Even although people may not like it, and may refuse to believe it, the Scriptures predict that there is a time of world-wide trouble coming, the greatest time of trouble the world has ever known. The Jews will be in the very centre of this trouble. Because they rejected their Messiah their national history has stopped. God is today offering Salvation to them as individuals just as He is to the Gentiles, but He has not done with them yet as a people. The time of trouble will have three main characteristics, moral, satanic, and judicial. Rev. Mr. Allan quoted a number of passages of the Scripture in the Old and New Testaments relating to a coming time of world-wide trouble. These included New Testament prophecies that false teachers would arise. These, the speaker said, are abounding in our theological colleges, where divinity students are being taught to deny the very fundamentals of the Christian religion. The speaker closed by an earnest appeal to any present who had not accepted Christ as their personal Saviour to do so. Next Sunday's subject will conclude the series of these addresses and will deal with the Jews as the head of the world's greatest civilization.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

"Behold, now is the acceptable time, behold, now is the day of salvation," a verse taken from the Second Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, sixth chapter, first to tenth verses, was the text of the sermon delivered by Rev. P. Costello at the morning Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday.

The reverend speaker referred to the ceremony of sprinkling ashes on the forehead on Ash Wednesday as symbolical of the final destiny of man, who will return to the dust and ashes of the earth. The Lenten season is the acceptable time to do penance, "for unless ye do penance, ye shall all likewise perish." Penance is an absolute condition to the attainment of the soul's salvation in heaven.

Devotions to the Stations of the Cross was recommended as very applicable to the penitential season. The painful journey of Christ to the hill of Calvary was depicted in these stations and aroused in the soul, as by no other devotion, a hatred of sin and a desire to follow the steps of the Saviour, whose sufferings were renewed in every age by the sins of men, the sins of life, the sins of the tongue, blasphemy and reviling and scandal, which renew the crucifixion pangs of our Lord.

The words regarding penance are simple and allow of no misconception. The law regarding the doing of penance cannot be gainsaid. To attend the morning Masses, to receive holy communion as often as possible, to avoid worldly pleasures and to refuse to listen to the blandishments of the devil, are all resolutions that should be taken by the faithful as appropriate for the Lenten time.

SCHOOL CONCERT.

Central School Pupils Give Splendid Programme Under Teachers.

A concert given by the pupils of Central School, in charge of the teachers, was presented in the school on Friday evening, when the hall was filled to capacity with the large audience which proved very appreciative of the children's efforts. A. Mowat acted as chairman, and spoke in appreciative terms of the good work done by the Home and School Association. The principal, K. S. Wightman, also spoke briefly.

The programme was as follows: Moon Song, by the Kindergarten Pupils; Red Cross Exercises, by boys from Miss Dix' and Miss Bennett's rooms; Cradle Song, by girls of Miss Dix' and Miss Bennett's rooms; recitation by five girls from Miss Armstrong's room; Flower Song, by Miss Esplin's Class; a Red Cross play by Miss Bonnycastle's Class ;three-part songs "There's a Purple Tint,' 'and "As With Gladness" by pupils of Mr. Wightman's and Mr. Steer's rooms; violin solo by Perrin Clarke; a dramatization of the Mad Tea Party, by pupils of Miss Paxman; a dance by Sopha Yeotes; a First Aid Lesson by three boys from Miss Buck's Room; physical culture exercises by boys of Miss Frost's room and a three-part song, "Abide With Me," by pupils of Mr. Wightman and Mr. Steer.

Bigger meals—better digestion

The Buyer had been at lunch with this Salesman many times before.

"This lunch will cost you more today, Bill," he said to his visitor.

"How is that?" the other smiled.

"Well, I've found a way to fix that old indigestion of mine—by eating Life Saver Pep-o-mints. They've certainly helped me a lot."

Indigestion is a miserable thing. So many people suffer this way. If they only knew that simple old method our grandfathers used—peppermint.

And now it is available in a new and really convenient form—Pep-o-mint Life Savers; the little candy mints with the hole.

It sounds very simple and old-fashioned. But Pep-o-mint Life Savers really do the trick. Try them after meals when that heavy, logy feeling comes over you—or to relieve that irritating distress of indigestion. Pep-o-mint is displayed at all good stores so you may help yourself; also Wint-o-green, Cinn-o-mon, Lic-o-rice, Cl-o-ve and Vi-o-let. Five cents a package.— Life Savers, Limited, Prescott, Ont.

The YELLOW STUB

HC3I — Monday Feb. 22 — Orchestra

by Ernest Lynn

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

HENRY RAND 55 a business man is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the yellow stub of a theater ticket.

JIMMY RAND his son goes to Chicago where the theater is. The stub is traced to THOMAS FOGARTY who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints when she learns police want her for murder. Mary out with SAMUEL CHURCH a wealthy lawyer sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub and handkerchief might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder. Jimmy receives several mysterious warnings to leave Chicago but ignores them. Later he is attacked at night by two men. He escapes after seizing a blackjack from one of them.

With Jimmy and Mary estranged Church presses his advantage and gets Mary's promise to marry him. Mary tells Jimmy this when they accidentally meet in the park.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXII.

Jimmy had seized her by the hand. He was leaning toward her. His voice was agonized.

"Mary, you mean you—you love him?"

But she did not answer. She had turned her head away and was crying.

"Mary, look at me. Look at me and then tell me that you're marrying this man because you love him."

"Don't!" Her voice was muffled, her handkerchief pressed tightly to her lips.

And then again hot anger overwhelmed him. He was seized once more with that uncontrollable desire to hurt her.

"I might have known," he said bitterly, "that I had no right to hope. There was a fellow in your office. They called him Mac. He said money would buy anything. He was right; it will. This man—"

"Jim, don't. Please don't say any more."

But he went heedlessly on, the words rushed insanely from his lips.

"This man Church has money—lots of it. He can get anything he wants with it. He got you with it. You're marrying him for his money; that's what you're doing."

"How dare you!" She turned on him, her lips trembling.

"You don't deny it." He laughed scornfully. "You don't dare tell me you love him. You can't. You don't dare look at me and tell me you don't love me."

She drew herself up. "You presume a great deal."

"I presume nothing. I'm stating facts."

She had regained her composure now. She said, trying to wound him, "To be so sure of yourself certainly indicates you are not lacking in conceit."

The barb went home. His face reddened. "Perhaps," he said, "I did take too much for granted. I'm sorry."

At the contriteness in his tone she reached involuntarily toward him with her hand, but he did not see it and she hastily drew it back.

And so he went plunging ahead, still trying his best to hurt this girl whom he loved better than anything in the world.

"I had thought Mac was wrong. I thought there were some things in this world that money could not buy. But I was wrong—I was a fool. You even got me out of the way down at the office. I offended you, and so you had me fired."

She looked at him, startled. "You thought that?" she repeated slowly. "You thought I had you fired?" and instantly he saw he was wrong in accusing her.

"What else was I to think? I found you cold. You wouldn't even speak to me, and that evening the man you work for discharged me."

"I don't think," she said in a whisper, "that Sam Church would think such a thing of me."

"Oh, damn Sam Church!" he flared at her. "I suppose I'm to think he's some kind of a saint. If you want to know my opinion of Sam Church, I think he's a dirty sneak."

"It is hardly the chivalrous thing to do to speak like that of him when he isn't here."

"He lied about me!" Jimmy cried. "He poisoned you against me—the sneak."

"I suppose," she retorted, "you think your taste in choosing friends is better than mine. The lady you were seen with is not exactly unknown, you know."

"Yes," he answered hotly, "and I see her nearly every night. What do you think of that? I'm with her every night."

He rose from the bench and clamped his hat down viciously on his head, his back to her. She stretched her hand out in a little gesture of appeal, but he was not looking.

"Goodby," he said. "You seem to have made your choice. I only hope you'll be as unhappy as I am. He walked away, without another backward glance, taking long, swift strides . . . .

She sat perfectly still for several minutes, doing nothing but gaze after his departing figure as it strode through the park. Then she bowed her head on her arm and cried as if her heart would break.

"Jim," she sobbed, "you don't care. You don't care, or you wouldn't talk like that."

Jimmy's job that he had been hunting all morning was waiting for him in the first place he entered after leaving Mary. The irony of it all was that he no longer cared whether he got a job or not.

He plunged through the park without a glance to left or right, his hands stuck in his overcoat pockets, jaw grimly set, head down.

"Money!" he exclaimed bitterly. "Mac was right. All you need is money and you can buy anything."

At the edge of the park he paused and looked backward. But the bench was hidden from sight by the trees. "God help me," he said, "I love her. I can't help it."

. . . He walked blindly on and suddenly found himself standing in front of an electric laundry office. He stood irresolutely for a moment and then shrugged his shoulders. "What the hell," he said. "What difference does it make?" and walked in.

"I want a job," he said to the girl who advanced to meet him.

"Mr. Porter over there is the man to see."

He walked over. "Mr. Porter, I want a job."

The man inspected him, noticed the trim figure and the neat clothing and shook his head. "Sorry, we have no office jobs open."

"I don't care about an office job. I'll do anything."

"The only thing we have is driving a laundry truck."

"All right, I'll drive a laundry truck—anything."

Again the man surveyed him. "Say, what's the matter with you? You're not cut out for driving a truck. You're a college man, I'll bet a dollar. Aren't you?"

"Yes. Does that handicap me any in driving a laundry truck?"

Mr. Porter laughed. "No, I can't say that it does. What's the matter? Down on your luck?"

"No, I just need a job."

"Drive a car?"

"Yes. I used to sell them."

"All right, I can use you. I can't seem to get hold of a man that's any good. I suppose you'll be quitting just about the time that you know your route."

"I won't be quitting for quite a while," Jimmy said.

"All right. Report for work tomorrow morning at seven-thirty. Your job will be collecting and delivering laundry."

"Thanks. I'll be here." He walked out of the door.

"There's a funny one for you, Miss Caton," called Mr. Porter to the girl who had met Jimmy when he came in. "College man driving a laundry truck."

She looked toward the door that had closed behind Jimmy Rand's back. "I'll say," she answered, and resumed chewing her gum.

Mary Lowell sat on the bench where Jimmy had left her for fully an hour. Then she went home and called her office to say that she was not feeling well and would not be back for the afternoon.

"Why Mary, what's the matter?" asked Mrs. Lowell. "Aren't you well?"

"It's just a headache, mother. I'll go in my room and lie down for a while. It will be better."

And she went in her room, to fling herself face down on the bed and wet her pillow with tears. . . . On her dressing table was a portrait of Samuel Church, placed there recently by her mother.

Jimmy, after leaving the laundry office, walked, without being conscious of direction, back to the park. He was half way through it before he realized where he was. Then, drawn by some irresistible impulse, he walked swiftly over to the bench where he had left Mary.

She had gone, and he sat down wearily. A small handkerchief was lying on the bench, and he recognized it by the perfume as Mary's. He picked it up and pressed it to his lips and cursed himself for talking to her as he had.

"I was a fool," he said. "I had no right to hurt her like that, even though she did hurt me. It's that damned temper of mine. Whatever chance I had I suppose I've lost now."

He took out his wallet and placed the handkerchief in it and then put it back in his pocket. His left hand, fumbling idly in his overcoat pocket, came in contact with the blackjack that he had taken away from the man who had followed him home that night. It had been in his pocket ever since O'Day had left him. He had put it there, intending to give it to the lieutenant the next time he saw him.

He took it out of his pocket and idly studied it. Emery was leaking out of it where O'Day had ripped the stitches. He took his penknife from his watch chain and ripped out the remaining stitches, letting the rest of the heavy emery dust run out.

"It will never hurt anyone else," he said abstractedly. He was suddenly overcome with a feeling of tenderness.

He shoved the now harmless weapon back in his pocket and stood up. It was quite dark.

"Hell," he said, and shook himself together. "Something to get my mind off myself before I go crazy."

He set off through the park at a brisk gait and didn't stop until he had reached his room, a walk of more than a mile. There, after washing and putting on a fresh shirt, he went to the telephone, called up Olga Maynard at her apartment and asked her to meet him downtown for dinner.

"Anything to forget," he said, after he had hung up the receiver.

Flattery Not Accepted But Refused As Insulting

MOSCOW, Feb. 22.—(United Press).— The Russian match syndicate sought to flatter its Persian customers by putting the Persian National Lion on its boxes.

The shipment was returned with the intimation that it was undignified, if not insulting, to depict the Persian juggling animal on the box.

Does That Cough Stick On Your Lungs?

AT BURNBRAE

BURNBRAE, Feb. 22.—Prices for farm products have not changed much during the past week. Hogs loaded out at $13 a hundred and still seem strong. Beef is selling by the quarter at 8 cents a pound for fronts and 10 cents for hinds. Not many fat cattle are sold on the hoof, but the price seems to be around 4½ cents per pound. Oats are selling off cars at Campbellford at 58c a bushel, farmers from this district buying a considerable quantity. At a recent auction sale good hens and pullets sold from $1.35 to $1.75 each which is considered exceptionally high when eggs are around the 30c mark.

AT TWEED.

Calomel Acts Upon the Liver

Takes away all previous days waste

To feel your best day in and out, to eat well, work well, sleep well, digest well, you must keep your liver active or the system will immediately become filled with poison causing a multitude of troubles as indigestion, headaches, gas on stomach, constipation, kidney pains, foul breath, biliousness, rheumatism, etc. One Tanol Calomel tablet taken before meals or two at bedtime, then the next morning jump from your bed, take a glass of water, and away goes all the previous days wastes and poisons. Be sure you get Tanol Calomel as it is much better than ordinary calomel; no salts or seidlitz are needed to remove from system. Get a few from F. C. Webber, druggist, Charlotte St., Peterborough, and you will be surprised how effective they are.

U.S. SKI RUNNING TITLE.

BERLIN, N.H., Feb. 21 (Canadian Press).—Olof Satre of the Swedish Ski Club, New York City, Saturday won the ski running championship of the United States Eastern Amateur Ski Association. Fighting a see-saw battle with two other contestants in sub-zero weather and in the face of a howling gale, he won the 18-mile marathon from the base of Mount Washington into Berlin. Six men started the race. Satre's time was two hours 2 minutes and 3 seconds.

CHARACTER TELLS THE STORY!

People throughout this country are giving more thought to hygiene and to the purity of remedies on the market, but no one doubts the purity of Doctor Pierce's vegetable medicines, for they have been so favorably known for many years that everyone knows they are just what they are claimed to be. These medicines are the result of long research by a well-known physician, R. V. Pierce, M. D., who compounded them from health-giving herbs and roots long used in sickness by the Indians. Dr. Pierce's reputation as a leading and honored citizen of Buffalo, is a sufficient guarantee for the purity of that splendid tonic and blood purifier, the Golden Medical Discovery, and the equally fine nerve tonic and system builder for women's ailments, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DOTTY LEARNS SOMETHING NEW.

Dotty picked the rose leaf and looked at it closely. Something had been chewing little round holes in the rose leaves.

"Isn't that funny?" Dotty mused to herself, "they look as if someone had cut them out with a pair of scissors."

"Sure it was a pair of scissors, but not the kind you were thinking of," buzzed a merry voice and a great big bee lighted on the rose bush and bowed very politely. "And it wasn't a fairy that cut those holes either."

"Well, of all things, Mr. Bee," Dotty laughed. "And pray may I ask, who did such cutting?"

"Certainly you may ask," chuckled the bee. "I did it with my own cutters. Not my husband, Mr. Bee but myself, Mrs. Leaf-cutting Bee, as folks call me. See here," and she showed Dotty how she cut the little round holes in the rose leaves with her saw-like mouth. "Clever isn't it? I hope you are not angry with me for cutting the rose leaves."

"Well, no, not exactly," replied Dotty. "Of course if you have any real reason for doing it, to eat or something like that, I guess I don't mind. But if you do it just to be destructive, Mrs. Bee, I'm afraid I would be displeased."

"Who Did Such Cutting?"

"Do you mean to say you think I would do it just for fun," questioned the bee. "Goodness, no! You see I'm building a nest and——"

"Oh, you use the bits of leaves to build with!" exclaimed Dotty. "Where is your hive, Mrs. Bee?"

"My goodness!" buzzed Mrs. Bee merrily. "I have no hive. I'm not a honey bee, I'm a leaf-cutting bee. Come over to this old dead log and I'll show you. Some of my relatives have their houses burrowed in the ground, others are swung in the branches of a tree, but I prefer a dead stump or log. The wood is so soft I can cut it and fashion a lovely nest." Then she showed Dotty her thimble-shaped cells.

"These I made from the leaf cuttings," she explained. "I think they are lovely beds for my eggs. Don't you? When I get one cell completed, I gather the honey and pollen from the thistle. I chew and mix the pollen and thistle honey into a conserve. I fill the leaf-cell full of that, then I tuck one of the eggs on top of that and with three of the little round pieces of rose leaf I close it up tightly. Now, when the egg hatches, the youngsters will feed upon the conserve until they crawl out into sunlight—lovely bees like I am."

"Well, of all things!" exclaimed Dotty. "I don't exactly like the looks of the chewed leaves, but I'll not complain if you will use only the leaves on this one rose bush."

"Thank you, Dotty," replied Mrs. Bee as with her little saw-like mouth she cut out another round piece of the rose leaf. "I'll promise you that. Now I must gather honey and pollen." Then bowing politely, Mrs. Leaf-cutting Bee sailed off to find a thistle, leaving Dotty gazing at the holes in her rose leaves.

HER OWN WAY

by A GIRL of TODAY

ANOTHER CASE.

"What's the matter, Rillie?" I exclaimed. "You look as though you had been ill a month!"

"Oh, do I look as bad as that?" she asked, her voice trembling. "I really wanted to look my best to-day. You see, it's the first time I've been out of the house since that awful story came out in the papers about Lyman and me.

"I wasn't intoxicated, Judy. Honest, I wasn't. And I didn't know for certain that Lyman was drunk until he ran into that tree while trying to kiss me."

"Well, Rillie, why did Lyme Andrews not take the blame for it all? Why didn't he say that only he had been drinking."

"I don't know. I haven't seen him since the story came out. But the gossip is getting so scandalous that I don't think Dad can stand it much longer. He said he was going over to have a talk with Lyman to-day and I came out to find him before Dad could get to him. If my father had only let me call Lyman up the next day, I think I could have made it all up with him. Now, oh Judy, I'm afraid Lyman will never speak to me again."

"Do you want him to, Rillie?" I asked in surprise. I could not understand how any girl could want to have anything more to do with any man who had shown such a yellow streak as Lyman had.

"Of course I do, Judy. Don't you see, I've got to make up with him? Don't you know that although I did nothing more than you or any other of the girls have done, yet I got into a mess by the accident and now the story has grown so big that I'm ruined if I don't marry Lyman? And, oh Judy, he hasn't asked me! You know I'm awfully fond of him and I couldn't live in this town if I though he was making love to any other girl!"

She stopped suddenly. A man's voice had called, "Rill! Oh, Rill!"

I looked behind me to see that it was Lyman Andrews.

"There!" I said. "There's your man and you won't be the clever girl I think if you don't make him come to terms immediately if you want to. I'll leave you now to do your stuff. I haven't much time to lose, Rillie, for I am getting ready to go to Toronto."

"Are you?" she asked in a tone of voice by which I knew she would rather go to Toronto than marry the man that was slowly coming toward her. I only stopped long enough to hear him say:

"Your Dad seems to think we ought to get married, Rill."

"And don't you want to, Lyman?" she asked.

I was out of hearing.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl eighteen years of age. Wherever I go men never seem to care for me. I cannot dance, because I never was taken to a dance.

Will you please tell me what to do?

FORGOTTEN.

FORGOTTEN: In the first place, my dear, you should learn how to dance. This is a very important social asset which every modern girl should possess. Join a club of some sort—literary, social or athletic—where you will meet young men and women who have tastes and interests in common with yours. Then, when you are invited out make an effort to dance, and if you suffer at first you will be rewarded later on when you are complimented on your grace.

LOVE'S STORY - - - - - - - - By Juanita Hamel

Poor little Dan Cupid is certainly kept busy! For in addition to being the God of Love, he also has to be the historian of each love affair which he engineers. From the time two of his subjects first meet, Dan begins to write the history of their love. Not in a dry, dull heavy tone, but he makes it a real love story. No two are ever just exactly the same, but each is a faithful chronicle of love's ways and love's sweetness as each couple sees them. His is a hard task, but he loves it and to him the most fascinating job in the world is the writing of "Love's Story."

WHAT A NOTION!

When the girls finally muster up enough courage to brazenly bare their ears to the cold blasts of winter and the searing heats of summer, they will make a huge discovery! Their ears will be bigger than before they were buried in the dark catacombs under ear buns.

"Ears are growing bigger all the time," says Dr. Pfuffer, ear specialist of Vienna. He blames it on the increasing number of sounds in modern life.

Probably the women's clubs will pick on jazz some more because of this!

Heliotrope perfume, someone tells me, is now made mainly from pepper. Flowers are being replaced in perfume manufacture by chemistry.

But the knowledge that ambergris, the base of most expensive perfumes, was only an offering from a distressed whale's stomach, never seemed to bother women any more than the fact that pearls were made from the oyster's attempt to get rid of grit or sand inside his shell, so there is little hope that perfume cyclones will cease to assail our olfactory nerves.

Since short skirts remain another season, beauty experts are turning their attention to the ankle. Special ankle massaging and steaming are now being done in many beauty parlors.

You can do this yourself and for nothing, at home. To attain the ankle one loves to see step, stand on the tiptoes, stretch, come down, about 100times a day.

YOUR CHILD'S BOOKS.

Books mean nothing, not even picture books, until a child is at least two. Do not be alarmed if the tot shows no interest until three. Buy linenette, untearable books of pictures only. The pictures should be of very simple design. Outline pictures are good.

Aged three, the child may be ready for "Mother Goose" and such stories as "Here and Now Story Book" by Lucy Sprague Mitchell.

At four, action pictures of trains and wagons and ships go over big

A SNAPPY RECIPE.

Party Bread—One-half cup lukewarm water, 2 tablespoons sugar. Break into water 2 yeast cakes. Set aside. Scald 2 cups of milk with 1 scant cup of sugar mixed with 2-3 cups cocoa. Add 3 tablespoons of shortening and 2 teaspoons salt. Leave until lukewarm then add yeast and 4 cups flour and beat well. Add 2 cups flour and stir in. Then knead until smooth and let rise until double in bulk. Knead slightly, shape in loaves and put in greased bread pans. Let rise again, then bake in moderate oven, increasing the heat,—bake from 45 minutes to one hour.

DUBLIN, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—The loss suffered by the Free State Government on Friday when a Laborite defeated the Government candidate in a bye-election in County Dublin, was offset yesterday by a victory in another bye-election at Leix-Offaly, where James Dwyer, the Government candidate, was elected, 19,345, over Art O'Connor, Republican, 18 523.

SPRING WEAR.

Long overblouses continue in favor at the moment, many of them showing button trimmings and little pleated front sections. The materials in use for spring wear include the ever popular crepes and satin-faced cantons, with a new material in an Elizabeth crepe, of firmer texture than georgette, and resembling crepe romaine.

For sports wear, there is a new effect called a "windbreak," developed in soft eiderdown and in brilliant colors, reds and green and yellows being used on the same garment, the bottom of the blouse banded by a deep cuff of yellow wool, which also forms the cuffs and the pattern carried out in strange designs that include the familiar "swastika." Camel hair, lined with jersey cloth, is also used in jackets and breeks for sports wear.

French scarves of heavy crepe-de-chine with borders and insertions of two-toned crochet will be good for spring wear, and are made with soft-hued tones that are a contrast to the loud colors shown lately.

In the bag line, tapestry is the latest idea and suede is also very good, made in large shapes.

Ties in bizarre tones and fanciful designs are new, tied in a bow with short loops and long ends. There is a broad crepe-de-chine scarf tie, gathered into bands of felt patterned in gilt, a four-in-hand tie, with modernistic treatment in dull tones of brown, blue, green and sand, and a heavy silk tie with bold stencilled flowers in crayon tints of yellow, blue and scarlet on a gray ground.

Her name was Violet. She wore violets. She dressed in violet and orchid shades and her eyes had a violet hue. Everyone who knew her thought of her as a violet although she was anything but the modest Violet type. She played upon her name and color scheme to get her effect.

What a pity we can't all have names that would assist us in expressing our individualities or our appearances. Unfortunately, most of us have names which require a lot of personality and clever dressing to overcome. Gertrude, Helen, Mildred and Anna can wear faddish clothes since their names express no particular personalities whereas Rose, Blanche, Gloria or Pearl, on the other hand, can wear clothes which express flowers, colors, romance and pearls.

Every name expresses something. It may express an entirely different personality than it's owner possesses, or it may express a lack of personality and one then has to build up a sufficiently strong personality to carry the name. It's too bad that we haven's a league the Lucy Stone league, which sponsor grown-ups changing names to suit their individu Screen and stage stars are aware of the influence of Take Lillian Gish, for in Doesn't she live up to the li of her name? ADVENTURES of the TWINS

No. 18.—THE TOLL-GATE BAT REAPPEARS.

Nancy took one of the magic balls out of her pocket and threw it on the ground.

Presto! Chango! There stood a spanking new motorcycle—license and all!

Then Nick took another one out of his pocket and threw it on the ground.

Chango! Presto! There stood another spanking new motorcycle, inviting them for a ride.

"I'll run one," cried Jupe, the kangaroo, settling himself in the front seat without losing any time. "Nancy, you get on behind."

"And I'll run the other," said Hickydoo, the wooden man.

In about two minutes all four were sailing down the road like two streaks of lightning.

I don't know what the speed limit was in the Land of the Blue Cherry. But whatever it was, I am sure they were breaking it.

"We certainly should catch old Blue Whiskers at this rate," said Jupe. "Everyone knows that a motorcycle can go faster than an automobile. He can't be further than the cross-roads by this time."

On they sped like the wind.

But they were counting their chickens before they were hatched, I'm afraid, for suddenly a big voice shouted, "Halt!" And both motorcycles had to slow down and stop.

There, if you please, sat the same big blue bat that they had met on their way to the palace.

Only this time, the Twins noticed uneasily, he had his nose tied up with a large handkerchief, and one eye was swollen shut.

And Jupe, you may be sure, was not any too comfortable, either, when he thought of the trick he had played. The bat, you know, was acting as toll-gate when the Twins met him the first time and refused to fold up his wings and let them pass by. When he demanded flies, and mosquitoes for toll, Jupe had presented him with a wasp's nest. The wasps had stung the poor bat, and he had flown away in a hurry.

Now, my dears, you may understand why the travelers looked so worried when they saw the same enormous fellow parked on a big stone in the middle of the road, his wings spread out on both sides, and completely blocking it.

He had a queer look in his eye.

"Oh, ho! So we meet again," said he, snapping his jaws together as though he meant business. "You can't get past this time unless you do exactly as I say."

"But we must get past," said Nancy. "Old Blue Whiskers, the wizard, stole the cherry and we have to get it before he eats it up."

"Must is a big word," said the bat. "And besides my nose is still sore as well as my temper. I'll let you past when I am good and ready."

"Dear me," said Hickydoo, getting off his bicycle and fumbling over his buttons with his wooden hands. "I'll have to look in my index and find what it says about bats. Nick, will you please press the seventh button and take out the bunch of yellow papers marked 'B.'"

"Don't trouble yourself," said the bat quickly. "I'll tell you all about bats that you need to know just now. First of all they can see better in the daytime than most people think they can. Second, they are always hungry. And I'm hungry now. I'm going to order a very fine dinner and you are going to get it."

"But we can't stop now, I tell you!" cried the Twins. "We have to ——"

But the big blue bat went on as though he had not heard. "I want a bushel of Jersey mosquitoes," he demaned, "a bushel of Chinese dragon flies, and a bushel of fuzzy caterpillars with their hair cut. Either get them for me at once or stay where you are."

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Since Henry VIII was king many changes have taken place in this world. Kings and other men have fewer wives, and every individual wife is a much more sensible woman. In four hundred years fair woman has reduced the weight of her garments by more than twenty-five pounds.

You would think a man was crazy who carried about habitually a twenty-five pound sack of flour. In the time of Henry VIII a woman wasn't "it," who carried on her frail shoulders less than thirty-five pounds of garments.

Our English sisters do better now. The afternoon outfit of to-day averages three and a half pounds. I am sure I am right in saying I have seen many an evening outfit in America which weighed considerably less than this average.

Women of this period, wearing clothes one-tenth the weight, are, in my opinion, just about ten times as efficient as their ancestors of King Henry's time. The heavy garments necessitated slow movements and a "dignified pose. Women of all countries have become more vigorous and it may be said, indeed, they have become athletic.

It isn't necessary to ride a horse, play tennis and golf, and excel in other sports. But every woman should be able to walk a considerable distance and to stand on her feet for hours at a time. The average woman must have this degree of physical strength to maintain her place in modern life. She could not keep up with the twentieth century procession if she had to wear thirty-five pounds of clothing.

We hear much about the "emancipation of woman." In no other way has she been more emancipated than in her release from bands and stays and from the burdensome weight of the old time dress.

It is easy to find fault with the modern costume. I confess there are times when I feel like giving a little wholesome advice regarding the informality of an occasional young woman. On the whole, however, the present-day costume is a thousand times better than it used to be.

Don't let anybody say the women of to-day are physically inferior to their ancestors of two or three hundred years ago. It isn't so. Study the tombstones in old cemeteries. You will be shocked to see how many very young mothers died.

Of course there are other reasons than better garments for the improved chances of womanhood. There is better medical knowledge, as well as better nursing now. But no one can question that the lighter, less restrictive clothing of our women has much to do with their increased efficiency.

Answers to Health Queries.

A. A. E. Q.—Can unconscious people hear while in this condition?

A.—Not if actually unconscious.

S. A. D. Q.—I had an operation on my knee and it has been stiff ever since. Will I ever be able to bend it? It has been stiff since October. I am eighteen years old.

2—What treatment would you advise?

A.—Massage and electricity should help such a condition. Your doctor will advise you.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 23.

A day of sudden and unexpected advantages is the prophecy based upon the astral mutations holding sway in a business as well as in affairs of a more personal nature. It seems as if there might be a radical change in environment in business as well as domestic connections, but the move should not be entered upon hastily or with impetuousity. New projects may be entered upon but care should be taken not to jeopardize the employment.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an important change during the year and they are justified to consider new propositions, but they should not be too hasty or turbulent in their decisions. They should not jeopardize their positions if in employment. A child born on this day should be original, inventive and artistically accomplished, given to romantic adventures and should make a success of its affairs if its impulses be held in check.

OVER YONDER.

I know of a place where we'd all like to go. Where all of the world longs to wander. The name of the spot? Well, I don't seem to know, so let's call the place Over Yonder.

There's happiness there and the sun's always bright. There's freedom of thought and of action. The days are so long that there's no time for night, and the spot's built on real satisfaction.

Who enters must leave all his worries behind, and a smile must spread over his face. For only the bright and the cheerful you'll find in this wonderful wonder where place.

The thrill of it all is a thrill bound to please, and I wish we could all reach the goal where mind gets a rest and all nerves are at ease, and there's peace for the body and soul.

We've all had our dreams of this place of content, and we've all let our deeper thoughts wander. I'm sure you will know, very well, what is meant, by the spot that I call Over Yonder.

The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin. —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

R. N.—You are well satisfied with yourself and are inclined to spend some time in meditation. You are apt to be misunderstood at times, partly through this habit of introspection and conservatism which makes you unfavorable to new enterprises. You have a keen insight where matters of finance are concerned. A very good thing for you is the out-of-doors. Do not spend all your time cooped up within the house. Do not take strong drugs or have much to do with doctors. Do not interfere with other people's affairs and refrain from criticism and from the habit of telling others things which you regard as truths and "good for them." How would you like it yourself? You are bound to succeed in anything you undertake, if you will work faithfully and persistently. Be careful of what you eat and you will retain the bloom and freshness of youth to a remarkable degree. Wear a ring with a pinkish jasper stone, an opal, or a waterpearl. Wednesday is your lucky day and February and November your good months.

Yes, you were born on Sunday. The day you enquire about, a Monday, is one to co-operate with those around you and to lend a helping hand wherever possible. Your colors are steel and purple.

WHERE YOU MUST BE AN ACTOR TO CATCH BIRDS.

Strategy has always been necessary in the hunting of birds, but rarely is it carried to such a degree as in certain portions of Africa.

Among the Munshi tribe of Bassa, men imitate the birds they are trying to capture. Dressed in shirts of straw, so that they will blend with the background, they hold a head of the species of bird they are seeking close to their own heads. In this strange garb, looking to human eyes more like a caricature of an ostrich than anything else they stalk their prey.

But to the unsuspecting bird they seem merely a brother swaying on a tall branch. And the method is remarkably successful. For most times the hunter returns laden down with his prey.

Of course, the method would be extremely dangerous in our own country. A hunter who looked like his prey from a distance would very likely get a bullet through his head before the day was over. But in Africa, where the woods are not so crowded with hunters and the method is well known, this does not happen.

The Munshi are not a hunting people, primarily. They are farmers and till their land with industry and patience. They are successful at this calling, too. But their weakness lies in a failing for liquor and a quarrelsome disposition.

And hunting is a good means of satisfying their craving for liquor, for the birds can be exchanged for the desired drink. That is the reason, undoubtedly, why they are willing to incur the danger of hunting in so precarious a fashion.

It requires practice to become sufficiently expert at imitating a bird to be able to deceive the bird itself. One must have patience and skill to stand in the fields hour after hour, watching for the prey and keeping one's hand crouched down out of sight.

It must be cruel for the bird who, unsuspectingly approaches one of his kind to be suddenly shot down. But since it is an effective means of getting his prey, the African uses it unhesitatingly, even though it involves such a great amount of pains on his part.

OTTAWA AND MONTREAL MAROONS DEADLOCKED IN OVERTIME GAME; 80 MINUTES SCORELESS HOCKEY

Second No-Decision Game in Five Clashes of the Season.

TITANIC STRUGGLE

Championship Hockey Kept Crowd on Toes—Heavy Checking.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 22.—(By Canadian Press).—Playing what can be classed a real championship hockey, and one of the best games seen here this season, Montreal Maroons and Ottawa Senators battled eighty minutes to a scoreless tie in a scheduled N.H.L. fixture here Saturday night. Eighty minutes of scoreless hockey, during the greater part of which time the crowd was standing up, marked the fifth meeting of these two teams this season, and resulted in the second game of of that number ending in a tie.

It was a titanic struggle between two determined aggregations that showed first class hockey from start to finish. As is their custom, Montreal introduced a heavy-checking game, but in the locals they met their match and the contest was a strenuous one from beginning to end. There was no deliberate rough work and while nine penalties were inflicted they were all for minor infractions.

During the course of the regular playing time each team scored a goal, but both tallies were called back for offside.

The game abounded in good hockey. It was speed, speed and more speed, and although in the final minutes the rival players were shaky on their feet, the pace never slackened, with the exception of short intervals the regular teams went the entire route without rest, Montreals used Holway, Carson, Dinsmore and Kitchen for brief spells, while Ottawa changed only three times using Kilread and Finnegan.

Tireless Attack.

Ottawas carried the play to their opponents tirelessly and this may have been a reason that would make it appear that the Senators commanded the play. They outshot the Maroons and gave Benedict a wealth of work to do, but the Montreal thrusts were numerous and dangerous.

The fast game in vogue forced the defence men to do an immense amount of puck carrying and in this respect the terrific speed of Clancy and the uncanny stickhandling of Boucher more than offset the brilliant efforts of Noble and Munro. On the forward line the argument was about even, with Nighbor and Denneny appearing in star roles.

The Montreal defence was the big factor in the gallant fight the team made. Seibert worked hard and Stewart showed great ability when the wings fed him in close. Broadbent had a tough assignment in watching Denneny. Carson looked like a promising hockey player and Dinsmore earned big hands for his persistent and clever work.

Boucher the Best.

Playing a game that was far above the average, Captain George Boucher stood out as about the best man on the ice. He went as well as he has ever been seen by an Ottawa crowd. Clancy was great both ways, with Nighbor and Denneny starring on the attack. Hooley Smith did well, but had a very busy evening with Seibert.

Referees Rodden and Laflamme were in absolute control through out and the little criticism levelled at them was more in fun than in earnest. A capacity house attended.

The line ups:

Referee—Mike Rodden, Toronto.

Judge of play—Dr. Jerry Laflamme, Toronto.

WON SIX DAY RACE.

Walthorn and McNamara First in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—Bobby Walthour, blond son of the veteran racer, and Reggie McNamara Saturday night won the international six-day bicycle race, finishing with a lead of six laps, a feat never before accomplished in the history of six-day racing. The greatest crowd that ever witnessed a race in the coliseum jammed the building for the thrilling finish.

Walthour and McNamara covered 2,296 miles and eight laps.

Freddie Spencer and Franco Georgetti finished second, six laps behind the leaders. Harry Stockelynch and Alphonse Goosens, the Belgian riders, were third. Seven laps back, while Carl Stockholm and Anthony Beckman finished fourth, nine laps back. Louis Benzatto and Otto Petri were fifth, ten laps behind. George Wambat and Charley Lacquehay, the French riders, were

PARKDALE GAME NEXT THURSDAY

Second Encounter For Group Title on Monday or Tuesday.

BOTH AT ARENA.

Parkdale and Peterboro will meet in the final game for the championship of Group No. 1 of the Senior O.H.A. on Thursday of this week and Monday, March 1, or Tuesday March 2, both games to be played at the Toronto Arena.

Goals will count on the round and the winner wil meet the Big Six winner, either Galt or London, next week for the O.H.A. Senior championship. The London-Galt series will be decided this week, the first game tomorrow night and the second on Friday.

The Parkdale - Peterboro series should be productive of smart spectacular hockey. Strong pressure is being exerted on Harry Watson to induce the Olympic star to turn out for the Paddlers in this crucial series and he may consent to do so. The Petes are in good shape, coming through the big battle at Kitchener without injuries and they are looking forward to the clash with Parkdale with confidence in their ability to give the Toronto crew the toughest kind of an argument in both fixtures.

SPEEDWAY RECORD.

142.90 Miles an Hour at Miami.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—Bob McDonough, Los Angeles, set a new world's speed record Saturday when he flashed around the Miami-Fulford speedway at an average clip of 142.90 miles per hour, while qualifying for the Washington birthday races.

McDonough's mark supersedes that set last Wednesday by Ralph Hepburn, who averaged 141.19 miles per hour to beat the previous world record of 140.6 miles set jointly by Cooper and Leon Duray at Culver City, Calif., last Thanksgiving Day.

WIN FOR ST. PATS.

Toronto Pros. Improve Position By Beating Pittsburgh.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—While St. Patricks have only the slimmest of chances to get in the play-off for the National League title, they have not yet given up hope of overcoming those in front of them in the league race, and Saturday night, by defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates by 3 to 1, they improved their position for the struggle down the home stretch.

REG. NOBLE HAS FRACTURED SKULL

Montreal Maroon Star Hurt in Game With Ottawa.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Reg. Noble, defence player of the Montreal Maroons, is in hospital here, suffering from a fractured skull. The accident occurred in the third period of the game between Montreal and Ottawa at the capital on Saturday night when he collided with Hooley Smith. The latter's stick caught Noble across the lower forehead. Noble continued to play. Yesterday he was examined by the club physician, Dr. Frank Scully, and the fracture diagnosed.

130-FOOT SKI JUMP.

HANOVER, N.H., Feb. 22 (Canadian Press). — University of New Hampshire won the first annual championship of the Eastern Intercollegiate Sports Union here Saturday, nosing out Dartmouth by one point. The final scores were: New Hampshire 29, Dartmouth 28, McGill 18, Williams 11, Loyola 2, and Bates 0.

Proctor, of Dartmouth, broke the Hanover record for the jump with a 130-foot exhibition performance.

CLEVELAND SIGNS TWO.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 22. — (Canadian Press).—The Cleveland American League Club has announced the signing of Second Baseman O. G. Lacey, of the Richmond team of the Virginia League, and Catcher "Red" Strader, of St. Mary's College, Oakland, Calif.

WARKWORTH GIRLS WIN HOCKEY GAME

Beat Campbellford Ladies 2-0 in Fast Encounter Last Night.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 22—Warkworth ladies defeated Campbellford ladies 2 to 0 in an exhibition game played here last night. The visiting ladies had the better of the play all the way through and only the clever goal tending of Miss Potts in the Campbellford net kept the score down. She batted the puck out with her stick, she kicked it out with her feet and picked it off with her hands and threw it into the corners.

Miss Greenley in the Warkworth net, although not called upon to save as many shots, took care of everything that came her way. It was the wonderful skating and good stickhandling of the girls from the village in the valley that won them the game, their third win in as many starts this season. Miss Campebll on right wing and Miss Copperthwaite at centre are two of the fastest skaters playing ladies' hockey and they checked Miss Irwin and Miss Blue, the Campbellford stars, so closely that they couldn't get away on many dangerous rushes, while the break fast, when in possession of the puck, and both took the shortest route to the goal. Miss Copperthwaite got both the visitors' goals, one in the first period, when she carried the rubber from centre, right in close to the Campbellford net, and flipped it in the side. She got the other from a scrimmage in the second period, after Miss Campbell carried it down the boards and shot from the side. The rest of the Warkworth girls held their end up in fine style, and there didn't appear to be a weak spot in the whole line-up, but the red sweatered twins, Miss Campbell and Miss Copperthwaite, were the outstanding stars of a very interesting game.

Referee—Chas. Holmes, Campbellford.

TWO SWIMMING RECORDS.

DETROIT, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—Walter Laufer, 18-year-old Cincinnati Y.M.C.A. entry, established two new world's swimming records at the Michigan A. A. U. meet Saturday night.

Laufer swam the 220 yards free style in 2.02 4-5. The former record, held by Johnny Weismuller, was 2.03. Laufer's other record was the 150 yards, back stroke event, his time being 1.43 1-5. This bettered Weismuller's record of 1.44 4-5.

BOSTON SECURE IN THIRD PLACE DEFEATING CANADIENS BY 3 TO 1

Canadien Goaler Beaten by Long Shots—Dr. Stewart Good in Bruins' Nets.

MORENZ BACK AGAIN

MONTREAL, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press). — Boston Bruins defeated Canadiens 3 to 1 at the Arena Saturday night, and their victory, together with Pittsburgh's downfall at Toronto, put the clan of Art Ross into a secure third place position in the standing of the National Hockey League.

Systematic hockey against a more or less disorganized opposition gave the Bruins their victory. The Bruins played a four and five man defensive game practically throughout and when an opportunity presented itself they would break away in neat two and three-man combination rushes to pepper Rheaume in the Canadien net. Two of the Boston goals were scored on shots from the blue line, Kheaume being caught napping on long drives from Hitchman and Cooper, the former's goal coming in the first session and Cooper scoring in the middle stanza. Sprague Cleghorn made it 3 to 0 for the Bruins half way through the final session and Canadien's lone counter came as the result of a fast combination rush with Joliat and Morenz working a double pass to break through the strong opposition defence. Joliat swooped in on the Boston goalie, Stewart, with Morenz right beside him. Stewart made a stab at the puck, but Joliat slipped it over to Morenz who lifted the disc into the top corner.

Cleghorn's Neat Goal.

Sprague Cleghorn's goal in the last period capped a fine evening's play for the Boston captain. Cleghorn did not show much on the offensive, but his defensive work beside the sturdy Hitchman gave Doc Stewart good support. The goal scored by Cleghorn was the prettiest individual effort of the match. The Bruins' captain rushed the length flanked by two wing men. As he neared the opposing defence, he faked a pass to the left and then slipped the puck between Mantha's skates, rushed around and retrieved the disc to get in close on Rheaume and gave the latter no chance whatever to save.

The real hero of the Boston victory, however, was Dr. Charlie Stewart, the goal tender. Canadiens, although beaten, were tireless in their efforts, and their play somewhat pestered Stewart. Howie Morenz made his re-appearance with Canadiens after an enforced absence of one game owing to an injured leg. The Boston sharpshooters, Cooper and Herberts, aided by Harrington, gave a finished display and their backchecking efforts relieved their defence of plenty of work.

Early in the second period, Canadiens were rushing matters and were giving Stewart a hot time in the Boston net. A Canadien attack broke through and Stewart rushed out of his net to save an al lost sure counter. During the melee he lost his stick and it was swept away. Canadiens claimed that the goalie had thrown his stick and claimed a goal, but both officials, Cooper Smeaton and Dave Ritchie ruled otherwise. Another dispute arose in the third period during a scramble in front of the Boston net. The goal judge evidently raised his hand but the official over-ruled him and when the players were untangled, Stewart was found to bet sitting on the puck outside the goal-line.

The Line-up.

Boston — Goal, Stewart; defence, Cleghorn and Hitchman; centre, Herberts; wings, Cooper and Harrington; subs., Jackson, Geran Stuart, LaRose, Cahill, Stevens.

Canadiens—Rheaume, goal; defence, Coutu and Leduc, centre, Morenz; wings, Joliat and Boucher; subs., P. Lepine, Mantha, Larochelle H. Lepine, Paulhus.

Officials — Cooper Smeaton and Dave Ritchie.

CALGARY WINS 2-0.

Increase Long List of Victories Over Saskatoon.

CALGARY, Alta., Feb. 22 (Canadian Press)—Calgary defeated Saskatoon 2 to 0, here Saturday night, in a Western Canada hockey league fixture.

Both goals were registered in the final session, the first by Wilson after he had picked up a loose puck from Arthur and the second by Duncan.

The Tigers have beaten the Sheiks in every game on Calgary ice since February 12, 1923.

The Tigers returned to their old system of a three man defence in front of Winkler and the players awaited the opportunity for breaks. This proved more beneficial than the three man attack as the defence was practically invincible and the few times it was penerated Winkler was in the way.

DISTRICT HOCKEY.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 22 — Port Hope Juniors came out by motor for a friendly game of hockey with the local six on Friday evening, the heavy snow storm making play difficult on the open rink and necessitating shovelling the ice between each period.

Victory remained with the home team, the score being 3-2. A. McCorry was umpire. The visitors scored both their goals in the first period, Millbrook winning 2 in the second and one the third. Richards who was in goal for the home team in the first period, changing to defence for the rest of the game, made a record shot in the second period, lifting the puck about two feet clear of the ice, sending it the full length of the rink and into the net at the Port Hope end, to the amazement of Goodman (goal) and both players and onlookers. The line-up was:

Port Hope		Millbrook
Goodman	goal	E. C. Richards
Giddy	defence	R. Shaw
Taylor		F. Russell
Sainsbury	forwards	H. Brown
Fitzsimmons		N. Rowland
Hayden	centre	S. Sloan
	subs	Jeffreys
		Ingram, Gilmour

Cosmos 3; Strollers 1

A well-contested game of hockey between the Cosmos Intermediates and the Millbrook Strollers was one of the attractions at the Cosmos rink this week, the former winning by a score of 3-1. The players lined up:

Cosmos Intermediates		Strollers
J. Larmer	goal	Richards
F. Gray	defence	K. Donnelly
A. Johnston		E. Carson
H. Jeffreys	forwards	S. Gilmour
M. McCorry		H. Brown

SPECIAL TO LINDSAY.

Omemee Fans Visited Scugog Town To See Team Play.

OMEMEE, Feb. 22. — Omemee looked like "the deserted village" on Wednesday night when the six o'clock C.N.R. train pulled out, with about 140 citizens on board, for Lindsay, to witness the home team battle with Valentia boys for the Hughes cup. Unfortunately, the Omemee boys met defeat to the tune of 3-0. However, the game was well played and all enjoyed the outing, which was due to the citizens standing behind the team and securing a special train for the return trip.

RUEL A HOLDOUT.

Wants "Nominal Increase" From Washington.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 22 (Canadian Press). — Harold ("Muddy") Ruel, Washington catcher, has admitted that he is a holdout. He said he had returned the contract offered him by President Clark Griffith of the Senators and reiterated his request for what he termed a "nominal increase" in salary.

Recently Griffith was quoted as saying he considered Ruel and Shortstop Roger Peckinpaugh 'too' old for regular jobs.

NEWCASTLE OUT OF ENGLISH CUP

Defeat by Claxton Orient Big Surprise on Sunday.

HISTORY REPEATED

LONDON, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press Cable)—From the fifth round of the English Cup competition, played on Saturday emerged one of the big sensations of soccer football in the defeat of Newcastle United by the second division Clapton Orient team. Thirty-five thousand cheering fans witnessed this magnificent fight up up by the Londoners against the Northumbrians, and once more history repeated itself in Newcastle falling badly in the cup tie before a member of a junior string. Last year it was Leicester City, then playing in second division company, who ousted the Tynesiders. This year it is a metropolitan aggregation, and one not too favorably placed in its own department, that accomplished the act.

This was not the only instance of a first division club bowing the knee to an outsider, however, for Notts County, on their own ground, had to accept a one-nothing defeat at the hands of Fulham, and, as if to make things still more interesting, Swansea Town, another second string team, completes the Trinity from that branch of the game that moves into the quarter-finals.

Six games out of the eight were decided Saturday, the victors being Clapton Orient, Swansea Town, Fulham, Notts Forest, Bolton Wanderers and Manchester City. Another effort will have to be put forth by Sunderland against Manchester United, and by Aston Villa against Arsenal.

Deluge of Goals

The Manchester City vs. Crystal Palace game was nothing short of a massacre for the Palace. Goals galore were scored, there being fifteen counters tallied at the end of the game. Of these Manchester City got eleven, while the Palace gathered in the other four. The City had stacked up seven of their eleven at half time, while in the second frame the Palace ran up goal for goal with them. They had started too late, however.

Sunderland were leading Manchester United at half-time by two goals to one. They were unable to maintain that lead and in the second half, the Lancastrians retorted with reversing that count, thus emerging with a draw.

At Villa Park, neither Aston Villa nor Arsenal were able to register in the first frame, while after the interval each rang up a counter.

The locale of the next games will be reversed for those who drew Saturday, Sunderland being obliged to travel to Old Trafford for what may be the deciding encounter, and Aston Villa making the trip to Highbury.

LENGLEN OUT OF TENNIS SINGLES UNTIL CHAMPIONSHIP AT STAKE

IN GREAT FORM

NICE, France, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—Helen Wills and Suzanne Lenglen will not meet again in the tennis singles on the Riveria this season. Madamoiselle Lenglen decided last evening to refrain from play in singles until the St. Cloud or Wimbledon meeting.

She has even cancelled her entry for the singles of the Nice club tournament, which begins March 7. Explaining her action, the French champion said:

"I consider the French open championships and Wimbledon more important than Riviera tennis. My doctor tells me if I continue to play in the Riviera tennis I will be stale by June. I am leaving for a quiet spot in the mountains Monday, but will return on Saturday to play in the doubles of the Beuamnot Cup at Monte Carlo with Didi Vlasco, but I will not enter any tournament until the Nice meeting, and then only in the women's and mixed doubles."

Miss Wills Victor.

Miss Helen Wills, playing high class tennis yesterday, defeated Mrs. Satterthwaite in the finals of the women's singles in the Beaulieu tournament 6-1, 6-1. The California girl showed impressive style, overwhelming the English player in a manner that Suzanne herself might envy, and gave a display of baseline, overhead and ground strokes that the experts agreed almost reached perfection.

Mademoiselle Lenglen and her mother received The Associated Press correspondent Sunday morning, a d Suzanne announced her decision not to play.

"I have now met and defeated Miss Wills," she said. "I am sure that no one can say I am afraid to meet her. I will be pleased to face her under circumstances more appropriate for tennis than those under which our match on Tuesday last was played at Cannes.

"Miss Wills will have two other chances to meet me within six months. That should be enough. At any rate I would rather play on grass courts, for instance Wimbledon."

When informed that Miss Wills had played remarkable tennis against Mrs. Satterthwaite, Suzanne asked the score. She was informed, and she remarked: "That is very good indeed. That is about the same score as I beat Mrs. Satterthwaite.

Mlle. Lenglen reached her decision to withdraw from play in the single before the Wills-Satterthwaite match, when her physician absolutely forbade her to play another "hectic" singles match for at least four months.

Miss Wills at Best.

Miss Wills' playing yesterday is described by old-time experts as the best any woman player has shown. She appeared to have gained confidence since her meeting with Suzanne. She seemed Sunday to have everything that goes to make a champion; she played electrifying tennis at the net, while her baseline and ground stroke game was just as severe as ever. Her volleying overhead game, which had been her weak spot, was magnificent, and she followed up her service to the net, killing points several times on service returns.

Mrs. Satterthwaite won the first game; then Helen reeled off seven straight and the set. She also won the first game in the second set, but Mrs. Satterthwaite rallied and took the second game. But the United States champion was not to be denied, and won the next five games, set and match.

Mrs. Satterthwaite gave her a hard battle, playing desperately and bringing six games to deuce, and not losing a single game at love. The fourth game in the first set went to deuce seven times. It was the turning point of the match.

The Point Score

First Set:—
Miss Wills.. .. .. ..2,4,7,12,7,4,4—40
Mrs. Satterthwaite 4.1.5.10,5,2,1—28
Second Set:—

Satterthwaite .. .. ..5,4,5,2,2,2,3—23

ERROR CORRECTED.

Colts Won Game, Not Rink Rats, as Reported.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 22.—By some error the report of the hockey match on Tuesday night between the Rink Rats and the Colts, the credit of the large end of the 7-5 score was given the Rats, who were actually beaten by the Colts. The following is the correct standing of the game:

First Period.

Stabler 1 minute, Rats; E. Northey 3 minutes Colts; B. Wannamaker 6 minutes Rats; Stabler 1 minute Rats, Blewett 4 minutes Colts, Penalties, B. Wannamaker, Rats. S. Trude, Colts. Score 3-2 for the Rats.

Second Period.

Blewett 1 minutes, Colts; D. Hill 9 minutes, Colts; Blewett, 2 minutes, Colts; M. Wannamaker, 3 minutes, Colts. Score at the end of the second period 6-3 for the Colts. Penalties, Stabler, Northey, Sherin and B. Wannamaker, Rats; M. Wannamaker twice and Sabatino, Colts.

Third Period.

Stabler, 7 minutes, Rats; Blewett, 1 minute, Colts; Stabler, 5 minutes, Rats. Total score 7-5 for the Colts. Penalties, B. Wannamaker, Rats; Hill, M. Wannamaker, Colts.

The mistake probably occurred in the fact of the presence of Wannamakers and Northeys on both teams.

The Colts have played three games to date and won three games.

HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

By Special Arrangement With Colliers' Magazine.

JOYCE WETHERED—DOOR-KNOB TURN OF WRIST.

As soon as the club-head begins to move, the left wrist must be allowed to start and turn gradually over towards the body. This rolling over of the left wrist is similar to the wrist action used in turning the handle of a door from left to right.

Taking it for granted that the head has been kept still, it will come naturally to the player to allow the left hip to turn slightly outwards, the left shoulder to come round until the point of it is in line with the left eye and the ball, and the left knee to bend.

At the top of the swing, if the actions have been correct, the left arm will be nearly straight, the right elbow will be close to the player's side, the toe of the club should be pointing towards the ground, and the shaft of the club should be in a horizontal position.

This last point is of vital importance, as, if the club is allowed to drop beyond this position, the swing is too full, and the player is inclined to lose control. The club must come down the way it goes up.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

UNIQUE DECISION.

By a vote of 5 to 3 the rules committee has again legalized the use of resin by the pitchers.

The three dissenting votes were poled by the American League representatives on the committee. The three National Leaguers, Judge Landis and Dale Gear, representing the minors, went on record as favoring it.

Personally I am sorry that resin has come back as a pitching asset. First, because it is going to make more woe for the umpires and they already have plenty. Second, because it will act as an opening wedge for the return of trick pitching.

Five years ago the majors ruled out the right of a pitcher to apply any foreign substance on the ball. This was to eliminate all forms of freak pitching that had reached such a stage that most twirlers were using trick rather than natural stuff.

Pitching had become too powerful, batting had slumped and the magnates wanted to increase the hitting.

Unfortunately they went too far by putting in the rabbit ball at the very time they eliminated trick pitching.

Doing away with trick pitching which had reached alarming proportions, would have remedied the lack of batting, by tending to equalize pitching and batting.

Instead of getting a balance, the magnates went from one evil to another. From pitcher's battles, the games developed into slugging matches, featuring the home run, with Babe Ruth as the leading performer.

Near the close of last season, under constant pressure by the sports writers, who insisted the rabbit ball was making a joke out of the game, the manufacturers so changed the core of the ball, that its liveliness was decreased at least 20 per cent., probably more.

At that, a rabbit ball is better than trick pitching. All batters have an equal chance against the lively ball, but all pitchers are not capable of trick pitching. There are some who simply refuse to use dishonest methods to increase their effectiveness.

Resin is a foreign substance. Now that a foreign substance can be applied to the hands, it isn't always going to be resin.

If a pitcher puts a certain amount of resin on his hands, for drying purposes as the rule states, and then perhaps rubs his hands on his trousers, there is bound to be a dirty spot on the uniform as a result. That dirty spot is sure to cover a multitude of pitching sins.

In the old days of trick pitching many hurlers would have certain spots on their uniform into which they would rub powdered emery, which is not unlike resin in appearance. And they always managed to get the powdered emery on the ball.

Other pitchers went so far as to have a large sized piece of emery paper sewed inside the shirt of their uniform and by rubbing the ball over that spot could easily roughen it.

The pitchers aren't going to be satisfied with merely using resin to dry their hands, it's going to be an excuse for many other forms of trick pitching. And always the pitcher will assure the umpire he is using nothing but resin.

Even at that, resin will accomplish most of the desired results. It will slightly discolor the ball, it will tend to roughen it, it will help load the seams. What more help could a pitcher want?

DE PAOLA FEARED ON AUTO TRACKS

Champion Diver of 1925 Ready to Repeat—Has Four Rivals.

NEW YORK, Feb. —There should be a real battle for the 1926 automobile racing championship between the four leaders of last season.

The quartet, composed of Peter De Paola, Tommy Milton, Harry Hartz and Bob McDonogh, is getting ready for a hectic campaign on the board, brick and dirt tracks.

De Paola, it will be recalled, copped most of the honors last year. And this season looms as one of the most feared contenders in the game. Another, the much beloved Ralph De Palma, uncle of the famous De Paola, is expected to reach new heights this season.

The coming campaign should be one of the greatest in the history of the sport. Big races are scheduled in various sections of the country. Quite a few of the tracks are down to stage two classics. Most of the events will be at the 250-mile distance.

The main feature, of course, is the annual 500-mile grind at the Indianapolis speedway. It's the blue ribbon classic, bringing together virtually all the outstanding drivers in America and quite a few from Europe.

Automobile racing engines, according to report, will be smaller this season. But greater speed is expected. An average of over 130 miles an hour is predicted in some racing quarters.

As usual, a big list of prizes will be put up in the various races, with the Indianapolis, Culver City and Altoona events perhaps outdoing the others a trifle in a monetary way.

KLAN UNCOVERED BLACKMAIL SAYS KLALIFF IN INTERVIEW

Dr. J. H. Hawkins Defends British Empire Klan From Attack.

MANY DIVISIONS.

Klan of Kanada, He Says, Has Many Branches, All 'Originals.'

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—When interviewed to-day at his office, Imperial Headquarters, corner King and Bay streets, Dr. J. H. Hawkins, Imperial Klaliff and Chief of Staff, Ku Klux Klan of the British Empire, made the following statement, in answer to an interview published in The Peterboro' Examiner, with a so-called organizer of the Ku Klux Klan of Kanada. Dr. Hawkins' statements were as follows:

"A history of Klancraft in Kanada shows the Ku Klux Klan of the British Empire was first started at Niagara Falls in April, 1924, and has been in continuous operation and under the same name and with no splits or divisions until the present time. That the Klans of Kanada claim that they are the original Klan is misleading, as the records show they were organized in Toronto early in 1925." Dr. Hawkins further stated that he came to Canada in March, 1925, to work for the Klan of Kanada, having been prior to that time a National Lecturer for the Klan in the United States and that he left the Klan of Kanada by resignation which was affirmed under the seal and signature of the officers of the Klan of Kanada on the 25th day of June, 1925, and that in the meeting referred to in The Examiner article held in the park in Peterboro', Dr. Hawkins publicly stated his reasons for leaving the Klan of Kanada. The main reason being, the attempt to commercialize the Klan and take Christianity out of it. Since that time, he has been connected with the Klan of the British Empire as Imperial Klaliff and Chief of Staff and has worked to the best of his ability to give Canada a clean, Christian, Protestant organization.

He said that it was the Klan itself that discovered Gilbert's midseeds and took steps to have him prosecuted as it will do with any of its members found violating the law and that the Klan expects to render every assistance possible in the handling of this case.

Dr. Hawkins further states he would like to know which branch of the Klan of Kanada, the organizer who gave the interview to The Examiner, is connected with. The one headed by Dr. C. Lewis Fowler, a banished Klansman from United States, or that headed by Otter Elliott, of Ontario fame, or that headed by a man named Wilkie, who all claim to be the Klan of Kanada. Which branch of this hydra-headed organization did A. C. Hill represent in Peterboro' and why was he banished if the members were so carefully picked and which of these claims to be the original Klan or are they all originals as per the claim advanced by each?

The Klan of the British Empire courts investigation and has nothing to conceal from the public but is an organization composed of the best people of Canada but like other organizations, even to the church itself, will at times be deceived by its members but when they are found to be violating the law, prompt action will be taken just as has been done in the Gilbert case.

PAINTINGS SHOWN AT CONSERVATORY

An interesting exhibition of paintings by Montreal and Toronto women, with a number of small pictures by Mrs. John Crane of this city, and a few pieces loaned by Dr. T. W. H. Young, the work of his brother, C. Warburton Young, of British Columbia, was held at the studio of the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Women's Art Association. The showing included a number of very pretty pictures, the majority of the small, decorative type, with a range that extended from the dainty little miniature scenes of natural beauty painted by Mrs. Crane to a large impressionistic canvas that aroused a good deal of varying comment and mixed emotions in its beholders.

"Meditation," a large canvas depicting a woman with fair hair sewing on some pink stuff by a window, was painted by Mrs. Dignam of Toronto, and was outstanding by reason of the excellence with which the artist had portrayed the meditative aspect of her subject. Mrs. Dignam also showed a couple of woodland scenes, in "Evening" and "October Woods," in which the bright colors were used in heavy, rather stiff fashion. A second large canvas by the same artist, "Day Dreams," its surface crossed by parallel lines showing either an unfortunate rolling of the canvas at one time, or the use of a wrong mixing medium by the creator, showed a grey-clad, small girlie sitting in a green, grassy woodland spot, and demonstrated once more the painter's grasp of the dreamy character of her work. These two large pieces were priced at $200 each, as was "Brome Lake," a large picture recalling the extraordinary work of "The Group of Seven," exhibited here a couple of seasons ago.

"Brome Lake" demonstrated admirably the modern artist's idea of impressionistic treatment of a moderate type. Taking the watery surface and the foreground trees which are a prime favorite with the impressionist, who sees in water and trees possibly the very best media for the sort of painting which aims to depict the impression, not of a nature lover exactly, but of an extremely hyper-sensitive mind, the artist, Miss Nora Collyer, of Montreal, used a broad, lean-grey splash of paint to depict her lake, with a sky of green and white overhead and a few twisted trees in the foreground. In a "Sketch of Foster," a smaller bit, the same artist uses trees in this manner to get a vivid effect. The interest in these pictures lies in the fact, not that they are attractive representations of nature in her loveliest moods, but that they are different from the ordinary run.

Two pictures painted by Miss Katrina S. V. Buell, of Toronto, were worthy of special note. They were "Still Life," a decorative thing with a grey vase filled with a mass of bright-colored blooms, and "White House," also priced at $200, and one of the prettiest picture in the exhibition. Painted in the broad, flat style, on a rough canvas, it required only a few feet of distance to bring out its excellence, its bright atmosphere, the soft coloring of its typical old French house, with grey stone walls, green trees and blue-smocked concierge.

Miss Maud McLaren of Toronto showed some pretty things. "Fox Gloves" was like a poster in the brilliance of its coloring and impressionistic in the blurred vagueness of its outlines, but it would light up a dark room admirably. "Glen Grove was a brown and white snow scene, typically Canadian, and "Beech Leaves" was a really lovely bit of soft-toned work, the seve and yellow branch of autumn leaves still clinging to a large beech tree surrounded with snow lit by blue shadows. There was no uncomfortable crowding in this picture, and it gave a smooth impression of real artistry in its handling.

There is a clever handling of soft greys, blues and green, in the work of Miss Marjory E. Cass, of Montreal, showing "A Winter's Day," and "Low Tide," and Miss Lorna Reid of Toronto had a picture entitled "Child," showing a fair-haired buxom lassie holding a doll. Miss L. O. Adams of Toronto sent a picture entitled "Flowers."

The small miniature paintings in oils and water colors done by Mrs. John Crane of this city were much admired, and included seevral exceptionally pretty delineations of natural beauty in soft colors, delicately painted, and one brilliantly-hued bit of autumn loveliness, with a huge beech trunk topped by yellow and red leaves.

In the collection loaned by Dr. Young, showing the work of his brother, Mr. C. Warburton Young of British Columbia, there were several interesting small pieces. One, of "Mount Cheum, Agassiz, B.C." was a replica of a picture painted for the Prince of Wales, and there was an exceedingly interesting bit in the small blue-toned, melancholy head of a bloodhound, against a light background. A suggestion of an old-fashioned print was in the artist's delineation of a group of horses, there was life and action in the bucking broncho with a cowboy astride, and soft, atmospheric values in the sepia-toned picture of grazing sheep.

During the afternoon, tea was served, Mrs. V. Foster and Miss B. Beatty presiding at a table prettily centred with a bowl of narcissus and yellow candles. Assistants were Mrs. R.J. Kidd, Mrs. A. Harris, Mrs. C. B. White, and Mrs. Gilchrist.

CHICAGO COLISEUM LEASED FOR HOCKEY

Promotion of Amateur Game Reported Plan.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—A 15-year lease on the Coliseum, meeting place of national conventions and scene of many expositions and sports events, has been announced as the preliminary move toward extensive promotion of ice hockey in the middle west and east next winter. The lease calls for a schedule of 20 games a season, to be played at the Coliseum. The project is being financed by New York and middle western interests.

The proposal is to organize amateur league, in this section principally, and an inter-city league with team membership in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Boston and Providence R.I. To accomodate the play, the Coliseum will be remodelled to provide a rink 85 by 190 feet.

"DEVIL HORSE" IS HERO OF THEIR PERILOUS ROMANCE

(By NEA Service.)

NEW YORK Feb. 22.—"Rex" jet stallion star who yesses no man, adds another spectacular chapter to his film exploits in Hal Roach's "The Devil Horse," soon to be released.

The galloping melodrama, set against a wild Wyoming scene, presents "Rex" first as a wobbly colt, survivor with his boy pal of an Indian massacre in pioneer days.

With an implacable hatred of Indians, whose taint to him is identified with pain and abuse, he grows up to become the leader of such red men as cross his path. Hence the dread soubriquet "The Devil Horse."

Each unaware that the other lives, "Rex" and the bay he has never forgotten, as the one kindly human, meet again dramatically when the white man, as captive of the Indians, is consigned to the exepected fury of the stallion. There is recognition, rescue and the awed flight of the captors.

"Rex" takes an heroic part in the perilous romance of the youth, played by the famous horseman Yakima Canutt, and the daughter of a cavalry commandant, played by Gladys McConnell.

PRIZES PRESENTED AT SUNDAY SCHOOL

Many Children Receive Award For Regular Attendance at Park Street.

There was a large attendance at Park Street Baptist Sunday School yesterday afternoon when the presentation of prizes for attendance for 1925 took place. The superintendent, Mr. T. Dunkley, occupied the chair. A short programme was given consisting of singing, a recitation by Fern Rahmel, and a quartette by Messrs. M. Dunkley, W. H. Saunders, George Nichols and Alfred Thompson, Mr. Cecil Lapp presided at the organ. The pastor Rev. Mr. McLeod, also spoke for a few minutes.

The superintendent then called on the secretary-treasurer, Mr. O. S. Matchett, to come forward. He also informed the Sunday School that this was Mr. Matchett's fourteenth anniversary as secretary-treasurer of the school. The secretary gave a short history of the school, and called on Dr. G. Raymore Scott to come forward and present the prizes in the unavoidable absence of Miss Maggie Mann who was superintendent from 1893 until 1910. Dr. Scott congratulated the school on its splendid record of attendance and announced that he would give a special prize to all those who would complete a 15 years' record of perfect attendance.

The following are the names of those present 50 Sundays or over, also the number of years to their credit.

Theatre

AT THE REGENT

WHO REMEMBERS GOOD OLD DAYS WHEN YOU SAW "EAST LYNNE"?

Who of the older generation doesn't remember when he first saw "East Lynne?"

Remember how you sat up in the gallery munching peanuts, waiting for the curtain to rise? Remember how you nudged your buddy when the two-piece—or maybe even three-piece!—orchestra sneaked into the pit and began tuning up?

Then some raucous-voiced guardian of the gallery gods, standing in the rear, way high up under the very rafters of the opera house, yelled "HAT!" And the curtain creaked a little, then rolled up, a bit unevenly, but finally managing to make the grade.

And so the show began!

Remember how you craned your neck to see over the head of the big fellow sitting in front of you? Remember how you applauded when the dashing hero, Archibald Carlyle, came on the stage—and oh, yes, do you remember with what earnestness and venom you hissed every time Sir Francis Levison, the dastardly "villyun" stalked through the scene?

But there'll be no reminders of "them days" when you see "East Lynne" at the Regent Theatre as William Fox has produced under the direction of Emmett Flynn. For today the picture palaces are far more metropolitan than even the best of the stock company theatres of thirty and forty years ago.

Whatever else you may spend depends on how you spend your time.

He always spilled his vituals but
He didn't give a whoop
Because he had a vest that matched
The color of his soup.

The careless pedestrian and the careless autoist would think the same thing of each other—if either one of them ever stopped to think.

Winter Coats

That arrived late. These coats are fur trimmed, this season's models and popular shades, fully lined, and in all sizes from 18 to 40. Prices were $20 to $30 each. While they last, this week, choice at only

$10.00

This drastic price reduction is made to absolutely clear these Coats, so that none will be carried over. Come early, while sizes are here.

Last week's Linen sale was a most gratifying success, so much so that the ladies of Peterboro' may look for oher linen sales from time to time as they may be considered opportune.

OBITUARY.

HARRY SIMPSON.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Simpson attended the funeral of their son Harry, who died in St. Michael's Hospital, last week. He was in his 38th year, and had served overseas for four years with the Princess Pats, having been wounded twice and gassed once. He was one of only 14 of the original battalion who returned. Besides his sorrowing parents he leaves to mourn his loss his wife and son Harold; also his four brothers, John of Mactier; Theodore, Bruce and Melville of Rockcroft; and two sisters, Mrs. Fred Miles of Detroit, and Mrs. Hugh Cochrane of Rockcroft.

LOUISE E. McCLELLAND.

The death occurred in Toronto this morning of Louise E. McClelland, daughter of the late Joseph McClelland of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place to the Little Lake cemetery on the arrival of the noon C.P.R. train Tuesday, February 23. Rev. William ALlan will officiate.

MRS. R. H BOLIN.

There entered into rest, at her home, 339 Maplewood Park Boulevard, Rochester, N.Y., on Monday evening, February 15, Evelyn R. Bolin, aged 40 years. Besides her husband, Richard R. Bolin, she is survived by two sons, Richard Jr., and William Bolin; three brothers, Matthew and William Fleming of Stratford, Ont., and John Fleming of Los Angeles; three sisters: Miss Sarah Fleming of Stratford, Ont., Miss Margaret Fleming of Boston, and Mrs. J. A. Commons of Rochester. She was a life member of the Purgatorian Society of New York and of the Rosary Society of Sacred Heart Church. The funeral took place from the home Thursday morning, February 18, at 8.30 o'clock, and at 9 o'clock at Sacred Heart Church. Interment was made at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

Trend Uncertain To-day On Standard Mine Market

TORONTO, Feb. 22. — Canadian Press. — The trend was uncertain on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, though the trading was fairly heavy. The leaders in the turnover were generally strong. Barry Hollinger gained 1½ at 47½; Columbus Kirkland a half at 6, Capitol one at 46 and Everett 1 7-8 at 11 7-8. On the weaker side Teck Hughes eased five at 364; Tough Oakes and Vipond each three at 57 and 182 and Kirkland Lake two at 128. Dome eased 10 at 19.25 and Premier two at 245.

Price Turned Upwards In Heavy Trade Session

TORONTO, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press) — With accompaniment of heavy trading, prices turned upwards on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, with Canada Steamships issues in the lead. The preferred Steamships stock advanced to 67 3-8, later easing to 66 3-4, one and a quarter higher than last week, and the common gained a half at 13 1-4. British Columbia fishing was the active leader, and it advanced one at 65, while Braizlian, the second most active, at 97 3-4 was 3-4 higher. Smelters gained half a point at 245 and other slightly higher issues were nickel and Twin Ctty. Steel of Canada gained one at 105 3-4 and Canadian Canners Preferred, an active leader, 7-8 at 65 1-4.

GRAHAM MAKES STATEMENT ON HIS RETIREMENT

No Friction or Misunderstanding Involved, He Says.

WISH CARRIED OUT.

Could Have Been Senator If He Had Not Contested East Essex.

OTTAWA, Feb. 22. — Canadian Press. — Right Hon. George P. Graham, the retiring Minister of Railways and Canals, to-day issued a statement, which says in part:

"There is no friction, no misunderstanding, and the prime minister has merely carried out my wish expressed to him on several occasions, before the last general election, I asked to be relieved, but capitulated at the request of the Prime Minister, and what might be called the demand of the Liberal Executive of South Essex. I would have been a Senator had I not insisted on being a candidate in South Essex. This appointment, under the circumstances indicated above, I declined. There may be some reward in Heaven for this but I certainly did not get it in South Essex."

PORT OF CANTON IS NOW CLOSED FOR A PROTEST

Commissioner of Customs Follows Letter By Prompt Action.

CARGOES SEIZED.

Actions of Strikers in Violating Treaties Was the Cause.

HONG KONG, Feb. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Effective yesterday, the Commissioner of Customs at Canton has closed the ports of Canton and Whampoa. No steamers left here for Canton this morning except one, which is sailing to Shameen, the foreign colony there, with provisions, under the protection of the British Ensign.

As a result of the Commissioner's action, the cargoes of ships of five nations are delayed.

Advices from Hon Kong yesterday told of a strongly worded protest forwarded by the Commissioner of Customs of Canton to the Canton Government regarding alleged violation of treaties by the strike committee in seizing and selling cargoes. The Commissioner threatened in this protest to stop shipments from Canton as well as the landing of import cargoes.

WINTRY WEATHER HAMPERS RAILWAYS

Snow Storms, Rain and Frost Work Havoc in Nova Scotia.

HALIFAX, Feb. 22.—(Canadian Press.) — Nova Scotia railways, hampered for three weeks by recurring snow storms of record breaking proportions, were beset by a new enemy over the week end when zero weather followed closely upon a rain storm last Friday and covered the tracks with ice that at one point was said to be five feet thick. To-day many trains were cancelled or running hours behind time.

JAZZ ORCHESTRA REPLACES CHOIR, PLEASING YOUNG

Los Angeles Clergyman Hires "Jazziest" Band in the City.

PEOPLE DELIGHTED.

Spiritual Uplift in Jazz Tunes, Explains Pastor.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Feb. 22. (United Press).—"Before we resume our regular services, we will hear 'Roses of Picardy' by the church jazz orchestra." The church orchestra, with a few preliminary flourishes, swings into lively action with a blare of saxaphone, trumpets and kettle drums, and everyone in the fashionable Wiltshire Congregational Church is happy.

Dr. Frank Dyer, the pastor, feeling a need for modernism and pep in the church in order to please insurgent youth, shelved the regular choir Sunday for the jazziest jazz band in Los Angeles.

The drums boomed, the saxoes wailed, and the wind instruments shrilled in a wild frenzy of exultant melody. Dr. Dyer beamed, his flock shuffled excited feet, and flappers and dignified deacons grinned as the orchestra leader twisted and squirmed with the needs of his music.

When the last wild notes from the wailing saxaphones ceased, Dr. Dyer resumed the services, and for perhaps the first time in many years youngsters of the jazz age paid rapt attention.

Again the band played. The notes of modernism, fought, then conquered, the awesome quiet and age-old sanctity of the church.

"There is spiritual uplift in a jazz tune," the pastor explained to his congregation.

GERMANY NOW SERIOUS RIVAL

Must Pay Reparations in Cash Made From Trade, Says British Speaker.

GREAT COMPETITOR.

LONDON, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press)—That British trade will be endangered by increased competition from Germany next month was the belief expressed by Sir Allan Smith, chairman of the Engineering and Allied Employers National Federation in an address to trades union representatives. He warned them that under a portion of the Dawes plan Germany will cease to make reparations in kind and must pay cash. This would mean that to get cash Germany would have to increase her experts greatly and a very serious competitor would come into market. "We have to face a state of affairs," he said. "Which has not hitherto existed, a state of affairs which means, I am afraid, a set back of serious importance to this country."

DUNNING WILL HAVE OPPONENT

F. W. Turnbull, Darke's Rival in General Election, is Mentioned.

MAY BE THREE.

OTTAWA, Feb. 22. Canadian Press. The Conservatives have definitely decided, it was stated here to-day, to place a candidate in the field in the by-election in Regina, in opposition ot Premier Charles Dunning of Saskatchewan, who is entering the King Government as Minister of Railways and Canals.

F. W. Turnbull, barrister of Regina, who contested the constituency in the recent general election against F. N. Darke, the Liberal, who resigned on Saturday, is mentioned here as a likely Conservative candidate.

It is understood a Conservative convention will be called in Regina within the next few days.

PROGRESSIVES, T

OTTAWA, Feb. 22. Canadian Press. — Whether or not there will be a progressive candidate in Regina in the forthcoming Federal by-election, will be decided by the Progressives of that city.

The Progressive leaders in Ottawa to-day could not furnsh any information on the subject.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

FIRE CHIEF GEO. GIMBLETT

George Gimblett is fully convinced of the worth of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. "There is no doubt," he said today, "as to its value to the community. In fact I believe it is the greatest asset which the city has. Not only are the people from the country able to spend a pleasant holiday here but many Peterborough people are given a chance to see things of which they would otherwise remain in ignorance.

"Denne and the other directors who have done so much to push the big fair have not received all the credit due them for they have given much of their time to the work."

EXCURSION IF THE FANS WANT ONE

Hockey Club May Run Special Train To Toronto.

If there are enough Peterboro fans who want to see the Parkdale-Peterboro clash in Toronto on Thursday night the Peterboro Hockey Club is prepared to run an excursion via C.P.R. leaving at 5.45 p.m. and 120 people are necessary to pay the guarantee and if this number signify their intention of going before 6 o'clock Wednesday the train will be chartered. Names may be left at Bert McLeod's drug store.

ONTARIO APPLAUDS FEDERAL AID TOWARD HAULING ALBERTA COAL PROVINCES TO SHARE EXPENSE

Dominion Government To Pay One-third of Excess of $7 Rate.

ONTARIO ACCEPTS.

Temporary Arrangement Until Railway Commission Makes Report.

TORONTO, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Applause from all parties in the Legislature Monday greeted the reading of a telegram from Premier King at Ottawa, that the Federal Government was prepared to pay a third of the excess carrying rate of $7 a ton from Alberta to Ontario, if the Ontario and Alberta Governments also paid a third each. The premier said that Ontario was ready to pay its third and that he was sure Alberta was also. Therefore, he said, Ontario could be assured of a continuous stream of Alberta coal.

Ottawa Telegram.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—A telegram was read in the House of Commons Monday which had been sent by Premier King to the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, stating that in the event of the Canadian National Railways discontinuing the $7 rate on Alberta coal, the Federal Government would be pleased to contribute one-third of the additional costs until the Board of Railway Commissioners made its report on the costs of coal movement, and provided that Ontario and Alberta would contribute similar amounts. The telegram was read by Hon. Chas. Stewart, Minister of Interior.

The question was raised by E. J. Garland, Progressive Bow River, who had read a telegram which he had addressed to Premier Brownlee of Alberta. The wire stated that the coal rate enquiry would not likely reach its finding in time for action by this session of Parliament. Mr. Garland recommended that Alberta, Ontario and the Dominion guarantee any difference between the $7 rate and the rate established as a result of any railway commission finding. He estimated the total movement, prior to the commission's finding, at 200,000 tons.

Nova Scotia Order.

Hon. Chas. Stewart, Minister of the Interior, answering Mr. Cantley, in the House Monday, said the Canadian National had promised to increase its order for coal to be banked, from 120,000 to 135,000 tons, to be taken from the Princes Mine, Cape Breton.

Alberta's Attitude

EDMONTON, Alta., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Whether or not the Alberta Government will act on the suggestion of the Ontario Government in regard to coal shipments and undertake responsibility for one-third of the excess cost of freight over $7 per ton is uncertain. Premier J. E. Brownlee, when asked about it, said that the matter has been before the Cabinet for two or three days past, but that he was not in a position to make any definite announcement as to the action that will be taken.

"We are very reluctant to enter into an agreement," he admitted "that seems to involve us in a blanket guarantee. At any rate, we haven't sufficient information at the present time, and I have just wired East for some further particulars as to amount of coal likely to be taken and other details that will affect our decisions.

"Premier Ferguson, of course, is in a different position. The Ontario people are in need of the coal, and the Government there is naturally prepared to go further in the matter of a subsidy or a guarantee of cost than we would be. While we are very desirous of marketing our coal and hope to establish relations with Ontario in that way, it is not so easy for us to say what we can do in regard to guaranteeing the freight."

NOW, HONESTLY—

Think of how often you have told a lady friend:

"Oh, I think you look wonderful in that hat."

Or how often you have complimented a gentleman on his new suit.

When, as a matter of fact, the hat looked terrible, and the suit looked worse.

It's a way with all of us—to compliment even if we have to fib about it.

Let's be honest, after this. Tell people what you really think.

The result? Oh, you just won't have any friends.

PACIFIC OCEAN GROWS SMALLER BY INVENTIONS

Peoples Once Remote Are Now Brought Closer Together.

MONTREAL ADDRESS.

World Represented By Nations on Shores of the Pacific.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 23—The Pacific Ocean is getting smaller in that modern inventions have brought the peoples bordering on it nearer, and the result has been the development of many complex problems the solution of which will have to be arrived at not by war but by sympathetic thought. The Institute of Pacific Relations exists for that purpose, said Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, President of Leland Stanford University, California, yesterday, addressing the Canadian Club.

Much of Canada's history had been concerned with the Atlantic Ocean, he declared, but a great deal of this country's future would concern the Pacific. The vast population across the Pacific looked at Canada's open spaces and asked why so few people here should possess so much land, while the millions in Asia were land-hungry. The question was not easy to answer, Dr. Wilbur submitted.

Dealing with the problem of miscegenation, Dr. Wilbur said that the Institute had been making a study of this from Vancouver southward. The children of inter-racial unions were socially misplaced.

The nations of the American continent, Anglo-Saxon and Latin, the Anglo-Saxons of the Australasian continent, the Chinese, Siamese, Koreans, Japanese and the varied races of Siberia all looked out on the Pacific ocean. It was the world, for the whole world was represented. Canada had a part in the problems of the Pacific, and they could not be solved by diplomatic contacts, by business men and tourists or occasional unpleasant incidents. Were the misunderstandings, misinformation, contests and struggles that had taken place on the Atlantic to be repeated on the Pacific, he asked?

The Institute of Pacific Relations was seized with the importance of arriving at a solution of these problems; it had been termed an "adventure in friendship," and such it had proved to be.

The Institute had met at Honolulu last July and had brought together well-known and influential representatives from all the Pacific littoral. There the questions affecting each race had been threshed out and a better understanding arrived at.

Byng Cannot Consider Another Term In Canada

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Premier Mackenzie King announced some time ago that Baron Byng of Vimy would not remain as GovernorGeneral of Canada beyond the term for which he was appointed. He had been informed by His Excellency, said Premier King, that "nothing short of quite exceptional public need" would permit him to consider remaining in Canada. The term expires next August.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR ACCOUNTANT OF SANITARIUM

J. E. Harte, Missing Since Last Wednesday—Books Show Defalcations.

NO CREDITS GIVEN.

Payments Made By Civil Patients at Kingston Not Entered.

KINGSTON, Feb. 23 (Special).—A sensation was created here today when it was announced that a warrant had been issued for the arrest of J. E. Harte, accountant at the Mowat Sanitarium, who disappeared on Wednesday of last week. It is alleged that an investigation into his books and records disclosed defalcations totalling a large sum, the exact amount of which has not yet been made known. The shortages are made up principally from cash payments made by civil patients to Harte for which no proper credit has been given in the books. It is alleged that these shortages cover a period of two months, and it is also charged that there are shortages in the canteen fund of which Harte is treasurer. He was last seen at the Sanitarium last Wednesday, and members of his family say they know nothing of his whereabouts. The accused is of middle age, and for many years was connected with the R. C. A. and the headquarters staff office here.

MAIL ORDER BUSINESS SHOULD CONTRIBUTE TO LOCAL TAXES

Menace To Merchants In Towns and Cities of Country.

OTTAWA DEBATE.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Resuming his speech in the debate on the address Monday, Stewart McClenaghan (Conservative, Ottawa) made an appeal in the House of Commons for a greater measure of consideration for the manufacturer in Canada.

He urged that more Canadian goods should be used by Canadians, especially clothing. He ventured to say that not ten per cent. of the members of the House of Commons were wearing all-Canadian made clothing. He believed that cloth made in Canada was more suitable to the climate of the Dominion than imported cloth. The Canadian woollen industry, he said, was handicapped by the lack of adequate protection. Between the British preference and the French treaty, Canadian woollen manufacturers were under an unfair handicap.

More than half the gowns worn by the ladies at the opening of Parliament and at the drawing-room were, he understood, of French production. Mr. McClenaghan ventured the opinion that if the ladies wearing Canadian-made gowns were placed opposite those who wore French gowns, the former would show their beauty to at least equal advantage.

Canada was the only country which had not taken proper steps against the demoralizing effect of depreciating currency in foreign countries. This inactivity had also proven harmful to Canadian industries.

Hits Mail Order Houses.

Retail merchants throughout Canada were overtaxed, while the mail order business which was making great inroads into the retail trade, paid no taxes whatever to the communities in which they sold their goods. Western members complained that banks were becoming centralized, but with the growth of the mail order business, the retail trade was also becoming centralized, and was menacing the small merchants everywhere.

Mr. McClenaghan advocated that mail order houses should be compelled to contribute something in taxes to the communities in which they carried on their business. He observed that with all the departments of government designed to assist various branches of trade and commerce, there was not a single department which could give information to the retail merchants respecting his own business.

Citizens Clamor For Coal When City Takes Orders

TORONTO, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Four hundred citizens clamoring for Alberta coal, crowded the wickets at the City Hall to-day when the authorities commenced to take orders for coal coming to the city from Alberta.

Bottom Of Bay Of Biscay Declines To Stay Put Depth Of Water Varies Almost Daily, Say Sailors

BORDEAUX, France, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press)—Whether the bottom of the Bay of Biscay is suffering from a state of instability is a problem that has been given to scientists to determine. It would appear from reports of navigators during the past few years that the crust of the earth under the bay oscillates with such frequency that it is impossible to keep records of water depths straight. The captain of the French liner La Bordenais on his last trip from New York, says he found 35 yards of water where Doctor Charcot, the explorer, recently found 4,000 yards and where Lieut. Cornet of the French navy a few months ago found 135 yards. The accuracy of soundings taken by these three persons is admitted.

ONTARIO TO HAVE 35 MILE LIMIT

Law Will Not Be Changed This Year, Says Minister.

MINIMUM SPEED.

TORONTO, Feb. 23. Canadian Press. — The raising of the motor speed limit to 35 miles an hour in the rural sections of the province, will not be effected during the present session of the Legislature, although the time for its accomplishment is not far off.

This was the intimation of the Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Public Works and Highways, in an interview to-day, commenting on that request by the Ontario Motor League.

The Minister also decl. I that before long Ontario would have a minimum speed law for its more congested highways.

MUCH BEING SPENT ON COUNTIES ROADS

Northumberland and Durham to Expend About $125,000.

COBOURG, Feb. 23.—The County budget for roads in Ontario county in 1926 calls for an expenditure of $125,087. This sum will be required for road construction, bridges, maintenance, special grants for paving in Cannington and Beaverton, Oshawa suburban roads, and other necessary purposes arising out of road construction. Of this amount the county will get back from the Provincial Highways Department some $48,545, making the counties' share $76,542. The city of Oshawa will also pay a part of the amount required for suburban roads. To take care of this expenditure it is proposed to make a levy of 2 mills, as was done in 1925. The rate will not be struck until the June session of the council and it may be necessary to levy another half mill to wipe out an overdraft of $18,520 that has been accumulating for a number of years.

TYROLESE WILL ASK FOR RELIEF

Will Appeal to the League Themselves if Austria Won't.

PROTEST MEETING.

VIENNA, Austria, Feb. 23. — (Canadian Press.) — Dr. Stumpf, Governor of the Tyrol, has arrived in Vienna with the purpose of informing Chancellor Ramek that if the Austrian government is unwilling to appeal to the League of Nations on behalf of the allegedly ill-treated countrymen, the Tyrolese Diet will, and that the Austrian government will lose the support of 25,000 Tyrolese and Pan-German voters.

A big protest meeting against the Federal Government and Italy has been called for to-day at Innsbruck.

AUDIT REVEALS $10,000 DEFICIT

Books of London, Ont., Township Are Being Examined.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—An examination of the books of London Township discloses the information that the municipality is faced with a deficit of $10,000—and possibly more. Until such time as the auditors have finished their examination, the full extent of the deficit will not be known.

For several weeks past the books have been subject to a thorough inspection, and it has been so far uncovered that the deficit will be this amount or higher. The auditors state they will have a complete report ready for the Council by Thursday of this week.

Just how far back the deficit extends is a matter yet to be ascertained, although the auditors are of the opinion it dates back several years. At present they have not been able to fix any definite time as to when the deficit commenced.

The auditors at the present time are not prepared to say whether a wrong system of bookkeeping or failure to make proper tax estimates resulted in the deficit. In their opinion, it is highly likely that either of these two may have caused the deficit.

Reeve Austin Winter, when questioned regarding the audit, stated he was fully aware the books were being examined and was waiting a report.

"I have been informed we will hear from them on Thursday," he said.

BULL KILLS WOMAN.

Farmer's Wife Attacked While Watering Cattle at Home.

PORT ARTHUR, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—While watering cattle on her farm at Waldhof, Ontario, Frieda Wieske, wife of Alfred Wieske, was killed by a bull. The infuriated animal tore the woman badly about the shoulders and breast and tossed her into the air. Her neck was broken from the fall. Besides her husband, she leaves three young children.

FORTY SHIPS IN CANTON HARBOR AWAIT RELEASE

Ruling or Port Commissioner Has Tied Up Cargoes and Passengers.

MORE TROUBLES.

Opposition To Christianity in Schools Grows—Poor People Suffer.

HONG KONG, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Forty ships to-day were tied up at Canton, unable to discharge cargoes because of the ruling by the port commissioner which closed the port to cargoes and passengers.

The closing of the port was in protest against the action of the strike committee in seizing and selling cargoes. Merchandize seized by the strikers included United States and German goods.

Christian Schools Opposed.

PEKING, Feb. 23 (United Press). — The Anti-Christian Union" has decreed that Christian missionary schools shall be driven out of China. The union has issued a proclamation calling upon "all true Nationalists" to destroy the missionary schools or, at least, to force them to drop Christianity as part of their curricula.

These schools are "tools for foreign aggression," says the proclamation, which adds that the schools seek to aid foreign Imperialists by preventing the Chinese from developing a spirit of resistance.

Children Draw Rickshaws.

PEKING, Feb. 23 (United Press). —So heavily have the continued civil wars and political upheavals pressed on the poor of Peking that a few girls have started pulling rickshaws for hire.

Prisoners Fare Well.

Foreign nations' inquiry into Chinese justice administration has brought about an era like the "Life of Riley" in the prisons. To make a good showing the prisons have ordered that the prisoners shall have a regular bath, hair cuts, and pants pressing, to say nothing of two square meals a day.

The new meal order represents about one and a half meals more than hitherto served.

Desperate criminals are allowed a single shackle instead of the inhuman chains hitherto used.

DEATH OF COWS ROUSES SUSPICION

Apparently Healthy Animals Die Suddenly—Poison Suspected.

A strange case is occupying the attention of the local inspector for the Humane Society. Two apparently healthy cows died suddenly, and foul play is suspected. One of the animals, it is believed, died from eating ground glass and the other from consuming Paris green. The stomachs of the animals have been sent to Toronto for examination, it is said.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND CUT OFF FROM MAINLAND TWO DAYS BY ARCTIC GALES

Conditions Worst Since 1905—Car Ferry Jammed by the Heavy Ice—Boat Docked on Monday After noon.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—The north-westerly gale which began on Saturday and has been blowing steadily ever since at the rate of from twenti-eight to thirty miles an hour, together with a temperature which was several degrees below zero in the city, and ten below in the country, seriously affected not only the internal communication, but communication between between here and the mainland, conditions being worse than they have been at any time since the winter of 1905.

The car ferry has had the worst experience recorded in years, owing to the straits being jammed wilth heavy ice from the twodays' north-wester. After being in the ice all day Saturday, she returned to Tormentine. She left there at 6.25 Sunday night and was in heavy ice all night, reaching within only 200 yards of Borden Monday morning.

As it was found impossible to reach the pier the 52 passengers on board were landed after some difficulty over the rafted ice, but it was found impossible to land the two days' mail, with the exception of letters and registered matter. Captain Read managed to dock about three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

HOTEL, STORE, THREE HOUSES AND GARAGE BURNED IN SERIOUS FIRE WHICH THREATENS QUEBEC TOWN

Total Loss in Summer Resort at Chelsea is $20,000.

FORTY HOMELESS.

Fire Starts in Hotel and Spreads Quickly in Frame Buildings.

CHELSEA, Que., Feb. 23, Canadian Press. — A hotel, a general store, three dwelling houses and a garage were destroyed by a fire which started in the hotel here early this morning. The buildings were all of frame construction and the loss is estimated at $20,000.

The residences burned were occupied by Mrs. Sprague, Mrs. B. Anderson and Mrs. T. H. McAdam.

the store was occupied by Mrs. Cecil McAdam, and the garage belonging to Mrs. McAdam was torn down as the flames reached it.

About 40 people are homeless as a result of the fire.

NOTICE IS GIVEN BY COL. CURRIE OF LIQUOR BILLS

Provide That Government Control Shall Apply Only in Wet Ridings.

PERMITS NEEDED.

To Get Liquor Under Control Bill—Native Beer and Wines.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— The legislature will deal with the liquor question directly in two bills, notice of which is contained in to-day's parliamentary orders. J. A. Currie, Conservative, Toronto, is the mover. The first bill provides that if a government control bill is adopted by the House that it shall apply to those ridings which voted wet in the last plebiscite, and not to those which voted dry. The control bill provides that all persons purchasing hard liquor shall provide themselves with a permit. It also provides that beer and wine shall be sold in hotels which had licenses previous to 1919. The Act also stipulates that all beer and wine sold shall be made in Ontario. It is therefore a measure for the sale of beer and native wines.

"Children should be allowed to take risks," says an English doctor. "The baby who tumbles about freely rarely hurts himself as he falls naturally with relaxed muscles." Cross-word puzzles have helped to improve the health of a patient in a Sussex infirmary. He had been bedridden for six years, and had become very depressed; but the solving of cross-words has proved successful in cheering him up.

BESCO LEADERS AND MINERS TO MEET TOMORROW

Resume Negotiations on Wage Scale in Nova Scotia Mines.

MEN ARE WORKING

Voted Against Contract Because Check-off Provision Omitted.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 23.—(Canaian Press)—Officials of the British Empire Steel Corporation and executive officers of the United Mine Workers of America, will resume wage negotiations on Wednesday next, according to a statement made at last night's session of the Legislative Assembly, answering a question of Malcolm McKay, Conservative, Inverness.

The new wage scale embodied in the contract negotiated at recent conferences between officials of the corporation and of the union was posted in all colleries Monday, despite the fact that the miners, through their local unions, had rejected the agreement with an average vote of five to one, but in the majority of cases the men continued at work pending whatever action might be taken by their representatives. The men objected to the omission from the contract of provision whereby the union dues will be collected by check-off, and could only express their disapproval of abolition of that system by voting against the contract.

At the close of last night's brief session of the Legislative Assembly, Mr. McKay asked the Minister of Mines if he could give the House any information regarding the situation in the coal fields, Hon. Mr. Harrington said the Deputy-Minister of Works and Mines had gone to Cape Breton to make an official report and had advised him yesterday by telegraph that the operators and men's representatives would resume negotiations Wednesday next.

LIVES THREATENED BY GAS MAIN LEAK

Three Children Overcome in Toronto House in Early Morning.

TORONTO, Feb. 23. — Canadian Press. — Three children were overcome and the lives of 15 other persons were threatened when a leak occurred in a gas main on Gore street early to day.

Three families might have been asphyxiated had not Mrs. Lewis Elson awakened and noticed the strange condition of her son Douglas which led her to make inquiry and give an alarm.

DEFENCE SUCCEEDS.

Ownership of Lot in City Was Decided By Weekly Court.

Joseph Wearing, City Solicitor, successfully defended the case in Toronto before the Weekly Court yesterday of Mrs. Rachael Robinson, widow of the late Dr. F. L. Robinson. Mr. Justice Rose acted as Judge.

The action devolved on a lot on Gilmour street which was registered in the name of the deceased but stated to have been given to Mrs. Robinson during her husband's lifetime. H. S. Whale, K. C., appeared for the Trust and Guarantee Company, Limited, Executors, and L. Ramsay for the official guardian, on behalf of the infant residuary beneficiaries.

EVERY DISTILLERY BEFORE COMMITTEE

James Cooper Willing To Go To Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—That every distillery in Canada would be called before the Parliamentary Customs Investigations committee, is the prediction of R. L. Brackin, of Windsor, counsel for the Dominion Distillery of Montreal in an interview here Monday. As far as the Dominion distilleries are concerned, he said, they did exactly what every distillery in Canada has done.

Mr. Brackin announced that James Cooper, millionaire liquor exporter, of Walkerville, Ont., whose name was brought into the customs inquiry on Friday is ready and willing to go before the committee. He was of the opinion that Mr. Cooper cold throw no light on smuggling into Canada. Mr. Brackin added that "Mr. Cooper is not the Mr. Scherer mentioned."

RECORD OFFICE AT RED LAKE TO BE OPENED FOR PROSPECTORS

Hon. Chas. McCrea's Suggestion Approved By the Legislature.

SAVE LONG HIKES.

TORONTO, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—The Legislature yesterday unanimously approved of the suggestion by Hon. Chas. McCrea, Minister of Mines, that legislation should be rushed through to assist the prospectors in the new Red Lake mining district to which there has been a gold rush during the past few weeks. The legislation proposed is to establish a mining claim recording office right at Red Lake for the convenience of prospectors. As it is now, claims must be filed at Kenora, which is several hundred miles away, and necessitates long dog team journeys and then longer railway trips.

Mr. McCrea was cautious when asked as to the value of the new fields. He stated that the Government geologist had found the geology and the formation favorable for valuable minerals, and that prospectors had discovered gold. Further big interests were spending large sums of money, but the Government had no way of telling if there would be any great wealth unearthed ultimately, although it hoped so.

Protect Timber Reserve.

There was some criticism of the Government selling by tenders huge tracts of timber areas. Sam. Clarke (Liberal, Northumberland) stated he wondered how long northern forests were to last if the timber were sold off in areas of 9,000 square miles at a time, as the Government admitted in reply to a question. Premier Ferguson declared that Crown timber wealth was being better protected now than at any time in the history of the province.

Clerk of Assembly Dead.

The House heard with reverence tributes to Arthur H. Sydere, veteran clerk of the Assembly, who died on Monday morning, from all the party leaders and the Speaker. They all spoke of the splendid public service given the province by a man who had been in the employment of the Government since Confederation. The House will adjourn Wednesday when the funeral is to take place. Sympathy was also expressed with W. G. Willson, the member for Niagara Falls, who recently lost his father.

"The plan is," said Premier Ferguson, "that a firm be allowed enough pulpwood to put the operations of its mills on a permanent basis for 40 years. Formerly the cutting rights were given over certain territories in perpetuity. They were lost for ever to the province. This policy has been changed. Now we agree to allow the company so many cords of pulpwood, etc., but we reserve the right to refuse to allow them to cut an area which for any reason should not be cut.

"We also insist that they carry out a proper brush burning programme."

Mr. Clark: "Do they ever burn the brush?"

Premier Ferguson: "Of course we are just making the contracts, so we can't say. But in other recent contracts providing for the burning of the brush, they have done so. I think the Act provides that if they do not do so, the province can burn the brush and charge it to these companies."

Col. Currie: "Isn't the idea to plan so that at the end of 40 years each area set aside will have again grown timber upon it?"

Premier Ferguson: "Yes, that is the plan."

Recalls Big Contract.

Mr. Clarke: "But can you recollect a case before the Whitney Government where anything like 9,000 square miles was involved.

Premier Ferguson: Yes. In 1895 the Lake Superior Company were given the cutting rights to 7,500 square miles, and this without tender either.

The Premier referred to another case where an almost similar acreage had been disposed of by private agreement.

Replying to M. A. McAllum (Progressive), Mr. Lyons, Lands and Forest Minister, admitted that he did a series of speeches in Northern Ontario in August, September and October last on behalf of the Conservative candidates. Did he make promises and announcements intended to influence electors to vote Conservative? He discussed various questions, replied the Minister.

Replying to R. H. Kemp (Progressive), the Minister denied he had at Port Arthur, at a meeting held in the interest of Mr. Langworthy, Conservative candidate, on October 23 last, announced the result of the opening of tenders for 9,000 square miles of pulpwood lands. He had merely indicated, he said, that certain areas would be developed. Why was not the announcement made in the usual way from the Minister's office in Toronto? Mr. Lyons replied he knew of no such custom having been established.

CANADIAN CATTLE UNFAIRLY TREATED

Should Not Be Classed As Foreign, Says British Butcher.

MANCHESTER, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.) — "Nationally this country is not treating Canada fairly," declared President Saville, of the Manchester Butchers' Association at the Association's annual meeting here last night. "Why should Canada's cattle be treated as foreign, when Irish cattle are treated as English?" President Saville asked. "Even if Canada's cattle are not given full freedom here," the president of the Butchers' Association continued, "it might reasonably be stipulated that Canadian cattle should be brought to the abbatoir under license to be killed."

HIGH DIVING CROWN.

Mrs. Betty Becker, Prinkston, Won at Tampa.

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—A mermaid from the west outclassed her western sisters here yesterday to win the national women's amateur fancy high diving crown while east and west divided honors in a series of exhibition swims where one world's record was broken and another equalled.

With 100.62 points, Mrs. Betty Becker Prinkston, Los Angeles, easily left Evelyn Fehr, Detroit, in second place for the national diving title. Kathryn Brown, of New York, was third.

Martha Norelius, New York, who set three new world records at the St. Augustine meeting, flashed a new one to-day in the 500 yard free style swim. Clocked in 6:45 2-5 she clipped one-fifth second off the old record.

WORK BINGO MINES.

Joseph Myers Announces Manitoba Activity.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.) — Immediate work will be started in the fields under the control of the Bingo Gold Mines Company, it was announced yesterday by Joseph Myers, President, who has just returned from England.

A syndicate of 20 members with capital of $500,000 had been formed in the British Isles, he stated, with the object of engaging in active mining work in Canada. This syndicate, Mr. Myers intimated, will not confine itself to exploration and acquisition of promising prospects, but will carry on preliminary development to determine if property now held by the Bingo interest is worth working.

SPANISH POLICY AT TURNING POINT

Ambassador Called To Madrid For Conference.

MADRID, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Spain is engaged in what may become the turning point of her foreign policy. The Spanish ambassadors at Washington, London, Paris and Rome have been called to Madrid for a series of conferences on pending international relations between Spain and foreign nations.

It is probable that the subject of a permanent seat in the Council of the League of Nations for Spain will be given thorough consideration.

JAILS ARE REALLY SCHOOLS FOR CRIME

Prosecutor Would Lash All the Young Bandits.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Admitting that jails are "really schools for crime," R. B. Graham, K.C., crown prosecutor for Winnipeg, urged the imposition of the lash as a more efficacious means or curbing a wave of banditry, which has swept the city this winter.

"We cannot escape the conclusion that the present outbreak of violent crime is due to too tolerant an attitude to youthful offenders. Just so long as we elect to provide comfortable residences for criminals, so long will violent crime continue," Mr. Graham said.

The statement was made in connection with the crown's insistence on corporal punishment for two youths convicted on charges of highway robbery. The boys were remanded for sentence.

LIQUOR SEIZED.

Railway Car Containing 1,100 Cases of Whiskey Held at Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—A large railway car said to contain 1,100 cases of whiskey, was seized here by License Inspector F. G. Naphin and the provincial police. The car was consigned from Montreal to Windsor. The officials are awaiting instructions from Toronto in reference to the seizure.

SINGER THREATENED.

General Wu Has Not Been Assassianted—Drive Against Him.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 23. — (United Press.) — An anonymous "blackhand" threat against the life of Beniamino Gigli, the Italian tenor, received on his arrival here last night, caused a hurried cancellation of a singing engagement tonight and the flight of the star from the city.

IS RE-APPOINTED.

Hon. H. W. Newlands Gets New Term as Lieutenant-Governor.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.) — Hon. H. W. Newlands, K.C., has been re-appointed Lieut.-Governor of Saskatchewan, it was learned here. Mr. Newlands has been Lieutenant-Governor of the Province since February, 1921.

MISUSING THE SERVICE BUTTON.

The protest by the Sault Ste. Marie Great War Veterans' Association against methods employed by Government "spotters" to secure convictions under the Ontario Temperance Act through the use of active service buttons, is one that will find a good deal of support.

Apparently the "spotters" wearing service buttons as a means of ingratiating themselves with men who served in the Great War have been endeavouring to trap ex-service men in breaches of the Act.

There is in that misuse of the most honourable badge that any Canadian can wear a taint that leaves a bad taste in the mouth.

If there must be "spotters," and it seems that the O.T.A. cannot be enforced without such gentry—and even with them, many people declare—then by all means let them do their work without using the service button as camouflage for their operations.

The little bronze button stands for something much too noble to be employed as a lure by O.T.A. "spotters," and an investigation into the Sault Ste. Marie cases should be undertaken without delay with a view to preventing a prostitution of the service emblem in other parts of Ontario.

THE JACKSON PARK SLIDE.

While commending the City Council for its sincere effort to reduce expenditures and to curb the tax rate, the Examiner cannot but express regret that it was found necessary to sacrifice the Jackson Park toboggan slide in the process.

Our civic expenditure on recreation facilities cannot by any stretch of the imagination be termed extravagant or even generous, and it has always been the belief of the Examiner that the city which planned its public recreation wisely and with vision was not throwing away money, but, on the other hand, making a prudent investment in health insurance and in protection against delinquency.

It is better to build up in our young people a physical resistance against illness through participation in healthy recreation than it is to have to provide increased hospital accommodation.

It is better likewise to build up a moral resistance against wrong-doing by keeping youngsters busily engaged in skating and hockey and baseball and swimming and tobogganing than it is to have to establish juvenile courts and pay large sums for the maintenance of institutions of correction.

On top of these considerations, there is in the case of the toboggan slide proposal the further fact that all Canadian cities should follow the example of some of the Quebec centres and get more out of the Canadian winter in the form of harmless, exciting and health-building recreation than most cities have so far been getting.

THAT BUS SERVICE.

Should the City Council do anything to encourage the establishment of a motor bus line between Peterboro and Toronto?

Offhand and without giving much thought to the question, the average citizen will be inclined to answer in the affirmative.

Deeper consideration, however, alters the situation.

The local business man, for instance, does not require any prompting to observe that the better and cheaper the transportation facilities between Peterboro and the Provincial capital the worse it will be for business here.

Every improvement in transportation works to the interest of the large city and the detriment of the smaller centre, and consequently the establishment of a motor bus service between Toronto and Peterboro will contribute to the building up of the former at our expense.

Is such a service, therefore, a good thing for Peterboro?

Is easy communication with Toronto paid for at too high a price if it entails loss of business to Peterboro's stores?

These are questionst hat are being asked and that are commended to the attention of the city fathers for consideration, in view of the fact that they may be consulted in regard to the development of a Toronto-Peterboro motor bus service.

A NECESSARY SAFEGUARD.

Premier Ferguson's action in endeavouring to have shipments of Alberta coal into Ontario continued as a protection against a fuel famine in the event of the prolongation of cold weather will be endorsed by the people of Ontario.

The Dominion Railway Board has fixed the latter part of April as the time for its hearing of the application of the Ontario and Alberta Governments for an investigation of the coal rates from Alberta and Nova Scotia, and it is obvious that with the hearing delayed that long the Ontario situation will not be helped by the ultimate decision no matter how favourable it may be.

Ontario's Premier is, therefore, pressing for a continuance of the present arrangement by which 75,000 tons of Alberta coal has been brought into this Province, offering on the part of Ontario to pay one-third of the costs in excess of $7.00, provided the Alberta and Federal Governments will each pay a third.

This is a businesslike offer, and in view of the present fuel situation and the possibility that March may be marked by several weeks of severe weather, its acceptance would be regarded as a very necessary safguard in the interests of the whole Province.

The Provincial Government has already done much to mitigate the serious effects of a fuel shortage by its success in securing large shipments of Alberta coal, and its further efforts along this line will be appreciated.

The Federal Government has been equally prompt in the matter, inasmuch as it was announced yesterday that the Dominion Government had decided to accept Mr. Ferguson's offer and to pay one-third of the excess cost of transportation of Alberta coal should it exceed the $7.00 per ton rate.

WELL TAKEN.

The criticism directed against the Ferguson Government that seven seats should not be left vacant during an important session is certainly well taken. The seven ridings in question are representative of 160,000 voters, and the direct population affected is a great deal larger. Years ago when the Ross Government in Ontario was fighting for its existence, one of the Renfrew ridings was left open for many months and it was done purely to forestall the defeat of the Government, which hardly dared, at that time, to make an appeal to the people. The Ferguson Government, however, is in not such straits, and can certainly not plead political expediency to justify the present course.

It is interesting to note that Alberta has a law to the effect that no session of the Legislature may be held without all seats represented. This law, however, has been recently nullified by a vote in the House, with only one dissenting voice, which virtually instructed the Government to carry on. There are now four ridings without members. This vote would hardly have been recorded unless the program of the session was straight business and no big political issues were at stake. It is not like that in Ontario, however, where it is apparent that legislation on sumptuary affairs is to be introduced.

By leaving seven seats unrepresented Premier Ferguson has left himself wide open to one of the charges made against the late Premier Ross which certainly helped to dismantle the Liberal administration of that time. Anybody knows at this stage that there is some impending legislation or some impending policy of the Governmvent in regard to the O.T.A., which will be facilitated very greatly by leaving a number of seats, five to be exact, which are regarded as "dry" constituencies, without representatives at Toronto.—St. Catharines Standard.

THE GENEALOGY OF ROTARY PRECEPT.

The anniversary of Rotary is a fitting occasion to remark that Rotary has developed the fact that the Golden Rule is one of the most international and inter-religious axioms history records.

Rotary is a service.

Many Rotary speakers state that the business of the organization is to put the Golden Rule to work at least that is perfectly proper for Rotary leaders in Christian countries.

But in China and Japan and Indian the term Golden Rule will mean little to the people who follow the religious rites of the Buddhist or the Shintoist or the Taoist or any of the various and sundry religious philosophies of those people.

Yet the Rotary precept that he profits most who serves best can be traced back to the foundation axiom of those philosophies as easily and as surely as it can to the pronouncements of the founder of Christianity.

One of the assistants of International Secretary Chesley R. Perry has made a study of this phase of Rotary and has found eight distinct statements is as many religious philosophies that embody the spirit of the Golden Rule.

Theologists argue that many of these statements are negative while the Christian statement is positive. But that is pure theology. The spirit and meaning of the statements for all general purposes is the same.

The Golden Rule is stated in several different parts of the Bible and in different translations of it. The most generally used form is:

"Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so unto them."

Following are the eight principle statements of the same thing in other religious philosophies throughout the world:

Do as you would be done by.—Persian.

Do not that to a neighbor which you shall take ill from him.—Grecian.

What you would not wish done to yourself do not do unto others.—Confucianist.

One should seek for others the happiness which one desires for oneself.—Buddhist.

He sought for others the good he desired for himself. Let him pass on.—Egyptian.

Let none of you treat his brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated.—Mohammedan.

The true rule of life is to guard and do by the things of others as they would do by their own.—Hindu.

The law imprinted on the hearts of all man is to love the members of society as themselves.—Roman.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is not too late to become a member of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition. Do it now when you are thinking about it.

The organizations which have been given grants by the City Council have proved their claim to assistance by consistently good community service.

The anniversary of the Rotary is being celebrated in 32 countries throughout the world, a fact that is eloquent of the rapid growth of the movement in the past 20 years.

The seven ridings without representation in the Legislature have to be satisfied with reading about the proceedings in the newspapers. Surely they are entitled to a voice in Queen's Park.

Toronto, with a budget of $27,057,467 needed to meet her requirements this year, is getting to be a sizable city, although not yet as big perhaps as some of her citizens seem to think.

It looks as if the Province will just have to wait until Premier Ferguson chooses to announce his liquor policy. All attempts at securing a declaration from him have been a complete failure.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

GOOD WORKS.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:

The Bible says that we should not let our right hand know what our left hand is doing when doing good works. Is that no longer good advice? A number of us young people read about people boasting what good, kind people they are and we wondered if the modesty of our Lord was out of date. Should our class have a boaster too? I think so.

MARKET GAS PUMP.

The Editor of The Examiner:

Dear sir:

Would the Property Committee of the City Council kindly inform us of the resaon for recent passing of an order for removal of gasoline pump and tank from market square. So far there doesn't seem to have been any discussion of same made public. As an interested tax payer would like to know on just what ground objection is taken to present location of said gas service, as personally have never heard any objection taken to present location. This little questionere is in no way prompted by present leasee. If there is any legitimate reason for this order would very much like to know just what it is.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,

TAXPAYER.

APSLEY SCHOOL.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir:—Robert Scott, reeve of Chandos, on the matter of the Consolidated school, is nothing if not persistent, and is recognized as the arch-opponent of consolidation. On Monday evening he engineered a third unsuccessful attempt to obstruct progress, a meeting of ratepayers being held in the town hall as a result of a petition to the secretary of the Consolidated School Board, signed by himself and four others. The meeting was largely attended, quite a number of women being present. After Mr. Scott, who acted as chairman, stated the objects of the meeting as set out in the petition, viz., to take a vote on whether they were in favor of having a school built this year, or a site purchased, or the old school property sold, a counter-stroke was effected by the Rev. J. W. Ogden, who read a communication from the Minister of Education, dealing with each of the subjects mentioned, in which it was stated that as the board is empowered to proceed with the building of the school there was no reason for calling a special meeting of the ratepayers to decide upon what has already been determined, and that the Consolidated Schools Act authorizes the board, without reference to the ratepayers, to sell the old school property subject to the approval of the minister. The question of the school site had also been settled in accordance with the act. Mr. Scott, however, defied the ruling of the minister and insisted on taking the vote, stating that laws can be changed. The voting was one-sided, the supporters of consolidation recognizing the invalidity of the proceedings, refraining from voting.

It is difficult to understand Scott's opposition, as the school rates of the two sections in Chandos in the consolidated section are 29 2-10 and 21 mills respectively, as against 13 3-4 and 13 1-2 mills of the two schools in Burleigh and Anstruther. The two latter are the ones that will be affected adversely, if at all, in the matter of taxation, and this is where there is least opposition.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal
Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Fat cows sold in bunches at $5.50 and $5.75 a cwt. Near choice handyweight butchers, principally heifers, sold at $7.10 and $7.15 a cwt. This trade in butchers' cattle was slow, and prices were easy. The top paid on export steers was $8.25 a cwt., but this was for eight picked from a load. Export heifers were as near steady as possible, with one top at $7.50 a cwt. Rogers and Maybee purchased 300 export steers and heifers during the morning. Choice baby beeves sold at $9.50 and $10 a cwt.

Calves dropped 50 cents to $1 a cwt. in Buffalo at last week end, but this had no effect here today. One choice calf sold at 14½ cents a pound, and other good calves were 13 cents up. The small supply is the mainstay of this market.

Today's lamb market was steady with choice lambs 13½ to 13¾ cents a pound. Handyweight sheep were firm for choice at 8 to 8¼ cents a pound.

Packer buyers said Old Country bacon cables were lower at the week end, and that their bid on hogs of $12.75 a cwt. f.o.b. would certainly not be raised today. No business was reported during the morning, and there was only 900 hogs for sale.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—With United States markets closed, trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today was of dull character and showed no definite trend. Demand was lacking but aided by stronger Liverpool cables, prices held fairly steady. May and July futures closed 1-8c above Saturday's figures at $1.55 1-2 and $1.53 3-4 respectively. October at $1.36 1-2 was unchanged.

EGG PRICES

OTTAWA, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—There is a general shortage of receipts throughout the Prairie and Eastern Provinces, with British Columbia the only province in which home production can meet consumption.

Toronto—Wholesale fresh extras 42, firsts 36, seconds 30, country dealers report light receipts, paying producers extras 36, firsts 32, seconds 24, and making sales, extras 40 firsts 38, seconds 30 f.o.b.

Montreal—Market firm and advancing under light receipts. Wholesale fresh extras 45 to 47, firsts 40, pullets 38, seconds 36, storage extras 34, firsts 28, seconds 24. Dealers paying country points extras 38, firsts 33, seconds 25.

Winnipeg—Egg receipts not sufficient to meet local requirements, and small shipments of American eggs are being imported. Dealers quoting country shippers extras 38, firsts 33 to 34, seconds 23. Wholesale fresh extras 42 to 44, firsts 40, seconds 34, storage extras 28, firsts 25, seconds 18. Poultry receipts light, prices unchanged.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain here was reported very quiet, there being only a small demand from local buyers for odd cars and only a small business was done with prices unchanged.

A weaker feeling developed in the flour market today and millers generally reduced prices 20c per barrel, which is the first official change that has taken place since Jan. 11. Car lots of first patents were quoted at 8.90, second patents at 8.40 and strong bakers at 8 to 8.20 per barrel.

There was no change in the condition of the market for potatoes, business being somewhat restricted with Quebec varieties quoted at $2.75 per bag of 90 pounds, ex-track.

The feature of the trade on the cheese market today was the increased demand for current made goods and with sales at 19c to 19 1-4c. Receipts today were 61 boxes.

SUPPER PLANNED.

Omemee United Ladies' Guild Plans Birthday Party.

OMEMEE, Feb. 23.—On Thursday afternoon about twenty ladies gathered in the Sunday school room of the United Church, for the regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid. The president, Mrs. Henderson, occupied the chair and was assisted in the devotional exercises by Mrs. R. H. Williamson, Mrs. R. Poast and Mrs. J. Bushnell.

The secretary, Mrs. Widdis, read two notes of thanks and appreciation for flowers from Miss L. Parsons and Mr. W. H. Kennedy.

Among other business discussed was a social or supper, and it was later decided to hold the latter on Friday, March 19, in the Sunday school room. This affair will take the form of a birthday party when twelve tables will be set, each one decorated to represent a different month of the year. Two ladies, whose birthdays fall in the same month, were appointed for each table, with power to add to their number, and other necessary arrangements made for the occasion. Each guest will be expected to eat at the table which represents the month in which his or her birthday falls, and a programme, the nature of which was left to a committee, will follow the supper.

Mrs. F. G. Sandy closed the meeting with prayer.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A VOYAGE.

The man who mixes with his fellows is ever on a voyage of discovery, finding new islands of power in himself which would have remained forever hidden but for association with others. Everybody he meets has some secret for him, if he can only extract it, something which he never knew before, something which will help him on his way, something which will enrich his life. No man finds himself alone. Others are his discoverers.

LIFE MEMBERSHIP FOR MISSION WORK

Presentation Made To Ladies Who Are Leaving District.

THOMASBURG, Feb. 23.—The members of the Sunshine Mission Circle met at the home of Mrs. Chester Adams (who in the leader of the S. M. C.), on Saturday afternoon, for the purpose of presenting Misses Mildred and Florence Maynes, who are moving away from here, with life membership certificates of the mission circle and the pins that go with them.

After the first hymn, a solo, "Belle Mahone," was sung by Miss Audrey Holbert. A violin solo, "Ah, I Have Sighed To Rest Me," was given by Miss Mildred Harrison. After this short programme, the Misses Maynes were asked to take two chairs, which were placed for them, and the following address was read by Mildred Harrison:

Dear Florence and Mildred,—You know that it has been said that "the best of friends must part," but we are not to understand that by that, that the removal of some to distant homes, or even to far distant lands, means the severing of friendship ties. We rather incline to the sentiment expressed by the poet where he said,

"The body may far off remove,
We still are one in heart."

True friendship bids defiance to ocean billows and snow-capped peaks for

"Nountains rise and oceans roll
To sever us in vain."

You are leaving the home of your childhood and all your earliest associations; we, your life-long companions, remain in the old place to carry on, without your co-operation, the work of the Thomasburg United Church Mission Circle, which we began together.

We shall miss the inspiration of your missionary spirit and the helpfulness of your ever-devoted hearts and your ever-ready hands. But in your new place of residence you will find much to do and many ready to co-operate in your efforts.

We shall be with you in spirit in all your life and work and we entertain the hope that our ways, now diverging, will again converge that we may renew friendships at least: though we may never again labor in the same field.

Our earnest prayers will ever be with you. May the God of all Grace and Power bless you and your blessing and make you a blessing:

We ask you to accept these pins and these certificates which we present today, not purely out of sentiment, but rather as a reward of merit.

Signed on behalf of the Thomasburg Sunshine Mission Circle:

Mrs. Adams, Leader.
Helen Blakely, President.
Audrey Holbert, Secretary.

The hymn, "Blest Be The Tie That Binds," was sung, after which a splendid lunch was served.

The Twice Born.

Read Jn. 3:1-9. Text: 3:3. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except one be born anew he cannot see the Kingdom of God.

Meditation.—This Senator and Teacher in Israel should have known that man must be twice born. He is born of the flesh and if he lives to flesh alone he will perish as the flesh. His spirit must be born anew and from above only so can God be with him. If the kingdom is to come at all it must first come within the individual soul. Self interest, the motive of the "natural man" may be refined by culture but it continues love of self to the end unless born anew and from God. Then and then only it begins to love God and fellow man as Christ loved. That rebirth may be accomplished in the heart of a child so quietly, without making a vivid record in memory. This is the distinction which lifts the religion of Christ above all others. Other great teachers attempt an explanation of religion. He uses the old to reveal the new.

Prayer.—Our Father, we need forgiveness nought else can meet our case. Our souls are disfigured and stained and sin has enfeebled our will. Yet no easy word of pardon, Lord, or promise of forgiveness: not merely the hiding of Thine eyes nothing but the transformation of our being, the cleansing of the heart will avail. Amen.

JEWELS OF CZAR AND EMPRESS OF RUSSIA BOUGHT

Diamonds, Emeralds and Sapphires Weighing 30,000 Carats Are Sold.

PRICE $2,924,550

French Diamond Merchants Outbid British and American Jewelers.

MOSCOW, Feb. 23. (Canadian Press).—Diamonds, emeralds and sapphires weighing about 30,000 carats and comprising part of the Russian crown jewels, became the property Monday of French diamond merchants, who paid the Soviet Government $2,924,550 for the lot, or $135,800 more than offered by British and United States jewellers.

Among the jewels was the magnificent crown worn by the late Empress; it will be disjointed and the stones scattered on the French market.

Jewellers from a dozen capitals, who had flocked to Moscow when it was announced that the Government intended to dispose of the Imperial gems, contended sharply for possession of the jewels. Most of the bidders, however, retired when the Government decided that it would sell only a minimum of $2,500,000 worth of stones at one time. This left the field to the Anglo-American group and the Armenian buyer, Frankiano, representing a number of Paris firms.

The Government had accepted Frankiano's initial offer of $2,619,000, when William Reswick, a New York lawyer, representing the Anglo-American group, alleged to the Kremlin officials that his group had not been given a fair chance to counter Frankiano's bid. The Government thereupon annulled the sale and ordered new bids.

The Anglo-Americans then made a fresh offer of $2,788,750. But this was topped by Frankiano with $2,924,550, and the gems became the property of the firms he represented.

MERGER ARRANGED IN LAKE STEAMERS

Great Lakes and Canada Steamships Companies Are Joining.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22 (Canadian Press)—Cleveland negotiations between Canada Steamships representatives and the Playfair interests over the week-end resulted in a merger being arranged between the two great competitors for the great lakes business, Canada Steamships lines and Great Lakes Transportation Company, it is announced here today.

The Great Lakes Company has accepted the Canada Steamships offer and as a result all competition for traffic will be eliminated and the Great Lakes Company becomes an integral part of "steamships."

FRUIT COMBINE TRIAL SESSION IN HOTEL ROOM

Defendant Injured Friday in Vancouver—Couldn't Attend Court.

Accused Waived His Right to be Present at Trial.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press). — The Assize Court at which the trial is proceeding of fifty three "fruit combine" defendants on conspiracy chargs, convened Monday in a room of the Devonshire Apartments to obtain from an accused, Wm. Colquhoun of Calgary, who was injured on Friday, the waiving of his right to be present at the trial.

Mr. Colquhoun injured a leg through a fall on the hotel stairs. When the trial was resumed, E. P. Davis, K.C., leading defence counsel, said that Mr. Colquhoun had met with an accident which would confine him to his room for a few days. He pointed out that the trial could proceed in defendant's absence, under sub-section 2, section 504 of the Code, provided his counsel consented. Mr. Davis acquiesced.

Crown Prosecutor J. C. Moruer said that he was puzzled about the delay and he was doubtful whether counsel could waive the right of defendant to be present.

Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald suggested that court should adjourn to Mr. Colquhoun's room for the purpose of obtaining his consent to the arrangement.

"The room is not large enough," said Mr. Davis, who though that the trial would be held there. The judg explained that the jury, himself, the sheriff, counsel and the court reporter would step across the street to the hotel, which fronts the courthouse, and that the whole matter would be over in less than five minutes.

This was done and Mr. Justice McDonald was accompanied by a mounted policeman. Mr. Colquhoun consented to the trial proceeding in his absence.

From the register of joint stock companies for Saskatchewan Mr. Carmichael, of Regina, proved the incorporation in that province of a number of fruit houses.

MISSIONARIES SAVED.

Seventeen Removed From Danger Zone Near Chinese Armies.

PEKING, Feb. 23. (Canadian Press).—Advices received from Hanko say that 17 North American missionaries and their families, who have long been under the fire of contending Chinese armies, have been removed from the danger zone through the efforts of Selden Chapin, vice consul at Hankow. The advices say that the fighting between the armies is continued.

FATHER SHOT BY SON IN QUARREL

Bullet Wound in Left Arm and Side at Port Arthur.

SUNDAY SHOOTING

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Voto Lyytienen, 42, farmer of Gorham township, is in St. Joseph's Hospital, Port Arthur, with a bullet wound through his left arm and side and the Provincial Police are searching for his son, Weitto, who escaped following the shooting on Sunday evening.

According to the Provincial Police the boy who did the shooting left immediately after, on skiis, and the police hope to effect an arrest.

It is alleged that a quarrel developed between father and son and the son shot his father with a high-powered rifle, leaving the home immediately after.

OFFENCE AGAINST GIRL.

HAD STOCKS OF OPIUM.

VICTORIA, B.C., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Vernon Summers, arrested on Saturday, charged with being in possession of fifteen tins of opium, was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment and fined $1,000 with a further 12 months' if the fine is not paid when he appeared in police court Monday. Summers pleaded guilty.

122 VESSELS UNDER NEW CORPORATION

Merger of Great Lakes Companies Was Expected.

DULUTH, Minn., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—C. A. Skog, western agent for the Canada Steamship Lines, including the Northern Navigation Company, said Monday that the merger of the Canadian Lines and the Great Lakes Transportation Company had been pending for some time. Official announcement of the merger is expected here within a day or so.

The merger brings 122 vessels under the control of the joint corporation, Mr. Skog said, including 34 operated by the Great Lakes Company. The latter company is distinct from the Great Lakes Transit Company which operates boats out of Duluth.

The Canada Steamship Lines and the Great Lakes Transportation Company, involved in the merger, were strong competitors on the Great Lakes for many years.

PAROLE GRANTED TO AGED PRISONER

John Townsend Has Served One Month on Inland Revenue Charge.

COBOURG, Feb. 23. — John Townsend, seventy years of age, was liberated from the County Jail here on Tuesday after serving one month of a seven months' sentence. This was brought about by the Minister of Justice, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, K.C., paroling Mr. Townsend upon the application of F. M. Field, K.C., by personal appeal at Ottawa last week. The Minister telegraphed Mr. Field on Monday afternoon, and the official release reached Sheriff Nesbitt on Tuesday, and he promptly advised Governor McLaughlin.

It will be remembered that John Townsend was convicted at Brighton of violating the Dominion Inland Revenue Act at Warkworth and sentenced to one month in jail and fined the minimum penalty of $200 and a further term of six months failing payment of the fine.

Alfalfa Sown February 8th Record In Southern Alberta

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press). — Something of a winter record was set up in Southern Alberta, when George Bedell, Taber irrigation farmer, sowed a field of five acres to alfalfa on February 8. Warm weather prevails again, following last week's snowstorm and the ranges are practically free of snow.

Hon. A. J. McLean, Foothill rancher, has not fed a pound of hay to his 800 cattle this winter and has steers now that would make prime beef right off the range. Old timers declare this to be the most remarkable winter in Southern Alberta's history.

WIDOW FIGHTS WOMAN'S CLAIM

Montreal Suit Before Supreme Court for $9,000 Alleged Debt.

WAS DETECTIVE

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 23.—(By Canadian Press).—The claim of Dame Ange - Emma Cousineau of Montreal against the estate of the late Louis de Gangazue Savard was carried to the Supreme Court of Canada Monday. Argument was completed and judgment was reserved.

Mr. Savard was chief of the morality squad in the city of Montreal for several years up to 1918 and later joined the Dominion Detective Agency. He was married in 1922 to Dame Blanche Gauthier, who is resisting in the courts this claim against her husband's estate. The claim is based on a piece of writing supposed to be an acknowledgment by Savard that he owed Dame Cousineau $10,500 against which he had apparently paid off only about $1,000. A balance of $9,000 is claimed. The widow produced a paper from Dame Cousineau by which it declared that Savard owes her nothing.

It was submitted that the various sums which went to make up the total the appellant is said to have lent or advanced at different times to Savard, were "to secure certain benefits which cannot be considered legal considerations." It was also submitted that there was reason to believe that all these amounts were subsequently repaid.

The Superior Court and the Court of the King's Bench in Montreal both found against Dame Cousineau. The Supreme Court yesterday reserved judgment.

BRITISH WOULD BAR LEAGUE TO OTHER NATIONS

Parliamentary Committee Adopt Resolution Opposing League Enlargement.

EFFECT IN GERMANY

LONDON, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—The Parliamentary League of Nations Committee, which includes 400 members of the House of Commons, yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution urging the Government to strenuously oppose any enlargement of the League Council by giving permanent seats to other nations besides Germany.

H. A. L. Fisher, chairman of the committee and former representative of the British Empire at Geneva, in introducing the resolution, said that although the immediate danger of Poland's demand for a permanent seat appeared to be averted by Sweden's announced opposition, the proposals to enlarge the council were certain to come up again. The British Government therefore should have a definite decision on the principle to be followed. To admit Poland and Spain to permanent seats would open the door for a whole series of applications for similar treatment, Mr. Fisher continued. It was necessary to think of the League's future, he said, that being particularly true in regard to the United States, where he believed there was a growing movement in favor of the League which might be sharply checked unless the prospect remained intact that the United States, if and when she did enter the League, could take a seat reserved for a great power.

The supreme objection, however, to the enlargement of the Council, was the effect it would inevitably have in Germany, Mr. Fisher declared.

League Council Meeting.

GENEVA, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—An official call for the Council of the League of Nations to meet March 8, when the special assembly summoned to act on Germany's application for membership in the League will open, was issued Monday. Viscount Ishii, Japanese Ambassador to France, will preside over the Council meeting.

The official agenda published yesterday includes 26 items, but the list omits the most important question brought up by Germany's application, that of whether other states besides Germany shall be given permanent seats in the Council.

Among the questions to be considered is a report of the League's experts on arbitration conventions and the treaties of mutual security registered with the League. It is understood that the experts have found that existing documents show that the idea of settling conflicts by conciliation and arbitration has been more widely adopted than is generally supposed. This is expected to encourage the League's disarmament discussions.

MEIGHEN REGRETS GRAHAM'S ABSENCE

Minister of Canals Was Always a Popular Member.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—The resignation of Rt. Hon. George P. Graham from the Government and the appointment of Hon. Chas. Dunning, of Saskatchewan, as his successor in the portfolio of Railways and Canals, was announced in the House of Commons Monday by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, acting Government leader. Mr. Lapointe tabled the correspondence which had passed between Mr. Graham and Premier King on the matter of Mr. Graham's resignation.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Opposition, said it was perhaps premature for him to make any remarks before perusing the correspondence. Mr. Graham had retired, following his defeat at the last general election. Aside altogether from that defeat, he was sure that everyone in the House greatly regretted the absence of Mr. Graham. He had always been a popular member of the House. If there ever was a defeat where the causes were due not to the individual member, but to the Government and its policy, Mr. Graham's defeat was that one.

Mr. Meighen said that he felt Mr. Graham had taken the right course in resigning, and he could only feel sorry that his example was not generally followed in the Government.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, acting Government leader, agreed with Mr. Meighen as to the popularity of Mr. Graham, which had been richly earned. "I only hope and feel sure that his services to the Canadian people will be preserved in some other high capacity," Mr. Lapointe said.

A dainty luncheon was served about 11.30 o'clock, and the meeting broke up at 1 o'clock sharp.

LOWER TARIFF ISSUE.

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 23. (Canadian Press). — The Democrats will make the party's old stand for a downward revision of the tariff, the paramount issue in the Congressional campaign next fall, Representative Oldfield of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, declared in an address here yesterday.

"We advocate a revision of the Tariff Act," he said, "to a point where it will be a competitive revenue tariff; where it will not benefit the pet industries of the administration at the expense of the agricultural population.

Health and Food

The Need for Hot, Sustaining Beverages —and of Putting Nutriment and Flavour into Food

Bodily warmth comes from within. Woollens and furs do not add warmth — they retain the heat which the body creates from food. To be healthy and warm during the bracing, invigorating winter, keep the bodily fires burning brightly with nourishing, sustaining food — the strength-giving nutriment of prime beef in the form of "OXO" Cubes.

Hot "OXO" Relieves Fatigue of Housework and Shopping

When you are busy about the house, stop for a moment in mid-morning or afternoon for a refreshing cup of "OXO"—a cube to a cup of boiling water. When you go out for a brisk walk or shopping tour, take a cup of "OXO" on your return. It provides just the grateful warmth and nourishment you need to relieve fatigue and revive the energy.

Hot "OXO" Prevents After-Chill

Arctic explorers, trans-Atlantic airmen, mountain climbers and athletes in every sport depend on "OXO" for strength and endurance.

If you enjoy, hockey, skating, snow-shoeing, skiing, tobogganning, guard against the after-chill which comes when the excitement and exercise is over. Muscles then are relaxed; tiredness creeps on; the whole system is in a condition to "take cold." A hot cup of "OXO" is the best body-warmer and chill preventative. It sustains and stimulates mind and body—rebuilds the wasted tissues — protects against taking cold.

A Sturdy Food for Growing Children

Children "just love" the rich flavour of "OXO" Cubes; and the beef nourishment is a food that helps to build bone, muscle and good red blood. Give the children hot "OXO" when they come in from school or play—an "OXO" Cube to each cup of boiling water or milk.

Nourishing Broth and Jellies for the Invalid

No trouble at all to make a tasty broth or jelly for the sickroom when you have a tin of "OXO" Cubes handy. An "OXO" Cube dissolved in a cup of hot water—and the beef tea is ready. How handy and convenient when something nourishing must be given between meals and at night?

The Strengthening Cup for Old Folks

"OXO" Cubes help to rebuild health and vigour. They present the food and strength-giving elements of prime fresh beef in a form which elderly people can digest and assimilate. A hot cup of "OXO" is a gratifying beverage between meals and at bedtime.

A FREE COOK BOOK YOU OUGHT TO HAVE

HC 31 — The YELLOW STUB — by Ernest Lynn

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY REA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the yellow stub of a theater ticket.

JIMMY RAND, his son, goes to Chicago, where the theater is. The stub is traced to THOMAS FOGARTY, who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints when she learns police want her for murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub and handkerchief might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before. Jimmy receives several mysterious warnings to leave Chicago, but ignores them. Later he is attacked at night by two men. He escapes, after seizing a blackjack from one of them.

With Jimmy and Mary estranged, Church presses his advantage and get's Mary's promise to marry him. Mary tells Jimmy this when they meet in a park. Jimmy, trying to hurt her, accuses her of marrying for money. He goes back to his room and calls up Olga, asking her to meet him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Jimmy, sitting in the hotel mezzanine, saw Olga Maynard approaching and rose to meet her.

"I'll have to apologize for my appearance," she said, taking his hand. "You didn't give me much time, and I'm still dressed for the street."

She was wearing a fur-trimmed cloth coat over a blue worsted street dress, and a small tight-fitting black hat, beneath which her light curly hair showed.

"You look fit to go anywhere," he answered. "But we're only going to some place where we can eat and hear a little music."

"And dance" she asked eagerly. "You know I've never danced with you and you're a wonderful dancer. I've seen you."

"You've seen me? Where?"

"Why, that night you first spoke to me. I saw you dancing with the girl you were with before you came over to see me. Who was she? She was awfully pretty."

He ignored her question; turned his face away and bit his lip.

"All right," he assented, "we'll dance, too."

"We'll go to the place where I first met you," she suggested, "the Madrid."

She was not looking at him, and so she missed the expression of pain that flitted across his features.

"The Madrid it will be," he said with forced gayety, and he thought, "If I'm trying to forget I've certainly started about it the wrong way."

They found a table for two, and while she studied her menu card he looked across the room and picked out the table where he and Mary Lowell had sat on that never-to-be-forgotten night. He shut his eyes, reliving that evening, conjuring up the picture of Mary and him chatting together.

He shook his head, resolutely putting the thought out of his mind. "May I suggest something for you," he asked Olga, "or have you made up your mind?"

"You go ahead and order for me. It will be more fun." She flashed him a gay smile, the first he had seen from her in weeks.

"You haven't asked me to dance," she said a little later. "Don't you want to?"

It occurred to him that he must have appeared a very dull companion. He had been answering in monosyllables to her conversational commonplaces, his mind far away.

"We'll start right now," he answered, throwing down his napkin and pushing back his chair. And then they were on the floor and he abandoned himself completely to the music. . . .

They danced encore after encore. They were still standing on the floor, clapping their hands, long after the saxophone's plaintive "that's all," and they laughed when they saw that the orchestra leader was bowing directly to them and that they were alone on the floor.

"I must say," she laughed when they had sat down again, "that when you get your mind on a thing it doesn't get off quickly."

"Meaning just what?" he asked.

"Well, when you make up your mind to dance, you dance, don't you? Wasn't it funny, the two of us standing out there all alone, clapping like two kids?"

"It was your dancing. That's the answer." He changed the subject. "Music is a great tonic, isn't it? Dancing to music like this makes you want to live, doesn't it?"

She nodded thoughtfully. "And it helps you to forget."

"Yes," he said slowly, "it helps you to forget."

She turned her face away, made a pretense of studying her glass. He lit a cigaret and offered the package to her.

"I almost forgot," he said. "You smoke, don't you?"

"No, I don't any more."

He frowned. "Olga, I wonder if you realize how much you've changed? Cutting out smoking is another thing."

"I've tried to change—Jim."

The use of the nickname startled him, sent a sudden pain darting through him. She was looking at him intently.

"Shouldn't I have called you that?" she asked.

"Why not? I call you Olga, don't I? But," he said, switching the topic, "you know you've never told me about yourself. I guess you know my history pretty well. What's yours?"

She was silent for a while, looking down at her plate. Then she said, "I'll tell you, sometime, but not just now. Let's dance."

Jimmy was beginning to find an anesthetic in the music. The dull feeling of misery that had been with him all afternoon had gone and he became conscious, for the first time of the fact that he was holding a pretty girl in his arms.

"You certainly can dance," he told her as he piloted her gracefully through the crush of swaying couples. And it was true. She moved with a sort of feline grace and followed him unerringly in his every step.

"Who couldn't, with you" she breathed. "You'd make an ideal dancing partner on the stage."

"Oh, you've danced on the stage?"

"Well, not very much. It's hard to get a real chance. The best I've been able to get a regular job at is cabaret singing, as you know."

"Some day," he said, "you may get your chance. When you do I know you'll be a success."

"Maybe I won't want the chance now if it comes," she murmured.

"Why, what do you mean?" He stared at her.

"Oh, nothing." She shook her head and glanced up at him brightly. "Come on. Don't stop." She grabbed him more closely, swaying her shoulders, and he fell into her mood, forgetting everything but the fact that here was music and movement and a girl.

The orchestra leader was bowing again. "I hate to stop," Olga said as she sat in her chair. "I want to keep on forever."

"I do, too," he agreed. He said, toying with his fork. "I hate to wake up. I hate to face tomorrow."

"Why?"

"Well, you surely haven't lost sight of the fact that I'm here trying to find the man that killed my father. I've never got over the first shock of Dad's death. It was so cruel—so unnecessary. I'll never forget it."

"I know." She reached out and laid her hand on his. "And that's what they're trying to connect me with. God! How can they believe such a thing of me. You don't, do you, Jim?"

"No. You know I don't."

"You don't believe I'm a —a bad woman, do you?"

The question startled him. "Why, what ever put the thought in your head? Why should I?"

"All I've wanted to do, Jim, is to live. I've done some things that are not exactly approved of in the best society. You know what Lieutenant O'Day said about me."

"I don't care what O'Day says—or anybody else."

"Jim, I want to help you. I'll try awfully hard to help you."

"You are trying now—you are helping me, Olga. I can't ask any more."

She was silent for a moment. Then she said, "What else are you trying to forget, Jim?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "Why, nothing Olga, Nothing else. What else could there be?"

"It's a girl, isn't it?" she persisted. "Was it the girl I saw you with here that night?"

He laughed, and lifted his glass of water to his lips. "There's no other girl."

She looked at him intently. "You'd never make a successful liar. It's true, isn't it?"

He said in a low voice, "No, it's not true. There's no girl."

She ignored his denial. "Whoever it is, Jim, she has no right to do what she's doing. She isn't good enough for you."

"Don't!" he cried sharply, putting up his hand.

"I mean it. You're too good for any woman."

He rose from his chair. "You're talking nonsense now, Olga. Come on, we'll have to be going. It's getting late. Did I tell you I have a new job? I start to work at seven-thirty tomorrow morning."

She followed him. "No. What are you going to do?"

"I'm going to drive a laundry truck," and he laughed at her look of surprise.

"I don't understand you," she said when they had reached the street.

"Don't try to," he laughed. "Look' he said, "do you remember this spot? It was just up the street here that you fainted that night and I put you in the taxi and took you home." His face clouded at the recollection.

"I was near the end of my rope that night," she said, clutching at his arm. "Jim, did you ever get to thinking seriously of killing yourself? That's how I felt that night. I felt as if I didn't have a friend."

"You have one now, Olga."

"Jim, do you mean it?"

"I certainly do." He pressed her arm and turned at her to find an expression of horror on her face.

"Look!" she cried. "In that car!" She pointed to an automobile, halted momentarily beside them in the traffic. He looked and gave a sudden start. Sitting with his face pressed close to the window of the closed car was the man with whom he had had the fight that night he was shadowed.

"It's the man I've been looking for," cried Olga, "the man I told you about!"

"MAJESTIC SPEECH" AT MARMORA BY THE HONORABLE J. R. COOKE

Political Leader in Hastings County Eulogized at Banquet.

WARDEN RAISED.

MARMORA, Feb. 23 — A banquet of a very pretentious character was given in Marmora Town Hall Friday evening in honor of the Hon. J. R. Cooke, M.P.P., vice-chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission and Reeve G. B. Airhart, Warden of Hastings County. The affair was a purely non-political nature and enabled the people of the district to show their marked appreciation of the public services rendered by the guests of honor. Over a hundred people assembled to partake of the excellent banquet served by host and hostess Potts. Mr. R. A. Elliott was elected to president, and after submitting the Royal toast, remarked that those present had met to do honor to two prominent men, one who had given the major portion of his life to serving his province, and the other who had given the major portion of his life in the interests of true citizenship. The Deloro orchestra were then called upon for a musical selection, favoring the gathering with "Happy Go Lucky".

The chairman outlined the next toast as "Municipal Institutions" in which connection he called upon six speakers in turn.

Mr. H. W. Sabine, a past Clerk of Marmora Village Council, gave a neat little speech in which he dwelt upon the tasks set those who take up municipal duties and in conclusion, eulogised the services rendered by the honored guests in their different spheres. The succeeding speaker was Reeve S. B. Rollins of Tweed. He congratulated Mr. Airhart in reaching the head of the county as its Warden. He declared that no question should take hold on the minds of people more than municipal matters. 75 or 80 per cent of the members of parliament got their schooling in municipal affairs. From one step to another they got taken up with the great questions affecting the welfare of the people. He urged that more interest be taken in the election of council boards. He thought Marmora was exceedingly careful in this matter. During the eleven years he had represented Tweed, Marmora had had three good reeves. He thought the time soon coming when women would be representatives to County Council and a few Agneses would be found there. He remarked in closing, that were it not for the storm, ten or more other members would have carried out their intention to join in honouring Mr. Airhart.

Mr. F. A. Bapty.

Mr. F. A. Bapty was the next speaker. In humorous vein, he said he was doutbless called upon to speak because he was a councillor of that "nearby city" Deloro, of which Marmora was a worthy suburb. After tendering congratulations to the new Warden, on behalf of Deloro, he remarked that the tendency of many was to belittle public men and to say they were after graft. He personally liked to think that in the majority of cases, the motives of these men were not selfish. Paying a tribute to the Hon. J. R. Cooke, he also ventured to hope that that gentleman would be successful in the developing of greater water powers in this part of Ontario. Reeve R. Bonter of Marmora township on being called upon to support the toast, spoke chiefly of his more intimate associations with the new Warden. Having first met him at school, he found him as he grew up, to be a man of very best type. He also publicly tendered thanks to the Hon. member for the riding for services rendered to the Township of Marmora.

Mr. T. Laycock, a past reeve of Marmora township told of seeing an old collector's book showing one pound and so many shillings having been collected in Marmora and Deloro. He described the contrast of what would appear on the collector's book now from the two places. His further remarks dealt with the broadening out of municipal life which recent years have seen.

Warden Airhart.

Warden Airhart's turn to speak now came. The gathering broke into "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow." "This", said Warden Airhart, "is one time in my life above all others when I feel I cannot justly express my appreciation for the honor done me by my friends." He would thank his friends in the village and township and in Deloro for the kind manner in which they accepted his honor. He could not fail to note the unselfish though behind the help received from Deloro were they had a reeve in the person of Mr. S. B. Wright more worthy to receive the honor than he was. It would be better for all bodies of people including those who met at Ottawa if there were more who didn't think so much of themselves. He thanked those who did him the honor of being a guest along with Hon. J. R. Cooke. He detailed his connection with municipal affairs so as to indicate that any credit coming to himself was only made possible by the assistance of those men who had worked with him. There had not been the least sign of enmity at the end of each year of work. He thanked the citizens for the assistance or rather non resistance given the Village Council. So long as he had the privilege to remain in his office, he would do all he could to assist the community. Following his speech, the orchestra rendered very pleasingly "The Way of Love."

The chairman gave out the final toast, "Natural resources of Canada and the Hydro Electric Commission." Mr. S. B. Wright in proposing said they were dealing that evening with two men who were straight as a die. Unfortunately there were some instances of men in public life whose dealings were not straight. In speaking of Canada as the greatest country of the world, Mr. Wright said, "You all know that I have seen a good many parts of the world. I have yet to see any country which has the undeveloped and developed resources of Canada." He reminded his hearers that Deloro was the first to sign up a contract with the Seymour Power Company, this happening some 15 or 16 years ago. Despite the developments the stage has been reached when the Commission had to look around for other power.

A Majestic Speech.

Hon. J. R. Cooke, in rising to respond, was also greeted with an ovation. He gave a majestic speech, stressing developments and future problems of the Hydro Commission with a precision and ease that instilled wonder into all present. He said that the subject had for some years past, held for him a singular fascination. Prefacing his remarks with a tribute to Mr. Aairhart, he proceeded to pay most striking testimony to the late Sir Adam Beck, whose life he said, was a striking illustration of the power of a single individual to mould public opinion. With an imposing array of facts and figures, the Honorable member sketched briefly the smaller developments within the Province of Ontario of which scarcely anything was heard. The Hydro Commission is returning every dollar that the Province expended upon its developments and has vindicated itself in the face of the most critical investigation that was possible, namely that undertaken by the Gregory Commission. In concluding, Hon. J. R. Cooke touched on the problems of the future.

As a closing number the orchestra played "Homestead Melodies."

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE DISCUSSES COURSE

Also Decides To Resume Practices For Proposed Play.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 23 — The Seymour West Institute held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon, February 18, at the home of Mrs. George Brown. The meeting was opened by singing the Institute Ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer. A sewing course was discussed and the ladies decided to hold this course sometime in March. The ladies are going to resume practice for the play which was postponed at Christmas time and new characters will be chosen.

Nine ladies responded when the subject "A Book I Have Recently Enjoyed" was given out. Mrs. Thomas Brown sang a solo, "Always speak of others as you would have others speak of you." Mrs. Thomas Dunham read a paper and gave a demonstration on "Providing for and putting up a school lunch."

A vote of thanks was given to the hostess, Mrs. Brown, by Mrs. Howard Clark and Mrs. George Longmuir on behalf of the ladies.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Robert McCulloch on Thursday, March 18.

HEAVY SENTENCES FOR O.T.A. CHARGES

Fine for Buying Liquor and Jail Term for Seller.

LINDSAY, Feb. 23.—(Special).—On Saturday J. Martin, who figured as a witness for the defence in the big liquor case lisposed of during the day, came before Police Magistrate Bradford charged with purchasing liquor from one other than a licensed vendor. This was the first case of this kind ever heard in the local court. The accused was found guilty, and was fined $150.00 and costs.

In passing sentence Police Magistrate Bradford stated that never in his experience on the bench did he ever listen to such deliberately false evidence as was given in this case and hinted that action for forgery should be instituted.

"Pinky" Gassien, who was fined $1,000 and nine months' imprisonment on the charge of selling, was unable to pay his fine, and will serve a sentence of fifteen months.

REAL ESTATE MEN WANT LICENSE LAW

Urge Executive To Try and Get Ontario Legislation.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 23—(Canadian Press.)—The need for a license law for real estate brokers in Ontario was the chief item stressed at the annual convention of the Ontario Association of real estate boards held here Saturday. By resolution the incoming executive was strongly urged to try and get such a measure before the Ontario Legislature and at the banquet in the evening the desirability of the license law from every point of view was pointed out by J. A. Hall, executive secretary of the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards.

W. H. Bosley, Toronto, was elected president for the coming year; Mr. J. G. Lundy, Windsor, vice_president, and Geodge H. Patten, Windsor, secretary-treasurer.

SPAIN WANTS SEAT

MADRID, Feb. 23. (Canadian Press). — The Spanish Government and the press are of the unanimous opinion that Spain should have a permanent seat in the Council of the League of Nations. It is the idea of the Government that the present movement is most convenient for Spain's permanency in the council.

Czar's Double Cause Riot As People Demand Arrest

MOSCOW, Russia, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Extraordinary scenes were enacted at Leningrad over the week-end, when crowds, alarmed by the report that Czar Nicholas had "returned," rushed to the square before the Winter Palace and demanded that he be arretsed.

The clamor was called only when the Communist Police emerged from the Palace and announced that the "Czar" was only Nicholas Evdakov, a baker, whose extraordinary resemblance to the late Emperor caused him to be chosen by the State motion picture authorities to play the part of the last reigning Romanoff in a new anti-monarchial film.

TREATY PROVIDES FOR ARBITRATION

Franco-Turkish Pact Also Regulates Use of Bagdad Line.

PARIS, Feb. 23. — (Canadian Press).—The summary of the treaty recently entered into at Angora between Turkey and France shows that in addition to regulating the uses of the Bagdad Railway it provides for the compulsory arbitration of all disputes and establishes neighborly relations between the two countries. It also makes a number of minor readjustments.

It is reiterated in official quarters that there is nothing new in the convention which gives Turkey an advantage in case of conflict with Great Britain over the Mosul territory and that the status of the railway remains unchanged.

SALVATION ARMY CONVOYING 1,000 YOUNG FARMERS

Expects to Have 500 Here By the End of March.

TRAINED IN SUSSEX

Six Canadians on Army Training Farm in England.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Owing to the new overseas settlement agreement made by the Dominion Government which requires that all maids must be brought to Canada by a government agency, and, on arrival, placed in government hostels, no girls for domestic service will come from the British Isles to Canada this year under the auspices of the Salvation Army, according to Col. Thomas Tuge, director of the Immigration Department for the Army in Canada.

With reference to the latest federal immigration plan, Col. Tudge said that the six Canadians who are on the Army training farm at Hadleigh, Sussex, will continue to help qualify intending British emigrants for agricultural work on this side of the Atlantic. Before the new overseas settlement agreement came into being, at the intance of the government, Col. Tudge said he had planned to bring 1000 farm boys to Canada this year, and although for some time his objective seemed doomed he is still confident that this influx of trained agriculturists will be arranged.

Ontario has been the main destination for boys who have emigrated under the guardianship of the Army so far this year. One hundred youths, including 45 who came out last week, have been settled in this province and a few have been located in New Brunswick, Col. Tudge hopes to have 500 young farmers in Canada by the end of next month. Of this number, it is hoped, many will be placed on the prairies.

NEW ATTACK ON U.S. PROHIBITION

Contended By Association That Six Years Under Act Prove Failure.

WANT LIGHT DRINKS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. (Canadian Press).—A new and concentrated bombardment was directed at prohibition Monday and mingled with the fire of general criticism were demands for the repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment. Guns were trained from a luncheon table set by the Association against the Prohibition Amendment for its second "Face the Facts" conference. The contention that six years of prohibition under the Volstead Act has proved a failure provided the keynote of the meeting coupled with a demand that light wine and beer be legalized.

WORLD REVOLUTION STILL AIM OF REDS

Methods May Change, But Objective Does Not.

MOSCOW, February 23. Canadian Press. — World revolution continues to be the aim of the Communist Internationale, M. Zinovieff declared Sunday in reporting to the executive committee of the Internationale of which he is chairman. "Our methods may undergo some changes" he said, "but not on proletarian revolution itself, which is our [illegible] and single objective. History makes dictatorship of the proletariat the order of the day."

M. Zinovieff, who was warmly greeted by hsi associates despite his recent political reverses, admitted that the Communist Internationale will be obliged to seek new sources of strength to overturn the existing social order."

CLASSES HAD SOCIAL.

Thirty Young People From Gilmour Church Visited Mrs. J. G. Mann.

Thirty people, comprising the Baraca Class and Young Ladies' Class of the Gilmour Memorial Sunday school assembled on Thursday evening at The Pines, the home of Mrs. J. Gordon Mann, the teacher of the Baraca Class. The gathering marked the thirteenth years of Mrs. Mnan's term as teacher of the class. A very pleasant evening was spent in songs and game, after which lunch was served. Expressions of thanks to Mrs. Mann marked the close of an enjoyable evening.

Don't think your teeth are naturally off color and dull. You can restore them to amazing whiteness in a new way leading dentists advise.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel a film. A slippery coating that covers them, hides their color and invites tooth and gum troubles. Ordinary pastes and dentifrices will not successfully remove it.

That is why, in old days, so many smiles were ruined by ugly teeth and toneless gums. Now, thanks to modern science, there is a way to combat that film.

Just obtain a tube of the dentifrice called Pepsodent at your druggist's. Clear off that film tonight; clear white teeth are beautiful. Note the amazing difference in your smile.

You'll be thankful for the suggestion. For thus you can change your whole appearance.

COUNTESS OF CATHCART LUNCHES AT THE RITZ WHILE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS WORRY OVER TANGLE

U. S. Government Officers Spend Holiday Considering Legal Status.

TEN DAYS' FREEDOM

Adultery Not Legal Crime Where Countess Eloped in South Africa.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—The Countess of Cathcart yesterday turned the tables, at least temporarily, on Government officials. While she was enjoying the sights of New York City, harried offcials spent most of the holiday consulting on the status of her case.

United States District Attorney Buckner one of the consulting officials, considered that the countess passed from the jurisdiction of the federal courts back to that of the immigration bueau of the department of labor when she signed a personal bond Sunday night for her liberty for ten days. This made it unnecessary, he said, to hold the scheduled hearing in the federal court today on the writ of habeas corpus which she obtained before being released from Ellis Island under the $500 bond.

The announcement that there would be no habeas corpus hearing was made by Mr. Buckner after he and two of his assistants had conferred for more than an hour with Assitant Solicitor Reitzel of the labor department.

"The hearing Tuesday is off," Mr. Buckner said. "The matter now is back in the jurisdiction of the labor department."

It was explained that the countess could stay here ten days, forfeit her bond by not returning to Ellis Island or leaving the country, be arrested on a warrant, returned to Ellis Island and then, perhaps, be released on another writ of habeas corpus.

Countess at Ritz.

While the officials were occupied with their problem, the countess was enjoying her temporary liberty, attending a luncheon at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, receiving visits from friends and sight-seeing in New York. She maintained that she was determined to "fight to the finish."

Henry H. Curran, commissioner of Immigration at Ellis Island, yesterday, issued a statement from his sick bed in which he said that adultery, for the commission of which the countess was ordered excluded, should not be considered cause for exclusion of immigrants and visitors coming to this country. The present laws should be changed by Congress. Mr. Curran said, as the state of affairs now "is nothing short of ridiculous."

While it is a crime in the United States, adultery is not so considered in most other countries of the world, the commission said. Because it is not a crime in other countries, American consuls are without records of the commission of the offense, and they cannot get even informal proof.

"To expect informal proof of adultery to any helpful degree is absurd," he declared. "Our consults and inspectors are not posted on instances of that offence, nor can they be. Nor can inspectors obtain admissions of it by racing about the decks of steamers asking the passengers if they have ever committed adultery, or still less can consuls do so by asking the direct question of applicants for visaes. The answers would be 'No'."

The legal status of the Countess took a new turn after a long telephone conversation between District Attorney Buckner and Arthur Garfield Hays, the Countess' attorney. They agreed to ask Federal Judge Goddard to postpone the habeas corpus hearing for a week.

Not Legal Crime.

Immediately after the agreement was reached, Mr. Hays telegraphed Secretary of Labor Davis asking for a re-hearing of the case in order that evidence might be submitted to show that adultery is no crime in South Africa, and therefore no legal reason for exluding the countess.

While he consented to the postponement of the hearing, Mr. Buckner did not change his attitude that the Countess by agreeing to ten days' freedom of the city had waived the habeas corpus proceedings. If the case is not settled by a week from today, he said, he will argue this point before Judge Goddard.

"My position," said Mr. Hays, "is that as long as the writ was served while she was still being held at Ellis Island, the federal courts now have jurisdiction and the department of labor cannot take it away from them by releasing her on her own bond. If I thought that it could, I would surrender her to the immigration authorities this very night."

Mr. Buckner said he thought it reasonably probable that the labor department would grant a new hearing, so that evidence as to the legal status of adultery in South Africa could be presented.

HAVELOCK SCHOOL TRUSTEE MEETING

Routine Business Was Transacted By Board Last Week.

HAVELOCK, Feb. 22.—The regular meeting of the Board of Education was held on Wednesday evening in the school-room with all the members present.

Moved by Trustees Roche and Moore that account of Havelock Standard, listed at last meeting at $40.00, be reduced to the sum of $30.00 to correct error. Carried.

Tenders for applicants for the position of caretaker of the school were read and are listed as follows:

Per Annum—Frank Voyer, $900.00; Herbert W. Deline, $900.00; C. W. Coon, $780.00; A. H. Dafoe, $800.00; Robert Buchanan, $900.00; Frank Parcels, $1,075.00; F. W. Post, $660.00; Archie Mathison, $850.00; Theron McMullen, $875.00; F. B. McAdam, $720.00.

After a discussion of the merits of the applicants, on motion of Trustees Fennell and Roche, Robert Buchanan's application was accepted at a salary of $900.00 per annum. Motion carried unanimously.

Moved by Trustees Roche and Rigby that the chairman and secretary sign all cheques drawn on bank account of school board. Carried.

Moved by Trustees Moore and Roche that the chairman of the board act as representative of the board concerning matters that have to do with the duties of the caretaker. Carried.

Received from Jannette H. Saunders an application on the teaching staff of the Public school. On motion of Trustees Moore and Fraser the secretary was directed to file the application.

Communication was received from W. M. Morris, secretary-treasurer of the Ontario School Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association, drawing attention to a convention on April 6, 7 and 8, 1926, of the Ontario school trustees and ratepayers at Toronto and the advantages of the School Board Journal as a publication of interest to those directing the affairs of schools.

Moved by Trustees Roche and Rigby that the secretary subscribe for six copies of the School Board Journal and remit in connection with registration fee of delegate to the association's convention.

Moved by Trustees Moore and Fraser that the chairman, Dr. A. S. Thompson, be a delegate to represent Havelock school at the convention. Carried.

Chairman Thompson brought to the attention of the board the fact that a number of the ratepayers were complaining that regulations in connection with the opening of the school were not being observed, and the chairman reported that he had taken the matter up with the principals, with the result that it is found that the regulations are being fully complied with.

Moved by Trustees Fennell and Roche that Mr. Moore be delegated to confer with the agriculture teacher in connection with the needs of the class. Carried.

Moved by Trustees Fraser and Rigby that the account from the village for lumber and sand for the years 1922 and 1923 be returned to the village clerk for more detailed information as to material. Carried.

W.M.S. DAY OF PRAYER.

Lakefield Ladies Observed Annual Occasion on Friday.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 23.—The annual Day of Prayer of the Woman's Missionary Societies in Canada and the United States was observed on Friday afternoon by a well attended prayer meeting held in the Baptist church. The attendance was good and an increased amount of interest shown.

An entertainment will be held on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the choir of the Regent street church when "The Deacon's Honeymoon" will be put on by the Ladies Aid of Knox Church, Peterboro.

The popularity of "Band Night" at the rink continues and each Saturday night sees a big crowd from the village and vicinity to enjoy the combination of skating and music. The Citizens' Band has become an institution and a valuable asset to the villge life.

At the regular meeting of the A.Y.P.A. to be held on Monday evening, the rector, Rev. W. Cox, will give an address on "Our Missionary Work in China."

The Male Voice Choir of Peterborough, which delighted a large audience on April 28th of last year is to reurn this year on April 27th. Last year's success assures them of a good reception this year.

MERGER DENIED.

GUNMAN KILLS TWO POLICEMEN

St. Paul Residential District Is Terrorized By Robbers.

SEVEN HOLD-UPS.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—A climax to the search for the robbers who had terrorized the residential district on Monday night was reached early today when John Schultze and Fred Poitsch, policemen, were shot and killed by an unidentified gunman as they lay helpless in the street. Seven hold-ups had been committed in three hours in the district.

The slain policeman were patrolling the district in an automobile when attacked.

TRUSTEE NAMED BY LOCAL VETS

Captain Layfield Appointed To Serve on Canteen Board.

CHURCH PARADE.

At a general meeting of the Great War Veteran's Association held in the G.W.V.A. hall last night a resolution was passed unanimously that Past Commander Captain R. E. Layfield be appointed one of the Trustees of the Canteen Fund for the Province of Ontario, and that a copy of the resolution be sent to the Prime Minister of the Province, Colonel W. H. Price, Provincial Treasurer; and W. H. Bradburn, M. P.P.

The members of the Association decided to hold their annual Church parade at St. Paul's Church on May 25. Invitations will be sent out to veterans of all wars, O.C.'s Militia Units and the veterans of 1866 for whom cars will be provided.

A euchre committee under the direction of Comrade Crowe was appointed to put on a drive during the first week in March to assist the ladies in their relief work.

A resolution was passed sympathizing with Mrs. J. Mills, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary and expressing good wishes for a speedy recovery.

It was resolved that the thanks of the Association be conveyed to the ladies for their donation to the branch also for their co-operation in the work of relief that has been carried out to date.

L.O.B.A. SOCIAL.

Lodge Members Spent Evening at Cards and Bowling.

L.O.B.A. No. 244 held its regular monthly social evening in Victoria Hall on Friday, February 19. Quite a number of the members and friends attended. The first part of the evening was spent in playing cards and bowling. Prizes for cards went to Mrs. Moore (flower vase) and Mr. Ferguson (smoking tray). Captains for bowling were Mrs. DeLong and Miss Woodgate, the prize for bowling going to Mrs. DeLong and her team. The next on the programme was a general store. Groceries, etc., were brought by the different members, and were auctioned off by Bro. G. Porter, W. M. Wright acting as treasurer. Proceeds of the evening amounted to nearly $20.00. Lunch was then served by the committee in the usual efficient manner. About 12 p.m. the crowd dispersed, all voting a good evening's amusement.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

HARRY GAINEY

"In my opinion," said Harry Gainey, "the Peterborough Fair is an asset to the community. Although I have never as yet taken an active part in promoting it, I still believe that it is doing good work in the community and deserves general support. It serves en educational purpose for old and young, urban and suburban ratepayers alike and should be a real community Fair.

"The directors have shown real ability in the past and now in reaching for a six-day exhibition, should receive the support of all classes. They should lend their assistance to the directors to obtain a bigger fair than ever and should be boosters for the best shown in Eastern Ontario."

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

PEGGY HAS A REAL SURPRISE.

Peggy gave a cry of delight when the little fluttering creature poised in front of the honeysuckle blossom.

"Well, of all things!" Peggy exclaimed. "I never knew before that humming birds flew around so late in the evening.

"Humming birds don't," answered a merry voice, and a wee little elfin not much larger than the winged creature jumped up beside Peggy.

"Hello, Squeedee!" Peggy cried, jumping up and catching the elfin's hand. Then she whispered: "See that little creature hovering over that blossom? Who is it?"

"What? You mean you don't know Mrs. Hawk Moth," questioned Squeedee. "Oh, Mrs. Hawk Moth, come here and meet Peggy.

The quivering creature turned from the blossom, after first rolling up her long trunk, and came over to Squeedee.

"I'm glad to meet any friend of Squeedee's," she said, bowing politely. "I heard you call me a humming bird."

"Yes, I did think you were a humming bird," replied Peggy. "But I can see you're not."

"How is the family coming on?" Squeedee asked. "Where are the caterpillar babies living now?"

"Oh how interesting;" Peggy exclaimed. "Please may we go and see the babies?"

"You can if your Daddy hasn't gotten rid of them," replied Mrs.

"Come and Meet Peggy."

Hawk Moth. She flew towards the back yard, beckoning to Squeedee and Peggy with her long feelers.

She settled on a potato vine just as Squeedee and Peggy caught up with her.

On one of the leaves sat a long caterpillar. His green, gray and yellow suit dotted with black. Down his sides ran bluish stripes.

"Well, son," laughed Mrs. Hawk Moth. "You'd better begin to burrow. It's time you were going to sleep or some one will come along and grab you up."

Mr. Caterpillar tumbled off the leaf and was soon out of sight.

"What does he burrow in the ground for?" Peggy asked. "Will he chew off the roots of the potato plant?"

"Gracious, no," answered Mrs. Hawk Moth. "But when caterpillars get to a certain age they must burrow underground and sleep until they are ready to sprout their wings. Now, when he comes out he'll be a fine looking fellow. If you folks will excuse me now, I'll be on my way. It looks like a shower coming, and I must get my work done before it starts raining." Then away she fluttered in the fast-gathering gloom.

Peggy thanked Squeedee for giving her such a pleasant hour and hurried up to her little bed to dream of the pretty moth and her caterpillar baby.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

MARION DAVIES
Whose beautiful hair enhances her charms

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

COOK STOVE AMONG ARTICLES NEEDED

Other Supplies Also Required By Big Sisterhood For Relief.

A cooking stove may not appear to be a very wonderful part of a household equipment. It is quite likely, if a hundred people were asked to mention the article of furniture which appealed most to them, that a cook stove would not have a chance on earth of appearing in the list. It is one of those useful things that serves an excellent purpose, but occupies an inferior position in the list of attractive portions of the equipment.

But a cook stove would be the very nicest thing that one Peterboro household could look at today. The residents of this home don't hanker for a car, nor for a radio, nor even for a gramaphone. They would like above all else to have a cook stove. Any make would do. They are not particular. And it wouldn't matter if it had a shaky leg or a few dents in its face.

In this house, the family are not "on the city." They are independent so far of help, but it has been a hard job to keep that way. The father has been out of work for some time and ill into the bargain, the mother supports them as well as she can by getting a few days' washing to do in the week, and there are four children. They sold their cook stove some time ago, and have been cooking the meals and keeping warm by the aid of a single-lid small heater. So this is an S.O.S. call for a cook stove. Anyone who has such an article that isn't in use could do a real good deed by putting it into commission in this household.

The Big Sisterhood have other calls on their resources. Their stocks are practically depleted now, and they want underwear for men and for children. Dresses suitable for women who want to go out to work are also urgently required. And stockings are another very special need—not silk stockings or silk hose (some of them with monograms), that come in quantities to the Big Sisters, but real, serviceable stockings that will help to keep the cold from poorly-shod feet that have to tramp long distances through snow and over ice.

Any supplies that would help in this way of making more comfortable some of the untidy, unkempt homes to which the workers go, where sickness and want allow of little attempt at careful living conditions, would be appreciated also.

And trousers for men and boys That is another necessity. Old coats or garments that could be converted into trousers for boys would be welcomed by the Big Sisterhood, who will call for supplies if 788-W is telephoned to, or articles may be left at the Police Station.

The public has been generous indeed in its response to these appeals. The workers are banking on the assumption that there are some attics and clothes closets and boxes still unexplored by their owners, which, if looked into, might furnish supplies urgently needed. The old coat or gown hanging on a nail, the out of style shoes, the stockings that do not harmonize with the costume worn at the moment, are only cluttering up the space they occupy in your home. They might be serving a very useful purpose in another household and helping to increase for their owners that sense of well being that comes with the knowledge of something done in the name of charity.

Professional Nurse Loud In Her Prais

Thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills She Was Relieved of a Weak Back and Rheumatism.

Mrs. E. Emeneau Now Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills to Any of Her Patients Who Suffer with Kidney Trouble.

LUNENBURG, N.S., Feb. 22.—(Special).—"I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly to anyone. I have suffered a great deal with a weak back and rheumatism. I used a lot of doctors' medicines but they did me no good. I could hardly lift a patient alone. I was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills; used a number of boxes and soon got relief. I often thank the good friend who gave me the advice about Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was very much pleased that I did not have to give up my profession of nursing. I am bound to praise them for relieving me and will always recommend them to any of my patients who suffer from the same trouble as I did. I am very thankful to write this testimonial for Dodd's Kidney Pills."

This letter comes from Mrs. Emeneau (nurse) of Lunenburg, N.S., and tells of the benefits to be derived through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

ECLIPSE FASHIONS

Exclusive Patterns by Hazel Cayzer

Cape Ensemble Emphasized

The cape ensemble receives the unqualified approval of the most authoritative fashion houses, and casts a magic influence over the new gowns for women. The feeling for something to wear about the neck and shoulders when the coat has been discarded, has created a demand for capes as part of the costume. The model pictured here is in french-blue flannel. The one-piece frock is made simply, with a narrow tailored collar extending into long revers, beneath which is set a panel of pale grey. The long, tight-fitting sleeves are finished with tailored cuffs, and a wide gypsy girdle is crushed into a buckle. The cape is simple in line, slightly circular, with a seam over each shoulder, and lined with grey. It is tied about the throat with a narrow scarf collar, and is entirely separate from the dress. No. 1299 is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years (or 34, 36 and 38 inches bust only). Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 3⅝ yards 39-inch, or 2¾ yards 54-inch material for the dress, and 1⅝ yards 39-inch, or 1⅛ yards 54-inch additional for cape. The lining for the cape requires 1¼ yards 36-inch material. Price 20 cents.

Our Fashion Book, illustrating the newest and most practical styles, will be of interest to every home dressmaker. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

BYNG UNDECIDED.

Has Not Yet Said If He Will Accept Second Term in Canada.

LONDON, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Baron Byng of Vimy has not yet notified the British Government whether he will accept an invitation, already extended to him, to serve another term as Governor-General of Canada, but it is understood by the Associated Press that in event of his refusal Earl Beatty will be prominent among the candidates.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

BANDAGES.

For home-made bandages, tear old linen into strips two to four inches wide, lap the ends two inches and sew together. Make in lengths from one-half to five yards. Pull away ravelings, roll smoothly and fasten. Then place clean pebbles in the bottom of a glass jar, cover with paper and place bandages inside. Fill the jar with absorbent cotton, and set jar in cold water on stove. Water should reach neck of jar. Bring to a temperature of 180 degrees for at least three hours, then cap jar securely.

FOOT-PAD.

A pad of cloth two feet square and stuffed to one and one-half inches thick, tacked flat, makes an excellent foot-pad on which to stand when ironing or preparing food. It saves the strength and prevents cold feet.

CHUCK AGAIN.

I left Lyme and Rill together and walked on a little farther quite unhappy over Rillie. I saw that she would probably marry Lyman Andrews and be unhappy ever after. My eyes were on the pavement when I heard a voice ask:

"Where are you going Judy?" and I looked up into the face of Chuck Becker.

I laughed. I couldn't help it. Charlie Becker, who had always prided himself on being the screen type, looked so funny with his discolored eye and swollen cheek.

My laugh made him furious, but I couldn't stop, even when I saw he was holding himself in check for fear he would say something nasty. He was almost insane with anger.

"You'd better stop laughing, young lady, and walk along as though you were crazy about me, even with this face. Didn't you know that to-morrow morning the papers will announce our engagement and coming early marriage?"

"No, Chuck. They'll do nothing of the kind. It may make you happier to know that I was more successful with Father than you were. I made my threat that I would not marry you if you were the last person on earth, good."

"I told your father not to tell you I said that, Judy."

"Well, you needn't worry anything about it, Chuck. The moment Father announced what he was going to do, I said immediately I wouldn't marry you under any circumstances and that you had said the same thing didn't bother me at all."

"Don't get mad, Judy. I didn't mean it. At least, I don't mean it now. You ought to know that giving a fellow an eye like mine does not endear a girl to him for the moment. Now, I've come to my senses and I know that I want you. Why, Judy, what have I been playing around with you all summer for if I didn't want you? That's a sure test, isn't it? Why, I never went with any other girl so long in my life! Come on, let's give the old folks a surprise and slip out and get married.

"Why, don't you know, Judy, I never wanted a girl as much as I want you. Come on. Be a sport. Come and marry me to-night!"

I looked up at Charles Becker and again I laughed, and then I grew rather sick, but I kept up my bluff and said:

"I'm afraid you don't understand, Chuck. I told you that I'd made my threat that I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth, good. I've persuaded Dad to let me go to Toronto and try to earn my own living!"

To-morrow: More Understandings.

Menus for the Family

By Sister Mary.

Breakfast—Halves of grape fruit, cereal, thin cream, rice with sausage sauce, graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Beef broth with carrot dumplings, apple sauce, raisin bread, molasses cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—Fricassee of veal, mashed potatoes, buttered brussels sprouts, molded fruit salad, cheese cups, bran bread, milk, coffee.

In this dinner the fruit salad makes a dessert unnecessary. Although the menu is simple the meal is delicious and well balanced.

Rice With Sausage Sauce.

Two cups hot steamed rice, 1 cup tomato soup or 1 cup canned tomatoes rubbed through a strainer and 1-8 teaspoon soda, 1 cup milk, 1 cup chopped cooked sausage, 4 tablespoons grated cheese (optional), 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon butter, salt and pepper.

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk and soup of strained tomatoes with soda. Add sausage and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Drop rice by spoonfuls on to a hot platter, pour over and around sauce. Sprinkle with grated cheese, garnish with sprigs of parsley and serve.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 24.

An interesting day is forecast from the lunar and mutual aspects, the most potent of which is the trine of Saturn to the moon, a figure which should bring release from old congestions and stubborn obstacles. The renewed activities following upon this will have the assistance of the semi-sextile of Jupiter and Mercury, encouraging all commercial pursuits and investments, the financial issues of which may be read as hopeful. The Mars-Venus aspect may bring lively conditions into personal affairs but urges discretion.

Those whose birthday it is may have year of renewed opportunities and activities following a period of obstruction. The financial outlook for business and investment is good, but sign all writings with care. Be discreet in all personal relations. A child born on this day should be active and industrious and attain its ambitions largely through its own steadiness and application. It should be taught to safeguard against trickery and to be cautious in all affairs.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A DASHING GREEN EVENING FROCK.

It is simply a revelation to watch Madame drape a frock on one of the models, or on a client.

To-day I heard her say that she was planning to drape an evening gown on a smart-looking young client, so I asked if I might help out.

"You'll be doing this yourself some day," Madame remarked. "Anyone who is so interested and watches so closely and has such a way with clothes should be able to do it, after being trained a bit."

I glowed from the compliment, but I have my doubts about having a gift such as Madame's. She works so swiftly and with such assurance that it is simply a treat to watch her.

The young and lovely client came in and took off her coat and frock, so that she was attired only in her underthings.

Madame began by pinning two lengths together on the client's shoulders, so that one length fell at the back, the other at the front.

Then she took the scissors and deftly cut out a deep U neckline, deeper in front than at the back.

Next she swooped up a handful of pins and pinned the frock together down the sides, fitting it in close to the body and cutting off the surplus width as she worked.

I watched with amazement while she draped the material softly to one hip, pulled it all together and pinned it securely.

"Will you hand me that length of material, like a dear?" she requested.

I silently handed her a length of the green fabric that was on a chair. She doubled it over, pinned it, and made a trailing sash at the side of the frock. Then she addressed the girl who had been standing spell-bound, watching the frock simply grow upon her.

"This side train is to be held by a big wheel of brilliants," Madame explained. "Now I'll have the seamstress take the dress off for you, pinning it carefully as she does so."

The Pointed Hemline Is a Feature of This Jade Velour Chiffon.

It seems to me that she seamstress' job is almost as difficult as Madame's, for she removes the pinned-up garment and sews it where the pins ahve been.

Then Madame superintends another fitting, and the deed is done.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

No. 19—THE ELEVATOR TO CHINA.

"No, sir, you can't get past," snapped the big bat that blocked the road, so that Nancy and Nick could not get past. "Not until you get me a bushel of Chinese dragonflies, and a bushel of fuzzy caterpillars with their hair cut. I must lay in my winter supplies."

At this Jupe, the kangaroo, looked at the Twins and the Twins looked at Jupe, and Hickydoo, the wooden man, looked at everybody. Nobody knew what to do. There was the enormous bat stretched across the road and there wasn't any more chance of getting past him than there is of me having six kinds of ice-cream for dinner. (I know very well we're going to have rice pudding.)

Even Paddyfoot, the mouse, riding in Jupe's pocket, didn't know what to do.

But after all, it was Paddyfoot who had the first idea.

"Say," he said. "Hickydoo is supposed to know everything. Why don't we look in his index and see what it says about Jersey mosquitoes and Chinese dragon-flies and fuzzy caterpillars."

"That's a very good idea, indeed," said Hickydoo. "Press my second button, Nick, and when the drawer springs out, find the 'B's' and then look for 'bugs.' That tells everything."

"I don't care where you look," said the big blue bat crossly. "But be careful you don't look for 'wasps.' If I get my nose stung again, I shan't answer for what may happen."

Nick pressed the second button in Hickydoo's wooden jacket and out slid a drawer with several bundles of papers in it.

Nick took out a bundle marked 'B' and looked for 'Bugs.' "Here it is," he cried. "It tells all about everything. Jersey mosquitoes live in New Jersey, Chinese dragon-flies live in China, and fuzzy caterpillars live in orchards."

"How can we go to China if you won't let us past?" asked Jupe.

"You can go around the other way," said the bat. "The world's round, and China is on the other side. And you can stop in New Jersey coming back."

"Very well," said Hickydoo stiffly. "That's what we'll do. What color of dragon-flies do you prefer?"

"Bottle green," said the bat shortly.

At the mention of the word "bottle" both Nancy and Nick remembered their errand. "Oh dear! At this rate we'll never get the Blue Cherry," said Nancy. "And poor Twinkle Pen, the fairy! No doubt he is still writing his silly poem about the blue bottle flies on the wall. We'll just have to hurry."

"Wouldn't potato-bugs do?" asked Jupe. "I know where there are lovely fat ones with several colors of stripes."

"No," said the bat.

"Or boll-weevils?" asked Hickydoo. "They're grown south and it isn't so far."

"No," said the bat.

"Or flies?" asked Nancy. "I know where there are ——"

"Now look here," said the bat. "The first thing you know, you'll be playing another trick on me. I've said my last say. So be gone!"

There was nothing else for it. Nancy and Jupe got on one motorcycle and Nick and Hickydoo got on the other motorcycle and away they started in the direction from which they had come.

But they hadn't gone more than a mile when the motorcycle on which Jupe and Nancy were riding had a blowout. And everybody stopped.

Jupe and Hickydoo were looking to see how they could fix it, when suddenly Nick called out, "What do you know about that?" And he pointed to a sign which said, "Elevator to China. Step in."

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

News High Spots.

"Women are always a little in love, and since love is rather a noisy thing, it obstructs scientific observation." So wrote W. L. George, novelist, known as "The Man Who Understands Women," who died recently.

It is interesting to note that before he died, the writer, who had spent years surveying woman like an insect stuck on the point of a pin, decided that "the mystery of woman has been overemphasized."

Absolutely! And positively! Perhaps the bunkiest bunk ever created was this tradition about the "woman's viewpoint."

A mere male just stopped at my desk a moment to discuss woman and business. He said, said he, thusly: "Women in offices assume too much privilege because they are women!"

How about it, girls? Is he right?

"House cat!" seems to be the epithet most frequently hurled nowadays by the sisterhood which works out in the great open spaces at the sisterhood which keeps the home fires burning.

It is significant to read that the most photographed cat in the world recently died and was joined to his (her?) fathers after living to the ripe old age of 25 years.

The cat attained this senile majority because she had ever been "a house cat" and had not strayed into fields afar amousing.

It is interesting to note the number of women who toll outside the home who are willing to become "house cats" with the slightest encouragement.

We will now end the morning's lesson, by joining in the chorus of "Me-ow!"

"Us Girls'" Wardrobe.

Smocks are sweeping offices. The girl friend who writes advertising copy told me that ten minutes after her morning's ad about "a choice consignment" of smocks appeared, three business firms called for several dozen each in assorted shapes and sizes.

O tempora! O mores! In days of yore the playwright's idea of sheer deviltry was to picture a haunt wherein smock-garbed females congregated!

Seriously, the smock fad is a gorgeous one. We have seen nothing prettier than a certain restaurant with all the waitresses clad in orange and rose and blue and jade green smocks.

Besides, the cost is so low. One dollar - twenty - nine - all - sizes - Tuesday! Avaunt ye, bungalo aprons!

The natty and age-killing bramley dress continues in spring fabrics of kashmir and silk crepe. Length, one inch minus 'neath the knee cap!

Taffeta is the spring bell-ringer fabric for dressy year. Bouffant deb evening frocks in pastel and passionate shades street taffeta frocks of black, and other sober hues and plaid taffetas for sport frocks. And print taffetas galore, of course!

Have You Read Yet?

Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy" Anita Loos' "Men Prefer Blondes" O'Brien's "Best Short Stories of 1925" "Thunder on the Left" by Christopher Morley.

In more serious vein, and especially interesting for the club woman, are: "Mothers and Daughters," by Jessica Cosgrave, and "Mothers in Industry," by Gwendolyn S. Hughes. The former is an interesting and sensible book of advice to mothers of daughters.

The latter book tells what happens to mothers and homes when the mother must work for gainful hire, and tries to decide whether industry itself is much benefited by the working mother.

"The Skin-Deep Stuff."

Hair remains a woman's crowning glory even if there is less of it these days, and oily and dry heads are still a bete noir. For oily hair, rub the following into the scalp every night: witch hazel, 2 ounces alcohol, 2 ounces distilled water, 1 ounce resorcin, 40 grains. For too dry hair, try this tonic: equal parts of bay rum, glycerine, alcohol, applied daily.

HEDDA HOYT TALKS ABOUT THE THINGS THAT INTEREST THE BUSY WOMAN OF 1926.

SPRING HATS

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (United Press).—Flexible hats for hard heads—that is what the milliners are contending. They claim that women want little head-fitting shapes that sell around $5 and that they are hard-headly stubborn on the subject.

Large hats with wide brims were recently introduced in Paris but whether American women will accept them remains to be seen. Seventy-five per cent. of American women are bobbed haired. At least the millinery manufacturers figure it this way by making seventy-five per cent of the hats for bobbed heads.

As we all know, large shapes demand larger crowns and larger crowns demand more hair. One can't run a seam up the rear of a large shape without ruining the effect of the hat although this can be done with the small felt.

We are getting away from untrimmed felts. There is too much of a sameness to them and we shall soon see them worn for sports only. Felts this coming season must be trimmed with handwork or contrasting color ornamentation to be smart. Fabric, felt, straw and their combinations will all be popular as Spring advances. And shapes undoubtedly will be small and flexible. The Beret tam shapes will be among the prominent shapes.

Almost anyone can wear a small hat if care is taken in it's selection. The girl with the up-tilted nose should avoid an abruptly up-turned brim. A slightly drooping brim will be much more becoming to her. A broad-faced woman can wear a higher crown than the average for it increases the length of the face. She should never wear a brimless model but should wear a medium drooping brim which casts a shadow over the upper part of her face. The person with a wide mouth should not wear a straight brim which increases the appearance of the width of the mouth. Broad jaws demand rounded crowns and not square ones. Receding chins demand large brims. When the lower part of the face is better shaped than the upper, one should choose hats which come well over the forehead and cast a shadow over the upper face. Such a hat calls attention to the lower part of the face and brings out the nose and chin.

REPORTS DENIED.

Blackhanders Cause Postponement of Concert in Detroit.

PEKING, Feb. 23. — (United Press.)—Reports of the assassination of General Wu Pei Fu were generally denied to-day.

In this connection it was pointed out that an organization was being formed under General Feng Yu Hsiang to drive against Wu, who has been bombarding Sin Yang recently, catching a group of Americans outside the city wall. They were brought to safety.

The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin.
—Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute.
—Milton.

E. M. O.—Although your natural tendency to care of others has led you to assume the occupation you now follow, and it is suitable to you, you would succeed almost as well in any other line, as you are the type that has much executive ability and a frank, progressive nature. You have unusual understanding and sympathy with others, marred at times by a certain impatience with their inability to keep up with your individual ways of doing things. You will find at present, at least, that a cultivation of self-control and patience, with a suppression of worry, will be of great benefit to you, although you may be irked by the necessity very often during the daily round. You will do well in an executive position of trust and responsibility, if you do not break down with nervous prostration through your hurrying tendencies. You like to be busy and to mind your own affairs. You should have a talent for music. Follow your own inspirations and you will be successful. Cultivate calmness and repose. Marry a man born in April, August or November. Worry, jealousy and anger will be pitfalls at times for your feet.

You were born on Thursday. Your colors are orange and heliotrope. The day enquired for, a Friday, is one on which to exert personal freedom and individuality.

D. M.—You are one of those fortunate individuals whose stars point in one direction only, with little conflict. By nature you were formed for the care of others. Domesticity is your forte, and you will make an admirable wife and mother. Your present occupation is also suited splendidly to your natural bent. With the duties of your work, you will blend a certain amount of real liking for those in your care, giving them the touch of personal-interest service that helps so much. Do not, however, allow your tendency to worry to develop too much, and that restlessness in your nature will be helped later by travel and change of environment. Do not be timid and sensitive and strive for self-esteem. When you feel like going off somewhere to have a good cry, conquer the feeling, and you will be surprised to see what reserves of strength you will call up in this way. Do not ask unnecessary questions. They are irritating. You have much artistic perception and are interested in religious and educational matters. Marry a man born in July, September, or October, and try to keep house well for him. You will not like housekeeping but will need to, to fulfill your destiny as a home-maker.

You were born on Wednesday. Your colors are orange and grey. The day you ask about, a Tuesday, is one on which to avoid arguments. Do not marry on this day.

A. McI.—You have a nice personality, but just a little hard to get along with at times. You are fearless and kind, and always ready to assume the burdens of others, sometimes to your own detriment. You like to be at the head of things and are inclined to domineer a bit. Other people's opinions do not appeal to you as being nearly as sensible as your own. You have an excellent memory and are a good entertainer and live a great deal in the physical side of life. You have been an expert embroiderer in your time. Your destiny, as mapped out for you, was to bring joy and happiness to the lives of others? Have you always followed out this plan?

You were born on Monday, as you state. Your color is flame.

J. L. M.—The questions you ask are in keeping with your type, which is always dissatisfied and nervous, forever wishing to have done the thing they have not done, and to be up and away at something else, they know not what. There is a certain amount of conflict too in your dominant influences. Naturally, you were formed for a career connected with science or business, in which you would attain much, but your destiny makes it imperative that you do not try to stand alone and that you associate yourself carefully with others in any enterprise you undertake. You should have a partner who would be able to give you expert advice.

You have one bad habit, that of whining and scolding, which is particularly noticeable when you are ill. When your better nature rules, you are a tremendous power for good. Birds and animals are easily attracted to you. Stick to your present occupation, but seek the advice of an experienced man about the purchase you are contemplating.

You were born on Friday. Your colors are tan and buff.

V. E. P.—You have a very fine nature, peace-loving, even-tempered and kind, with a desire to bring joy to others that will also make for happiness and joy in your own life. You are fastidious about your dress, and crave for the latest thing in fashion. You are a good scholar and musician, if you cultivate the latter talent. You are secretive about your own affairs and those of your friends. Having so many good qualities, you are inclined at times to be a little critical of a lack of them in others. Do not adopt a "holier than thou" attitude. You are strong and will live to a good old age, seeming to grow younger with years, that is, if you watch a habit of excessive eating and drinking.

Cultivate individuality, self-reliance and avoid criticism. By making others happy, you will gain happiness for yourself. Do not forget this.

You were born on Friday. Your colors are gold and white. The day you ask about, a Thursday, is one for quiet meditation and self-communion. Do not strive for accomplishment and do not worry on this day.

Suffered with rheumatism for years

GOT RELIEF FROM RHEUMATISM AT LAST

Spent more than $100 for remedies before help was found

How an obstinate case of rheumatism was given relief by a simple home treatment is told by a man in Los Angeles, California, who suffered for years with rheumatic pain in the feet and back.

"I spent more than $100 for liniments and medicines in twenty-four years," he writes. "Then I used Sloan's Liniment and it gave me complete relief."

And it is amazing—the quick, genuine comfort that Sloan's gives to even the most long-standing rheumatic aches. Sloan's doesn't just deaden pain—it helps your body to throw off the cause.

No need to rub even. A little Sloan's patted lightly on—and a healing tide of fresh, germ-destroying blood begins tingling through the aching place. Before you can believe it, the pain, swelling and stiffness are relieved. Try it! All druggists—35 cents.

FINAL GAMES OF CITY LEAGUE PROVE INTERESTING CONTESTS BUT FAIL TO CHANGE STANDING

St. Andrew's and St. Peter's Retain Lead in Junior Series.

WILL PLAY OFF

Brintons and De Lavals Meet in Play-offs for Senior Championship.

(By C.J.B.)

The playoffs in the Peterborough City Hockey League will be between St. Andrew's and St. Peter's in the junior series and between Brintons and DeLaval in the senior series.

Before last night's games St. Andrew's and Brintons were safe while the worst that could befall the DeLavals would be a tie for second place with the Crescents, but the second place in the junior series was within reach of three teams.

In the first game St. Andrew's defeated Raybestos, ruining their chances of getting into the playoff. In the second game St. Peter's and St. James', only a point apart, fought a strenuous battle which finally went to the Cathedral crew by the odd goal, giving them the place in the playoff.

Crescents had their forlorn hope of pulling up even with DeLavals wrecked when Raybestos seniors scored their first win of the season, and then the DeLaval crew tied up the series by beating the Brintons by the only goal of the game. This was the Brinton crew's first defeat of the season. In the senior games Bert McLeod officiated as referee and kept them well in hand.

The final standing of the junior series is:

	W.	L.	T.	F.	A.	Pts.
St. Andrew's	4	1	1	22	8	9
St. Peter's	3	2	1	8	9	7
St. James'	1	3	2	12	16	4
Raybestos	1	3	2	12	19	4

The final standing of the senior series is:

Brintons	3	1	2	14	8	8
DeLaval	4	2	0	14	11	8
Crescents	2	4	0	10	14	4
Raybestos	1	3	2	12	17	4

The playoffs for the Brown cup for the seniors and the Hobberlin cup for the juniors are expected to start on Wednesday of this week, when two fast games can be expected.

St. Andrew's 6; Raybestos 1

There was never any doubt of the outcome of the first game, which the Saints won without any trouble, piling up a lead of five goals in the first period without a reply from their opponents and taking things easy for the second with scores even. During most of the game Chambers carried the whole burden for the losers, while Graham and Corkery flashed at times. Every member of the winning team starred, and their combination was good, although most of their goals were on individual efforts.

The winners started off right and Hall scored the first on a neat piece of combination. Sowden got the next when one of the Raybestos defence men deflected a long shot into the net. Marshall went in close for his and then Robertson scored on another deflected shot. Robertson finished the scoring for this period.

The winners' centre player lost his bearings in the beginning of the second period and almost beat Gillespie with a long shot was entirely unexpected. Nixon and Graham then scored for their respective teams. Penalties were rather frequent in this period. The teams:

St. Andrew's—Goal, Gillespie; defence, Allen and Marshall; centre, Hall; wings, Sowden and Nixon; Mowry, Jennings, Roberts and Robertson.

Raybestos—Goal, Golden; defence, Swanzer and Corkery; centre, Starr; wings, Graham and Chambers; subs, Carroll, Hatton, White and Williams.

Referee—Fred Thirnbeck.

Penalties: Sowden, Marshal, Allen and Hall; Corkery 2, Starr, Swangar and Graham.

ST. PETER'S, 2; ST. JAMES', 1.

Three goals in a row in the middle of the second period comprised the total scoring of the second junior game but Lew LeBarr's team had the odd goal and the game fight of the south end boys was in vain.

Both teams were short handed. St. James' boys had no subs at all while the winners had only one. The winners had much more of the play but their poor shooting nearly lost them the game in the first period. The losers didn't have as many shots on goal in the first half but their shooting was more accurate, and Mein had a busy time in the nets. At the other end Payne put up a good game, being beaten by two hard shots. Heal, Cripps and Austin led the attack for the losers, with Heal's persistent checking of great service in turning back the invaders. LeBarr and Jones were best for the winners.

The three goals were all scored in the second period within the space of about two minutes. LeBarr opened for the winners with a hard drive from the blue line. Austin came right back and beat Mein on a rebound. Jones scored the winning goal in less than half a minute from a melee in front of the net. Jones, Wolfe and Archambault drew the three penalties of the game.

St. Peter's: Goal, Mein; defence, LeBarr and Richea; central, Kennedy; wings, Jones and Archambault; sub, Wolfe.

St. James': Goal, Payne; defence, Austin and Kitchen; centre, Heal; wings, Cripps and Seabrooke.

Referee: Thirnbeck.

RAYBESTOS, 4; CRESCENTS, 1

The first win of the season for Raybestos seniors spoiled the last chance of the Crescents getting into the play off. The losers were without the services of Hall, and Richea proved that as a goal minder he is a good defence man, although he tried hard in the unaccustomed position.

The game was exciting and the winners weren't three goals better, although they did have a certain edge, especially in their shooting. They gave Richea plenty of shots to turn aside. LeGros in the opposite nets, was good. The losers' defence was not as effective as their opponents while the forward lines were about evenly divided. Chambers who had starred for the Raybestos juniors in the opening game of the evening was very much in evidence in this game, his sweeping check being most effective. The stick handling of Mahood was also a feature.

Chambers scored the only goal the first period on a cross shot from the left boards which caught Richea cold at the wrong side of the net. Thornton went around the defence to score the first goal of the second period, and Batten followed quickly with another. Coursey went through the defence and caught his foot on McDonough's skate, spinning around, but retaining his balance enough to backhand one past Richea. Holland ended the scoring with the losers' only goal, beating Legros from close in. The game was clean, with Milloy drawing the only penalty.

Crescents: Goal, Richea, defence, Holland and McDonough; centre, Jones, wings, Maudsley and Milloy; subs., Mahood and Collins.

Raybestos: Goal LeGros, defence, Thornton and Coursey; centre, Batten; wings, A. Williams and Gillespie; subs., G. Williams and Chambers.

Referee, Bert McLeod.

DeLAVAL, 1; BRINTONS', 0.

When Eddie Williams skated away from the Brinton forwards and around the defence to go right in on LeBarr for a goal with two minutes to play he enabled the DeLaval to chalk up the first defeat for the Brintons and to come up even with the carpetmen in first place in the standing. The only goal of the game was scored on a lone rush on which the little centre man displayed some good stickhandling and skating.

The game was the fastest of the night. From one blue line to the other the play was carried on in spectacular rushes of one ,two or three men. Occasionally these forays would cross into the defence territory and give the goalers a few active moments. Both goals had many narrow escapes during these skirmishes, the DeLaval citadel being more fiercely attacked. Both teams checked back hard and combination rushes were usually broken up when a persistent b k checker spoiled a pass. The winners displayed better checking but lacked a little of the shooting ability of the losers, so that things were about even.

With play so fast and checking so close, a few illegal actions crept in but Bert McLeod had the play well covered and spent an active few minutes during the first half waving the delinquents to the timers. Very few offsides got away from the big defence man, who turned in a fine exhibition of refereeing.

Jimmy McMartin was missing from the line up. The veteran contented himself with coaching from the penalty box, with Carl Wood pairing with Lackey on the defence.

The teams:

Brintons': Goal, LeBarr; defence, Lackey and Wood; centre, Rose; wings, King and Cripps; subs., D. White and W. White.

DeLaval: Goal, Ward; defence, Marchen and Evans; centre, Williams; wings, Dundas and McDougall; subs., Smith, Ashmore, and Kingdon.

Referee, Bert McLeod.

Penalties: King 2, Wood 2, Rose, Marchen, McDougall and Williams.

P.C.I. JUNIORS WIN

Lakefield Was on Short End of 11-6 Story on Saturday.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 23—Lakefield juniors lost out in a high-scoring game of hockey with Peterborough Collegiate Institute on Saturday afternoon. The score was 11-6. The teams were:

EDDIE PLANK ILL.

Said To Have Suffered a Paralytic Stroke.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Eddie Plank, for many years before his retirement star pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics is seriously ill at his home here.

No information concerning his illness could be obtained at the Plank home or from his physician, but friends of the family said he had suffered a paralytic stroke, which had affected his left side.

A LEAF RECRUIT.

Orville Earl Elliott, who has a record almost as long as himself and he is some long. He is one of the young pitchers secured last fall by Dan Howley for the Toronto Leafs. Elliott is 6.3 1-2 and is credited with possessing the longest reach of any twirler in the minors.

COLTS WON CUP

Default of Warsaw Team Gives Them Casement Trophy.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 23.—Warsaw defaulted their game with the Colts in the Lakefield District League which means that the Colts with 4 victories and no defeats, are again winners of the Casement Cup, as champions of Lakefield and district. Mr. W. H. Casement, donor of the cup, is deeply interested in local sport and by putting up this handsome trophy has done a great deal to encourage interest in hockey.

WARKWORTH GIRLS DIM FORMER STARS

Defeated Fast Campbellford Team on Own Ice.

WARKWORTH, Feb. 22 — Continuing their winning performances on Friday night in Campbellford the local ladies' hockey team won from the Campbellford ladies by a score of 2-0 and had it not been for the splendid work of Miss Potts in goal for Campbellford the score would have been much heavier in Warkworth's favour.

The game was fast throughout and the spectacular playing two years ago of Grace Blue in centre for Campbellford failed to materialize in this game as she was closely checked by Jennie Boyce who played the best game on the ice. To win against this team of stars two years ago every one of the local team had to play well and they did. Evelyn Irwin and Harriett Potts deserve special mention for Campbellford. No doubt the lack of the guiding hand of their veteran manager, Charles Davidson, contributed somewhat to their defeat.

The return game will be played here at the arena on Friday night next and it will be the best game of the season.

Line-up:

Campbellford — Goal, Harriott Potts; defence, Eleanor Ferris and Bertha Blue; centre, Grace Blue; wings, Evelyn Irwin and Verna Shore; subs, F. Irwin, D. Linton.

Warkworth—Goal, Nellie Greenly; defence, Jennie Boyce and Mary Somers; centre, Mildred Copperthwaite; wings, Mable Campbell and Pearl Drury; subs, Dorothy Wilson and Verna Thompson.

WILLIE RITOLA LOWERS RECORD

Clipped 7 Seconds Off Own Mark for 5,000 Yards.

INDOOR CONTESTS

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Two world's indoor records were shattered Monday in the track and field games held under the auspices of the 245th Coast Artillery in the 13th Regiment Armory while the Brooklyn-Queen's marathon was in progress.

Willie Ritola Finnish American "iron man," tumbled the first record when he conceded big handicaps to a score of rivals in a 5,000-yard race and passed them all to break the tape in 13 minutes, 32 seconds. This was seven seconds faster than the former standard for the distance, set by Ritola himself at St. Paul, Minn., last year.

Alan Helffrich shared record-breaking honors with the sturdy Finn by toppling the 600 metre mark which Vincent Lally of New York had set less than a week ago. Helffrich, former Penn. State flier now sporting the colors of the New York A.C., spurted to the front at the gun and set the pace all the way, beating off a challenge by Lally, to win by ten yards in 1 minute 22 2-5 seconds.

HAVELOCK LOST IN SECOND GAME

SCORE ON ROUND 14-4.

OSHAWA Feb. 23 (Special to The Examiner).—Havelock and Oshawa clashed in the second game of the third round of the O.H.A. Intermediate play downs. Oshawa won from the Railroaders in the first game played in Peterboro last Friday by 7 goals to 1, and repeated here at Bradley's Arena here yesterday by 7 goals to 3, and annexed the round with a total of 14 to 4.

With a lead of six goals going into last night's game and the championship of the East practically cinched, a standing room only crowd was packed into the local rink long before Referee D. A. Lowry of Toronto blew his whistle for the play to begin, as the general impression locally was that the Havelockers would give the locals stiffer opposition on the small ice surface here than on the larger at Peterboro; as being a heavier team all around, by using their weight they would slow up the Lett clan, who have hardly recovered from the sea legging trips of last week and in the first period were sent out under blankets to work easy as another game is likely to be scheduled for Friday evening. The Easterners showed lack of the finer points of the game and were a disappointment and never scored until the final period which from a spectator's view were gifts and the surprise is how they got by Wise Cracker's Peterboro Intermediate puck chasers in the district play-off.

The first period opened with Oshawa working in close only to have their shots blocked by Hooper who replaced Davidson in goal for Havelock, but in an effort to grab the disc at centre ice worked past Brennan and Quinn and by a well-placed shot raised the goal umpire's hand. In the second period, Oshawa put the game away by outscoring the Havelockers 3 to 0. Houck getting the first on a pass from Lott after working past the defence. Stevens notched the second when Houck slipped the puck from out behind the nets and Stevens whipped it into the nets. Throughout the first two periods the visitors shot from well out from the nets and missed opportunities by failing to fass the puck.

In the final period each team scored three, Wright getting all for Havelock on lone rushes, while Lowe got Oshawa's first and second and Rowden the third on the best hockey of the evening. The teams were:

Havelock—Goal, Hooper; defence D. Brennan and B. Quinn; centre, Jack; forward wings, Wright and C. Brennan; subs, Lang and Armstrong.

Referee—D. A. Lowry, Toronto.

With the win here last night, Oshawa not only won the Intermediate O.H.A. honor east of Toronto, but established a local hockey record with 14 consecutive wins to their credit. Losing their first two games, one away and one at home, in the double schedule which included Cobourg Port Hope and Bowmanville, the Oshawa crew had to win ten straight games before they were declared champions of Section C of Group No. 1 and with Belleville capturing the honors in Section B only to lose out in the play off with Cornwall who drew the bye in Section A, Oshawa were drawn against the extreme Eastern city in the O.H.A., and by taking both ends of home and home games, made their record 12 and by winning the two games in the second round, play-offs from Havelock, made their total 14. Oshawa scored 58 goals to their opponents 29 in their local group; 6 goals to 1 in the play-off with Cornwall, and 14 to 4 against Havelock which makes their grand total to date 78 to their opponents' 34.

BRUINS WIN AGAIN.

Defeat St. Pats For Ninth Win in Ten Starts—In Third Place.

BOSTON, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Boston Bruins consolidated their position in third place of the National Hockey League standing when they defeated St. Patrick's here last night in a game that went to overtime play. The score was 2 to 1.

It was the ninth victory for the Bruins in ten starts, the other result being a tie.

SCHAEFER WINS FIRST.

Defeats Willie Hoppe in Chicago Series.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Jake Schaefer yesterday defeated Willie Hoppe veteran champion, in the division, in the first round of their three-day exhibition match at 18.1 balkline billiards. Trailing through most of the 14 innings played, the present 18.2 titleholder rolled out the 250 point block with 100 when Hoppe had a total of 231.

The 1,500 point match is to condition Hoppe for his forthcoming match with Edouard Horemans Belgian, for the 18.1 world's championship.

STIRLING WINS PLAY-OFF PLACE

Beat Marmora 2-0 in Replay of Tie Game From Early in Season.

PLAY VERY ROUGH.

MARMORA, Feb. 23—Marmora journeyed to Stirling last night to replay the tie game which occurred in the early part of the season. They went down to defeat to the red and whites by the score of 2-0. Great delay was occasioned by non arrival of the appointed referee. Tom Beatty, President of the League, handled the game in his absence. The ice was in most perfect condition.

Play opened fast with little combination. Stirling scored within seven minutes. Whitty, beating Neal on the third rebound of a pass from Bond just previous to this. Hulin was tested several times but proved invincible. Brady in shooting wide missed a possible goal. Combination between Bond and Jack failed to materialize.

In the second period play developed into the roughest seen in the new league this season. Bond missed a couple of nice chances, Players of both teams suddenly engaged in a melee, a large section of the crowd coming on the ice. The referee finally disposed of the crowd and got both teams going again after administering caution. Despite this, penalties occurred with frequency for the remainder of the game. The period closed with Stirling still leading 1-0.

Play was excessively fast in the third period permitting little combination on either side. Both goalies were called upon to save over and over again long individual shots but playing great hockey kept the score down until in the last five minutes of the game. Wallace scored a second goal for his side giving them the clear win as aforementioned. It was regretted that the last game between these teams should develop into the character it did when so large a crowd again assembled in the hopes of witnessing a clean encounter. Marmora through losing yielded Stirling the privilege of playing Tweed in the play off for the Hastings County League championship. Brady who deputized for Berry played a sterling game for the losers, deserving a goal with the many good shots which he put in.

The line-up:

Stirling		Marmora
W. Hulin	goal	C. Neal
W. J. Whitty	r. def.	R. Jack
W. Tulloch	l. def.	M. Auger
J. Ackers	centre	J. A. Bond
E. Wallace	r. wing	C. Brady
H. Ackers	l. wing	G. McWill
H. Ingram	subs	C. Jones
M. McGee		R. Neal

Goal umpires—H. Conley and G. Clairmont.

Referee—T. Beatty of Tweed.

'HEARTS' LACKED CELTIC'S CRAFT

Edinburgh's Hopes Blasted in Scottish Cup Round Saturday.

TIE AT ABERDEEN.

GLASGOW, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press).—The third round of the Scottish Football Association Cup on Saturday saw the elimination of all the second division teams, with the exception of Dunbarton and Third Lanark. It also saw the blasting of the hopes of Edinburgh when Heart of Midlothian went down hard before Celtic at Tynecastle Park. The survivors were Dunbarton, Third Lanark, Rangers, Morton, Airdrieontans, Celtic and Paisley St. Mirren. One game was drawn, that at Aberdeen when St. Johnstone held the Aberdonians to a 2-2 count.

Record Crowds.

Record crowds attended the games at Falkirk and Edinburgh. The Rangers, who have not been playing up to the mark this season in league football, rose to the occasion Saturday when they trounced "The Bairns" by goals which were acquired by Mackay and Cunningham. The Glasgow club had a comfortable win.

Celtic were expected to have a hard time at Edinburgh against the Hearts, but the Tynecastle team lacked the craft of their opponents. The never-failing McGrory obtained two of Celtic's goals, with McInally and Connelly running it up to the quartette. McInally was the best all-round man on the field, giving an inspired display.

The game at Aberdeen was thrilling in the extreme, and the Perthshire club, St. Johnston, were somewhat lucky in gaining a replay. Munro scored twice for the Saints and Hutton and Pirie for Aberdeen.

Rough at Paisley.

The spectators at Paisley were treated to a somewhat rough contest and O'Hare of Partick was one of the victims. O'Hare had to be carried off the field. Nowieson and Morgan scored for St. Mirren and Gibson for Partick.

Of Airdrie's five goals scored against Bathgate, Somerville secured four and Anderson one. Scouller and Weir responded with one each for the second division team.

Dunbarton's win over Clyde was of the sensational variety, but Third Lanark easily outclassed Brechin City, as they were expected to do.

CECIL LEITCH—PLAYING THE IRONS

Beginners must never try to use a full swing when playing an iron. This is most important, as should they do so they will be almost certain to overswing. Something between the perpendicular and horizontal will be found sufficient.

In iron club play the ball is hit just before the club-head reaches the point at the bottom of the circle it describes.

This means that a full follow-through will be impossible, and that, instead, the club-head will take a pivot just in front of where the ball lay.

In order to achieve this result the weight must be chiefly on the left leg, the stance must be firm, the club must be gripped very firmly with both hands, the backward swing must be well controlled and not too full, and the body must be slightly in advance of the club-head on the downward swing.

Throughout the stroke the left arm should be as straight as possible. The whole shot is a hit rather than a sweep.

In golf, as in everything else, a very little makes a great difference.

THREE SECONDS ARE IMPORTANT IN HOCKEY GAME

Petes Tied Up First Game in Kitchener Just Before Time.

BAILEY'S GREAT GOAL.

Made Great Difference in Race For Group Championship.

By F. D. C.

Local fans reading the report of last Friday's hockey game in Kitchener doubtless smiled when they read of the Kitchener timekeeper insisting that three seconds remained to be played, while the Peterboro official claimed that time was up.

Three seconds, they thought, was such a tiny interval as to be not worth arguing about.

And yet the margin between the Petes, triumphantly waiting for the group play-offs and the same Petes dolefully hanging up their sticks for the season, was exactly three seconds.

To understand that somewhat cryptic statement it is necessary to hark back to the beginning of the season, to the first game of the group when Peterboro visited Kitchener on December 30th.

Fans will remember that Kitchener took command of the game early, rode triumphantly out in front for most of the journey, and with 12 minutes to go were leading 5 goals to 2.

Then the Petes came out of their trance and started a drive for victory that quickly got them two goals, the second coming with five minutes to play.

The third counter needed for a tie, however, seemed impossible to secure. The minutes passed quickly, far too quickly for the little colerie of Peterboro fans in the penalty box. Four minutes to go, three minutes, two minutes, one minute and yet the Dutchmen led by one goal, and their resistance had had tightened and the impetus of the Petes' drive had begun to slacken.

More than half of the last minute had gone—the Kitchener forwards were strung across the rink outside of their own blue line, back of them were Karges and Hinsperger, and still further back little Klem crouched in his cage—only a miracle could snatch victory from the Dutchmen.

And then Irvin Bailey, the Petes' captain, grabbed the rubber at centre and started back for his own end of the rink to circle the net and get up speed for one of his lightning thrusts.

He was near the penalty box and Babe Bogardis, not in uniform that night but closely scanning the timer's watch, shouted, "Only 25 seconds to go."

Bailey heard the warning, turned quickly and dashed for the Kitchener net, swinging into centre to beat the forwards. The Kitchener defence swung him over toward the left boards, and when he reached the corner there was only ten seconds left. The last Peterboro chance had gone it seemed. But Bailey worked out of the corner and skated across the end of the rink. He was half way to the net before his plan was realized. Then a Kitchener stick hurtled along the ice, knocked the puck away from him, only to have it rebound in front of the Petes' captain, who picked it up again and dashed behind the net.

Five seconds to go then, the timer's hand on the bell rope, four seconds as Bailey swung around, and then a quick movement of the stick to flick the rubber into the net, the red light that signalled a goal, a tied score—and only three seconds to spare.

Had that thrown stick knocked the puck another foot away, had Referee Hewitson stopped the play for the offence, had the Kitchener timer pulled the rope a few seconds too soon, that game would have been a Kitchener triumph, and as the group race developed the Petes would have been out of the running.

Three seconds in time makes little difference sometimes, but that was one case when the whole championship race would have been altered if there hadn't been that small fraction of time to spare.

MANIAC SNIPER HAS BEEN FOUND

Frank Carter, of Ackley, Iowa, Confesses Killings in Omaha.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Frank Carter of Ackley, Iowa, captured at Bartlett, Iowa, 35 miles south-east of here, yesterday, admitted that he is the "maniac sniper" who has been terrorizing Omaha for a week. The authorities said he confessed two slayings and one possible fatal shooting. He carried a .22 calibre automatic pistol.

Carter said the motive for the slayings was robbery.

MILLER TURNS PRO.

TORONTO, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Joe Miller, star backfield player of the Ottawa Canadian champions, who has been playing hockey for the St. Paul team of the U.S. central loop, has turned professional to play with Tommy Gorman's New York Americans. Miller is an outstanding goal keeper, and starred in hockey for several years before joining the Pittsburgh Hornets last season.

ANOTHER TROPHY FOR HELEN WILLS

Won Mixed Doubles Finals With English Player.

BEAULIEU, France, Feb. 23 Miss Helen Wills of California, added another cup Monday to her collection, the second in two days and the seventh since she began play on the Riviera tennis courts.

She and Charles S. Kingsley of England, defeated Miss Eileen Bennet of England, and H. M. B. Fisher of New Zealand in the finals of the mixed doubles, 6-4, 6-3. A short time previously Miss Wills and her partner defeated Mrs. Satterthwaite of England and Bela Von Kehrling of Hungary, 6-0, 6-2.

The United States champion then went to Monte Carlo ready to play the first round of the singles in the tournament which opened there yesterday, but was informed that her opponent, Miss Molla Westselaar of Denmark had scratched.

Mlle. Lenglen sent word that she would play for the Beaumont Cup on Saturday in the women's doubles with Mlle. Vlasto. She left for a mountain resort last evening, reiterating that she was through with tennis singles until June. Those close to the Nice tennis club, however, feel that a few days' rest may cause Suzanne to change her mind, and all hopes are not lost of witnessing another duel between her and Miss Wills at Nice, where the tourney begins March 7. Suzanne herself said before leaving:

"I may get over this spell of nervousness quicker than you think."

There are two United States pairs playing for the Butler trophy in the men's doubles—Allister McCormick of Chicago and J. H. Van Alen of New York a former Cambridge student, and F. R. Sacovil of Brooklyn and J. R. Tunis of Boston.

FRENCH TENNIS TRIUMPH IN U.S.

Rene Lacoste Defeated Jean Borotra for Indoor Title.

FOR SECOND YEAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).— Rene Lacoste, of France, yesterday became the 1926 indoor singles champion by a triumph over his countryman, Jean Borotra, in a sparkling four-set struggle which brought together two foreign stars as finalists in a United States title tournament for the first time in tennis history. The youthful rivals, who share No. 1 ranking in their homeland, battled through two hours and a half of spectacular stroking before the match was decided by scores of 15-13 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

The title, won last year by Borotra ,thus passed to France for the second successive year over a trail cut through the ranks of three outstanding United States players, William T. Tilden, Vincent, Richards and Francis T. Hunter.

Lacoste's victory followed a scintillating five-set contest of more than two hours for the doubles title with the Olympic champions, Richards and Hunter, bowing to Tilden and the tall New York player, Fred Anderson, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 12-10.

COVERED RINK IS PLANNED MADOC

Meeting Held in Town Ball Decides to Raise Funds.

MADOC, Feb. 23.— On Friday evening a public meeting was held in the Town Hall for the purpose of discussing the feasibility of building a covered rink.

Reeve F. Curry called the meeting to order and a chairman was selected in R. R. Casement, and a secretary in W. T. Nugent.

The meeting was addressed by ex-Reeve W. Whytock, George White, S. Rollins, F. Baalim, J. Phillips, C. L. Jewell, George West and W. H. McBain.

It was decided to raise money by selling stock.

A committee was appointed, consisting of S. Rollins, chairman, F. Curry, F. Smith, D. Moorecroft, R. R. Casement, W. R. Rierdon, W. H. McBain and G. White. The committee will meet on Feb. 22nd to select canvassers and collect data regarding the cost of construction to be submitted at another general meeting to be called by the committee.

PAOLO WON AT MIAMI

FULFORD BOWL, Miami, Fla., Feb. 23 — Peter de Paolo won the Miami-Fulford 300 mile automobile inaugural classic here late Monday.

Paolo finished two laps ahead of his nearest rival, Harry Hartz, who finished second.

De Polo's official average time was 129.29 miles per hour.

ENGLISH CUP DRAW

LONDON, Feb. 23 — (Canadian Press Cable) — The draw for the sixth round of the English Football Association Cup competition to be played March 6 was made Monday and follows:

Clapton Orient v. Manchester City
Notts Forest v. Bolton Wanderers
Swansea v. Aston Vila or Arsenal
Fulham v. Sunderland or Manchester United.

NEEDS NEW TALENT.

Unless Washington starts to rebuild, the American League champs will find the pennant machinery creaking in a great many places next season.

LACKS AGGRESSIVENESS.

There is no better fielding first baseman in the American League than Phil Todt of the Boston Red Sox, but a lack of fight keeps him from ranking with the stars. He's too easy going.

HELP FOR HORNSBY.

Bill Killifer should prove mighty helpful to Rogers Hornsby as his assistant at St. Louis. With no managerial worries, he should greatly improve the Cardinals' pitching as coach.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Joe Boley, star shortstop of the Baltimore Internationals, has signed his contract for the coming season.

AT K. OF C. ALLEYS.

At the Knights of Columbus alleys last evening, ladies' teams bowling scheduled games were the Wrens (Miss Myra Moloney, captain), who took two games out of three from the Orchids (Miss Marita Collins, captain) and the Orioles (Miss Alma Fontaine, captain), who won three games from the Larks (Miss Margaret O'Brien, captain).

Miss Helen Kearns of the Orioles' team had high score of 202, and other members of the same team had good scores: Miss Alma Fontaine 177, Mrs. Jas. Coursey 168, and Miss Agnes Lynch 154. On the Orchids' team: Miss M. O'Heron 167 and 160, Miss Marita Collins 160. On the Larks team: Miss K. O'Keefe 164, Miss Margaret O'Brien 151. On the Wrens' team: Miss H. McCarthy 182, Miss Myra Moloney 158, Miss G. McCarthy 150.

NEW 65 YARD RECORD

BOSTON, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—A world's record that has stood for 18 years was broken in the seventh annual running of the American Legion track games here Monday, when Dehart Hubbard, negro athlete, sprinted 65 years in 6 4-5 seconds. The old mark was 7 seconds.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements, which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CHINESE SOLDIERS MURDER CIVILIANS

Population in War Zone Also Near Starvation.

HANKOW, China, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Eight missionaries reached Hankow Monday from Sinyangchow, 125 miles north of Hankow, where a group of United States citizens has been under the fire of the contending Chinese armies. They tell a grim story of pillage, looting and murder in connection with the strife of Marshal Wu Pei-Fu's Hupeh army and the Kuominchun, or national army, which supports the Peking regime.

Other members of the Sinyangchow United States community, which totalled 31, have been moved from the danger zone and are now at Chikungshan. C. C. Skinness remained in Sinyangchow to care for wounded Chinese, while H. M. Nesse also is still there, too ill to be moved.

Those who reached Hankow say that large numbers of the civilian population of the district have been murdered by the soldiers. The troops have confiscated much of the food supply, and many civilians are dying of starvation.

One United States mother escaped from Sinyangchow only after she had lived in a coal bin for three days with her three small children without water.

Here is the Proof

That Dr. Chase's Ointment does positively relieve the most severe cases of piles.

While Dr. Chase's Ointment is recognized everywhere as the standard treatment for piles you may be interested in this letter which describes one particular case. There are thousands of similar cases.

Mrs. Wm. Hughes, Appin, Ont. writes:—"Dr. Chase's Ointment cannot be equalled. I used it for protruding piles of the worst kind. When the Doctor said an operation was the only hope, I began to prepare for one, when I remembered reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment. I resolved to try it, and after using two boxes I had no trace of the piles. It was the greatest relief I ever got, and I only hope other sufferers who read this letter will lose no time in purchasing a box, and see for themselves the miracles it works. It will be the best investment they ever put their money into."

TITLE CONTESTS ON WEDNESDAY

St. Andrew's Meet St. Peters and Brintons Play De Laval.

WILL BE THRILLERS.

It is St. Andrew's and St. Peter's for the Junior city hockey title and the Hobberlin Cup, and Brintons and De Laval for the Senior championship and the Brown silverware.

Two games will be played in each series, goals to count, with the first contests tomorrow night. St. Andrew's and St. Peter's will start at 7.30 o'clock, playing two periods of 20 minutes each. The Senior game will start at 8.30, and will go 60 minutes with three periods, as in the O.H.A. games.

Fans who have followed the schedule, and saw the games last night, are convinced that the finals will produce a lot of good hockey. All four teams are strong in the nets and it is doubtful if big scores will be registered. There is plenty of speed on the forward lines but not sufficient combination work to get the best results. More team play may be expected in the finals, and if this is the case, the games are bound to be thrilling from start to finish.

BANDSMEN INTERESTED IN THIS EXHIBIT

$5,000.00 Worth of Holton Instruments at Greene Music Store— Open To-night.

BANDSMEN INVITED.

An exhibit that will be of special interest to every bandsman in Peterboro is now on display, for tonight only, at the Greene Music Store. There's quite a story behind it. A good many years ago, Mr. Holton was a bandsman, and played in most of the then prominent American bands. As a trombone player, he was interested in the working of this instrument, and produced a special trombone oil that soon became popular. Soon he took up producing the instruments themselves, and the business began growuntil now it is one of the largest and most complete band instrument factories in the world.

Just recently the J. M. Greene Music Company, Limited ,were appointed the distributors for the Province of Ontario, it being necessary in order to secure that distribution to purchase a large quantity of instruments for properly handling the territory. A number of quite extensive shipments have arrived, some instruments being already sold and delivered. To-day there are two large consignments at the store of the Greene Music Company, of a value of approximately $5000.00.

With a view to giving all local bandsmen an opportunity to see this fine display, these instruments have been unpacked and displayed in two large show cases, and this is an invitation to all bandsmen to see this fine display of high grade band instruments before any more are moved out.

The store will be open from 7.30 this evening on, and they will be shown for to-night only, as many of the finest are to be sent out immediately.

Included in the lot is a beautiful Holton E flat alto saxophone, of silver with burnished gold keys and bell. This is sold to a customer in Welland.

There are also two Holton A flat altos, beautifully silver plated and engraved. They are sold to the band in Gananoque.

Several others are being shipped out to-morrow, so that to-night is the one opportunity to see the entire display.

The extent of it may be realized when it is found that there are 14 cornets and trumpets, 12 slide trombones and several saxophones, as well as many other brass and silver instruments.

MODIFICATION OF ACT IS REQUESTED

Committee of Prominent Anti-Prohibitionists To Approach Congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press)—Substitution of a modified prohibition system, legalizing light wine and beer, for the present Volstead Act, is to be asked of Congress. KING HOLDS LEVEE.

Diplomats and Officials Received To-day at St. James' Palace.

LONDON, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Brilliantly uniformed diplomats and officials today paid their respects to the king at the first levee of the season, held in St. James' Palace.

The King drove in state from Buckingham Palace, attended by his Master of Horse and various others of the royal suite. He was received by the Lord Chamberlain and other officers of state, who conducted him to the throne room, where the levee was held.

KING AND QUEEN TAKE NEW HOUSE

Have Moved Into Standingham House in Norfolk.

PERSONAL PROPERTY.

LONDON, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—King George and Queen Mary have just moved into Sandringham House, the Norfolk estate of the Windsor family, which has become the personal property of the Sovereign by the will of Queen Alexandra.

Sandringham is now the only one of the many properties visited each year by Their Majesties which is owned by the King and not by the State. King Edward bought the country mansion when he was Prince of Wales, and willed it to his queen. Sandringham was the favorite residence of King Edward and Queen Alexandra, as it is with the present Sovereigns.

FRENCH CONCLUDE PACT WITH TURKS

Check Against Recent Anglo-Italian Understanding.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—The Westminster Gazette claims that France by concluding a treaty with Turkey over Syria has placed a check on "Great Britain's astute move in enlisting Italian aid in the event of active Turkish resistance to the Mosul decision,' 'of the League of Nations, which gives Great Britain the mandate over Mosul.

The newspaper adds that Premier Mussolini of Italy was anxious to obtain the eventual mandate in Syria, should France withdraw, as a means of providing an outlet for Italy's surplus population. Great Britain, it declares, supported Mussolin's aspiration, which had been promptly rebuffed by France.

EXTEND SECTION OF CUSTOMS ACT

Department to Apply Depreciated Currency Clause To New Lands.

OTTAWA Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Woollen fabrics imported from Continental Europe will be specially affected by the extension of the section of the Customs Act in regard to depreciated currencies.

When the Customs Act was amended in June, 1922, and the present depreciated currency provision inserted, a memorandum was issued by the Department of Customs to the effect that the section would apply to goods which were the manufacture or produce of Germany, Austria Hungary, Jugo-Slavia, and Russia.

Under the new memorandum issued under instructions from Hon. G. H. Boivin, Minister of Customs, the application of the section is extended to goods manufactured or produced in any country where the currency is depreciated more than 50 per cent.

A delegation of Canadian woolen manufacturers who recently waited on Mr. Boivin requested that this change be made. It was stated last night that the change "should be of considerable advantage to all Canadian manufacturers including the manufacturers of woollen fabrics, who are obliged to compete with importations from other European countries whose currency is substantially depreciated.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO IN "THE EAGLE."

The handsome Rudolph is back again in the role of the hero in "The Eagle," an interesting picture which gives the star plenty of scope for the exercise of his peculiar charm. Valentino is showing his years to a certain extent. He has not the fire and dash that characterized his screen work some years back and he is growing thinner, but he is still the screen lover par excellence and he fills the role of star to perfection. He dominates the picture through every moment that he is on the screen.

"The Eagle" is the story of a pair of romantic young lovers and has in it the intertwining elements of human relationships that make the Valentino pictures so very interesting. Catherine the Great appears in this picture, she and her court and the main characters in the story speaking English quite apparently and acting with real up-to-dateness. The time has not yet come, evidently, when a producer of old-time stories, set in a foreign land, will go to the artistic lengths of having his actors give the impression of speaking the language of the country they are supposed to be residents of, and to act as the famous characters they depict would act.

Catherine takes a liking to the handsome lieutenant of her Guard, the young Vladimir Doubrovski, but the affection is not reciprocated. The young man departs from the court in haste and Catherine issues special orders to bring him back, dead or alive. Vladimir embarks on the career of a bandit, the "Black Eagle," and swears vengeance against the man who has robbed his dead father of his estates. But Kyrilla Trockounoff, his enemy, has a beautiful daughter, Mascha, and the two young things fall in love with each other, when Vladimir, masquerading as a French tutor, gains entrance to the Kyrilla Castle. There are many episodes in the romance of the two that give Valentino plenty of opportunity for the exercise of his attractive, restrained style of acting, and for a demonstration of his powers, both as a man of action and as a lover.

Interesting in its theme, produced with an eye to artistic effect in its costuming and backgrounds, with Rudolph as the hero and the lovely Vilma Banky as the heroine. "The Eagle" is an extremely likeable picture.

With it are a number of excellent short reels, including several new-style humorous reels, a "Felix the Cat" effort, and a comedy featuring the ridiculous Billy Dooley, in "A Salty Sap."—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

SCREEN VERSION OF "EAST LYNNE" IS A REAL GEM.

We have been hearing about "East Lynne" for so many years that it was with some curiosity we vsited the Regent Theatre last night when the William Fox screen version of Mrs. Henry Wood's celebrated old melodrama opened a three-day run. And what a surprise we received! For beauty, drama and humor, this production is one of the finest we have seen in a long time.

Emmett Flynn has taken this heart gripping piece of drama and done it into a cinema attraction that is very worthy of the photographic art. Subtlety, fine acting and visual beauty have been blended with excellent results. The picture has all the virile tensity of the original work, with an added touch of humor that helps it materially. Beautiful old-fashion gowns and a wonderful setting of old England add much to the production.

FROM THE THREE LITTLE MAIDS

She was the Miller's daughter
And she sat beside the mill;
She certainly had investments
And the stock is going up still

She was the Miller's daughter
And she sat beside the stream,
She never bathed in the water
As the doctors said it unclean.

She was the Miller's daughter
And looked so very sedate
Because she was so careful
And thought something of her fate.

She was the Miller's daughter
And she would have things so nice,
And would never shrink nor falter
But ordered "SANITARY ICE."

WEDDING BELLS

McDONALD—MOWAT.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized this afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, 773 Water street, when Betty, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mowat, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Albert C. McDonald, son of Mrs. McDonald, of Cleveland, Ohio, and the late W. A. McDonald. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Enoch's church, Toronto, and former pastor of St. Paul's church here.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her travelling suit of camel brown crepe, with coat and hat to match. She was attended by her small niece, Betty Carman, of Picton, carrying a basket of sweet peas and rosebuds.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald left later for a trip to New York and the Southern States, after which they will reside in Cleveland, Ohio.

OBITUARY.

MRS. DENNIS McCARTHY.

Mrs. Julia McCarthy, wife of Dennis McCarthy, and mother of Rev. Walter B. McCarthy, rector of St. Ambrose Church, Rochester, N.Y., died at her home at 61 Greig Street, Rochester, on Wednesday morning, February 17th, at the age of seventy-one years.

The survivors are her husband, three sons, Rev. Walter B. McCarthy, Raymond J. and Clarence J. McCarthy, and two daughters, Mrs. Donald A. Byrne and Mrs. Robert H. McGraw.

The funeral took place on Saturday morning last at half-past nine o'clock, from her late residence to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, where Solemn Requiem High Mass was solemnized by Rev. Walter McCarthy, assisted by Rev. George Predmore as deacon and Rev. William Donovan as subdeacon. In the sanctuary during the Mass were over fifty priests, and delegations from the Rosary Society, the Altar Society, the school children of St. Ambrose parish, the Sisters of St. Joseph, the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association also attended the Mass. Interment was in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, where the final benediction was pronounced by Bishop Thomas F. Hickey, assisted by Mgr. A. B. Meehan, Rev. Andrew Byrne, Rev. Joseph Cameron, Rev. Wm. Donovan, Rev. John Sellinger, Rev. Leo V. Smith, Rev. John B. Crowley and Rev. George Predmore.

Mrs. Frank Fairen and Miss J. McCarthy, of Simcoe Street, are sisters-in-law of the deceased lady.

DIED

DALEY — Died at St. Joseph's Hospital, on Saturday Feb. 20, Miss Catherine Daley. The funeral took place Monday morning to St. Peter's Cemetery.

Brazilian Is Outstanding In Firm Toronto Session

TORONTO Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Brazilian Traction was the outstand stock on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, climbing to a high of 98 3-8, subsequent easing to 98 1-8, a gain of 3-4 from yesterday.

The majority of issues were as strong as the leader, except Canada Steamship Preferred, which sold down 2 1-4 at 65. Canners Preferred gained 3-4 at 66 1-4, Atlantic Sugar 3-4 at 27 1-4, Steamships Common 3-4 at 14, and Smelters 7-8 at 246. British Columbia Fishing and Brompton firmed a quarter point each at 65 1-4 and 34. In the unlisteds, British American Oil eased a half point and Imperial Oil firmed a half point; Steel of Canada eased 3-4 at 105 1-2.

Trading On Mine Market Marked By General Declines

TORONTO, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press)—General declines marked the trading on the Standard Mining Exchange this morninng and the firm issues were few. Dome led with a recession of 19 cents at 19.25 and Lake Shore eased 15 at 11.45.

Kirkland Lake lost six at 123, Consolidated West Dome at 2 1-4 at 22 1-2, Barry Hollinger 2 1-2 at 45, Argonaut Consolidated two at 38 Chaput Hughes three at 17, and Teck Hughes one at 362. There were numerous other, though none were especially substantial. In the silvers, Castle Trethewey eased 6 at 165, Capitol 1 3-4 at 44, and Mining Corporation seven at 435.

Market Colorless To-day With General Down Trend

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press)—Stock prices drifted lower in today's colorless market. Operators on the long side attempted to revive bullish enthusiasm by bidding up Motors on the strength of the heavy winter production and sales, but they failed to attract a public following. Pools in several specialties met with similar results. Meanwhile, bear traders were industriously seeking new weak spots, forcing sharp recessions in a number of issues.

Wheat Price Moves Up Following Liverpool Lead

CHICAGO, Feb. 23. — Canadian Press. — General buying, largely as the result of higher quotations at Liverpool, turned the wheat market here upward to-day as soon as business began. Nervousness over the poor grading of Argentine wheat was a strengthening factor and so, too, was the smallness of contract stocks of wheat in Chicago. Previous sellers were conspicuous in the purchasing and offerings were scarce at even a material advance. Opening 2 3-4 to 2c higher, May $1.70½ to $1.71 and July $1.50 to $1.50¼, was followed by a slight reaction, and then by fresh gains that in some cases went decidedly above initial figures. Opening 1-8c to 5-8c higher, May 79 5-8 to 79 3-4c, the corn market continued to ascend. Oats started ½c to 1c up, May 42 3-8c to 42½c, and later hardened a little more.

JAPANESE SHIP DRIFTED MONTH ON THE PACIFIC

Rescue of 14 Survivors Thrilling Counterpart to Atlantic Deeds.

NO FOOD AND FUEL

Ate Ship's Cat and Rats — 19 Japanese Sailors Lost.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—Rescue of the fourteen starving members of the crew of the Japanese freighter Daishin Maru No. 3 by the Standard Oil tanker Java Arrow in mid Pacific February 18, accomplished in the teeth of a north-westerly gale and on a rough sea, fraught with danger, had many of the thrills that accompanied recent rescues in the storm-whipped Atlantic.

This was revealed in a message received by the San Francisco Bulletin yesterday from Captain George E. Irvine, of the Java Arrow.

The message said:

"A north-westerly gale and a rough sea made rescue dangerous. Our lifeboats were badly damaged getting the men off the ship, since the Japanese were very weak and unable to assist.

"The fourteen were landed on board finally. All are well. Our life-boat was lost. The derelict Daishin Maru is afloat."

No Trace of Others.

The Dollar liner President Wilson, which first announced the rescue, searched several days for two lifeboats containing 19 others of the Daishin crew, Captain Irvine said. One of the lifeboats, containing the third mate and ten men, cast away from the distressed ship on January 29 to get help. On February 8 eight more men left in a lifeboat. There has been no trace of them, and it is supposed that they were swallowed up in the gale.

The Daishin, a small coastwise freight steamer, experienced the storm while off the Hakodate light on January 23. She ran out of bunker coal, and a hard blow, catching her abeam, forced her out of her course and started her drifting south-westward. The food supply, intended only for the short run from Yokohama northward, to Muroran, soon was exhausted. The ship's cat caught all the rats aboard and these were turned into soup for the starving crew. The cat itself was then sacrificed for the same purpose. Captain Irvine's message set the Daishin's drifting period as 27 days.

Vessel a Derelict.

The seas evidently were running so high at the time of rescue that salvage of the Daishin was out of the question, and she was abandoned as a derelict. She continued her south-westerly drift at an estimated hourly rate of a knot and a half.

The Java Arrow is expected here March 6.

REEARCH WORK EXPENSE LIGHT

Need of Laboratory Accommodation Hampers National Council.

ANNUAL REPORT.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—The activities of the National Research Council for the past year are reviewed in the annual report of the Council tabled in the House of Commons Monday. In the scientific and industrial research which is the concern of the council, a total organization of 352 was engaged last year. Of these, 291 were scientists and business men who served without remuneration. In addition, 46 persons were carrying out investigations at Canadian universities under post graduate scholar ships awarded by the council and fifteen persons were working under supervision as research assistants. A policy of enlisting the co-operation of existing research organizations and investigators has made it possible, the report says, for the council, at comparatively small cost, to so stimulate research work in Canada as to enable it to build up an active and effective voluntary research organization.

The report calls attention to the fact that until the council has been provided with adequate laboratory accommodation, it is impossible to carry out certain duties assigned to it under the Act or to make any material progress towards the solution of Canadian industrial problems.

The total expenditure of the council in the year under review was $121,010. Grants in aid of research cost $51,000, and $40,000 was spent on post graduate training of research workers. The amount spent for all other purposes, including staff, travelling expenses, printing, etc., was less than $30,000. The report draws attention to the fact that 75 per cent. of the entire expenditure was devoted to the prosecution of research work in Canada.

Receipts from all sources totalled $124,797. Of this, $120,000 was voted by the Canadian parliament.

BOARD OF TRADE ANNUAL MEETING

S. G. Way Was Elected President of Tweed Organization.

CONDITION GOOD

TWEED, Feb. 23.—The annual meeting of the Board of Trade was held in the Council Chambers recently. Notwithstanding other attractions the meeting was well attended. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The treasurer's report showed a balance in the bank of $310.08.

Moved by W. S. Gordon, seconded by Bert Donnelly, that the treasurer's report be accepted—Carried.

A nominating committee was appointed as follows: John Quinn, W. S. Gordon, L. Martin, Will Stewart and Will Collins.

The nominating committee retired and brought in the following nominations:

President—S. G. Way.

1st Vice-Pres.—Wm. O'Keefe.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Jas. Ryan.

Treasurer—Alec. Yule.

Secretary—L. Martin.

Council—S. B. Rollins, convenor; Elmer Wagar, Geo. Stokes, John Quinn, J. L. Newton, B. Donnelly, Will Stewart, Herb Sayers, Ed. Wright and P. McIlroy.

Considerable time was taken up with regard to bathing accommodations for children. This followed the advisability of having a park. The covered rink was also discussed and the Board of Trade will assist in getting it started in every way possible.

The committee in charge of the arrangements to organize a company and build a covered rink here is meeting with good success. About $2,950 has already been subscribed.

Conservative Split Rumored in Toronto

Government Nervous After 4 Hour Caucus; Wets Make Demands

Story From "Inner Circles" Says Campaign Funds Benefitted To Extent of $300,000—Party is Weary of Old Man of the Sea Promises.

FERGUSON IN DIFFICULT POSITION.

Still No Definite Statement On Policy To Be Followed—Party Followers Not Advised of Outcome — Rift Started Last Night, It Is Said.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—A serious split in the Tory ranks in the Legislature and in the Conservative party over the liquor issue, is presaged by the four-hour Conservative caucus at the Parliament Buildings last night.

The question of doing away with the O.T.A. was discussed for four hours, and no decision was arrived at. No other subject of any importance was discussed at the caucus, it is said, which was called to deal with the liquor situation.

That the Government is nervous about its manifestly wet intentions, was obvious from the fact that even to their own followers last night they would not disclose the policy in the back of their minds, and on which they intend to appeal to the people at the next election.

It is stated that at the caucus last night, the Government for the first time exhibited weariness of the situation into which they have pitchforked themselves. It is stated that it is now frankly admitted in inner circles that the Conservative party made a big mistake in allying themselves with the distillers and brewers at the last election by accepting campaign funds totalling about $300,000, on the agreement that another plebiscite would be taken as to the repeal of the O.T.A.

Sanguine of Success.

The Ferguson cohorts were so sanguine that government control would carry, that they failed to consider at that time just what position they would be in if the vote of the people failed to authorize them to carry out their $300,000 obligation to the wets.

In the House Premier Ferguson has been getting more touchy and short-tempered every time the liquor question is raised by the opposition and he has seized every chance to debate the issue of late as fully as possible wthout actually giving away what the government hopes will be its policy in the next appeal to the country.

The premier is finding his position untenable. Assailed alike by the wets and drys of the opposition he is confronted as well by the difference of opinion among his followers, and by the jealousy of the brewers and distillers themselves. Between the brewers and the distillers there is a gap almost as wide as between the wets and drys.

At Queen's Park the statement is pretty authentic that the distillers contributed between $250,000 and $275,000 to the Tory campaign fund before the last election, and the brewers about $50,000.

When the plebiscite failed of its purpose, despite Premier Ferguson's promises, some return was made to the brewers in the form of 4.4 beer legislation.

Distillers Wrothy.

But the distillers, who gave five times as much, got nothing at all, and it is said that they have spent a good deal of their time since in reminding Premier Ferguson of the fact. And they are refusing to repeat their huge campaign fund of the last election unless the government go to the people on the government control issue.

This is just where the shoe pinches. It begins to look as though the insistence of the government and the wets in forcing a liquor policy on the whole Conservative party, will create a dangerous rift in the party throughout the province. This which has been suspected for some time, began to take concrete form at the caucus last night.

At the caucus the wets made their demands in no uncertain voice. They want government control. They claim the O.T.A. is unenforcable, and that people are ready for the government sale of liquor. There was considerable opposition to this view with the government largely sitting back as referees of the argument, it is stated.

The action of J. A. Pinard Liberal, in bringing in a ten per cent. beer amendment is another thing that is receiving a good deal of attention in Tory circles. Unless it is railroaded out of the House for good, a large number of the Conservatives will undoubtedly blot on this bill, and this is what the Premier is anxious to prevent.

It is stated that one Cabinet Minister within the past 24 hours expressed the opinion that the government would have been farther ahead to have rejected the wet campaign funds at the last election and left the liquor question severely alone. In this case it is said he felt the government would have been elected, though with a smaller majority, and without the legacy of the liquor trouble which it now faces.

He Telephoned His Wife And Was Brought Into Court

YONKERS, N.Y., Feb. 24 (United Press) — Telephoning one's wife may be a sign of marital fidelity but not when husband and wife are separated.

Judge Boote ruled thus yesterday when he sentenced Joseph Cmiel, 28, to a year's probation for telephoning to Mrs. Cmiel, with whom he does not live.

Mrs. Cmiel testified that her husband had rung her telephone for two hours at one time.

"Children should be allowed to take risks," says an English doctor. "The baby who tumbles about freely rarely hurts himself as he falls naturally with relaxed muscles."

CANNOT PROVE SHIRT WAS MADE IN A U. S. PRISON

R. P. Sparks Admits He Is Not in Position To Swear To Manufacture.

TELLS COMMITTEE.

Mr. Boivin Demands Name of Retailer Who Sold Shirt.

OTTAWA, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—The admission that he was not in a position to swear that the shirt he put in as evidence recently was prison-made, was wrung from R. P. Sparks, of the Commercial Protective Association, at today's sitting of the customs probe. In a stormy session, Hon. G. H. Boivin, Minister of Customs, accused Mr. Sparks of dramatically placing the shirt he had purchased in Ottawa and which he said was prison-made in the United States," as evidence against the Customs Department" when, as a matter of fact, he did not knew whether it was made in a prison or not. Mr. Sparks said that from the source of his information, he had reason to believe the shirt was prison made.

The incident arose when Mr. Boivin demanded that Mr. Sparks make public the name of the Ottawa retailer from whom he had bought the alleged prison-made shirt.

Three Conservative members of the committee protested against the publication of the name. The Liberal members of the committee thought the name should be published.

The name of the retailer was not given out, and a motion to call him as a witness was laid on the table until a future date.

French War Aviator Loses Life On Wager

PARIS, Feb. 24 (United Press) — Leon Collot, French war pilot, was burned to death today when on a bet with American colleagues of the Orly aerodrome he attempted to fly his machine through the 150 foot high arch of the Eiffel tower.

The machine came down in flames, apparently started by contact of the wireless antenna with an overhead wire.

BOOZE AT COUNTRY DANCES ENDED FUN

Vigilant Committee Found Conditions Like Cobourg's.

STANWOOD, Feb. 24.—Cobourg is not the only town in Ontario that has its problems concerning the behaviour of its young people. Here at Stanwood there is a vacant house that the rising generation leased for the winter for the purpose of holding dances two or three times a week. The experiment was a success and everything was as merry as a marriage bell until a serpent in the form of a young man with a flesk invaded the social Eden. Then came a change. The owner of the house heard of the incident and the doors of the house were closed upon the guilty and the innocent alike.

Another vacant house near Healy Falls has been leased and the merry making is continued, a vigilant committee seeing to it that the law is in every way respected. There was no call made upon the police for assistance. The offenders were simply sent to "Coventry," and the purity of the social atmosphere was preserved.

Regal Splendor Marks Accession of Indian Ruler—Lavish Functions.

DURBAR TO FOLLOW.

JAMMU, Kashmir, India, Feb. 24.—Magnificent celebrations, rivaling in splendor those of the Arabian Nights, have been proceeding for the last fortnight in connection with the accession of the young prince, Sir Hari Singh, to the throne of Kashmir.

Sir Hari is perhaps better known to the world at large as the mysterious "Mr. A" in the sensational Robinson tried at London a year ago.

Huge Sum Spent

The religious ceremony of the coronation of the new maharapah of Jammu and Kashmir, as he will be known will take place on Thursday. The government alone is spending £200,000 on the celebration, this sum being used for the ceremony, the festivities of inauguration, public work, food for the poor and entertainment. How much more is being spent by the Kashmir nabobs is problematical, but it represents in the aggregate a huge fortune.

Durbar Will Follow.

The festivities are proceeding day and night ,and the famous palace itself is providing scenes of regal splendor such as only India can produce. Great reigning princes from all parts of the empire will attend the coronation, which will be followed by a durbar, one of the most picturesque functions of the east. Elaborate arrangements are being made for holding military reviews.

U. S. TAX REDUCTION BILL AGREED UPON

$387,000,000 Cut Approved By Lower House.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. Canadian Press. — The $387,000,000 tax reduction bill agreed an by the Senate and House conferees was agreed upon Tuesday by the House 354 to 28, and its final passage was put up to the Senate.

The compromise measure has privileged status in the Senate but leaders were uncertain last night whether they would call it up for approval by Thursday in view of the absence of several members.

Confident however of an early and favorable vote on the bill by the Senate leaders predicted that it would be in the hands of President Coolidge before the end of the week.

Although the amount of reduction is above that prescribed by the treasury, there were definite indications Tuesday at the White House that President Coolidge would sign the bill, making it effective immediately.

ALBERTA JOINS WITH THE EAST IN COAL ORDERS

An Expedient, Says Premier of Agreement to Share Excess Cost.

TO HOLD MARKET.

Until Railway Commission Has Completed Inquiry of Transport.

EDMONTON, Alta., Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Joint action with the Dominion and Ontario governments in respect to payment of excess costs on the movement of 200,000 tons of coal to the Eastern market has been decided upon by the Alberta government. The province will assume responsibility for a third share of actual freight expenses over $7.00 per ton.

Premier J. E. Brownlee, in announcing this decision, said that the government will co-operate with the other governments along this line, provided that there is a thorough distribution of the coal orders with the Alberta mines, and also provided that the basis of the arrangement is strictly the out-of-pocket expenses of moving the coal. He is quite sure as a result of past investigations into the freight situation, that on such a basis a satisfactory rate on full train lots is possible and therefore does not expect that the provincial treasury will be called upon to make up much, if any, in the way of a shortage.

"Because we believe that," said the premier, "we are entering into the arrangement, and we also have been influenced by the fact that it is desirable to make some special effort to hold the Ontario market against the United States mines until such time as the railway commission completes its inquiry."

Not Permanent Policy

It is not to be understood as a decision to keep on paying, one-third or any other proportion of the cost of moving coal east, said Mr. Brownlee. The action of the government in this instance is not a commital, he pointed out, to any permanent policy of giving provincial assistance by way of bonus to the export of coal from Alberta.

"Should any such policy be considered," he said, "the steam coal producers will be as much entitled to it as the domestic coal producers, and the province could not assume any such responsibility as that would involve.

"What this means, instead, is that it is a temporary expedient to hold the Ontario market provisionally, while as a permanent solution of the development of the industry we are urging the Dominion government to make every effort to expedite the inquiry by the railway commission already authorized."

The Nation's Business

Premier Brownlee is strongly desirous that, if at all possible, a report on the actual cost of moving coal east may be made by the railway board before the present session of the Dominion house has closed. He fears that even the shipment of 200,000 tons will lose its effect if parliament rises without having made some provision by which Alberta coal can continue to move to Ontario at reasonable freight rates. In explanation of what he considers the latter to be, he defines a cost basis as that covering actual running expenses and depreciation but not taking capital charges into account. The business must be handled, he claims, on a national interest basis.

Distribute Orders

As to the distribution of orders, the premier will insist that some better way of placng the business be found than in the previous shipments, most of which are said to have been made from the Drumheller field. The Ontario Fuel Commission and the Alberta trade service will probably work together in this matter, with a view to finding a more satisfactory method handling the orders.

Mr. Brownlee expects that the movement of the 200,000 tons will begin at once. While a larger quantity than any before agreed upon, it is not, he points out, enough to be considered other than still experimental, and no material stimulus of the industry at large will likely follow except in the way of further preparing for the business of the future.

Fruit Juice Diet To Cure Bodily Ills Draws Notice But Few Are Following Noblewoman's Example

LONDON, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—While it is considered unlikely that many English people will emulate the example of Lady Fisher and her fellow abstinents from food, who have adopted a regime of fruit juices and fasting to heal bodily ills, the "cure" as described by Lady Fisher, is attracting much notice.

From Tring, in Hertfordshire, Lady Fisher announces that instead of "Those appalling long course dinners," she is taking the fruit juice cure, and ended her 28th day without eating by a three-mile walk yesterday.

She said she would fast another month if necessary to overcome an attack of auto-intoxication due to general debility.

Forty other guests are at the old mansion in the Herts hills with Lady Fisher. All of them are living on grape and orange juices, lemon and apple waters, and the water in which vegetables have been boiled.

"GET ON WITH THE EXPORT TRADE" PRINCE OF WALES ADVISES FIRMS AT BIRMINGHAM INDUSTRIAL FAIR

Great Ovation During the Prince's Hustling Tour—Met Austen Chamberlain.

ADDRESS ON LEAGUE.

Foreign Secretary Guarded in Reference to Enlarging League.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Tuesday was a busy day in Birmingham. The Prince of Wales made a hustling tour through the Birmingham section of the British industries fair, where he met Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, who is here on a political visit, and who last night made an important speech dealing with the League of Nations.

The prince's slogan was "get on with the export trade," in his conversations with various representatives of British firms. The prince's visit was semi-private, but he had a great ovation.

Sr Austen Chamberlain devoted his speech to his coming visit to Geneva and took the ground that it would be impossible to prevent enlargement of the League Council, but he did not commit himself to the proposition that enlargement should occur simultaneously with the admission of Germany.

Preceded Germany's Entry

He regarded the election of Germany to a permanent seat in the council as a foregone conclusion, because he believed that every state represented in the council had already expressed the view that Germany ought to have a permanent seat, and he had no reason to suppose that any difficulty in that respect would arise. He then alluded to the reports about claims for seats by other states to counterbalance Germany's entry.

"That," he said, "is not historically true as a description of how the question arises"

SUGGEST REFUSAL FOR CATHCART CASE

Member Makes Proposal But Government Refuses to Probe Eastwood Incident.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—A suggestion that Americans guilty of moral turpitude, be treated here as Countess Cathcart had been treated in America, brought cheers in the House of Commons to-day.

INQUIRE INTO SHELLING.

LONDON, Feb. 24. —(Canadian Press.)—Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador at Washington, will be asked to make enquiries of the United States' government and send a report regarding the alleged bombardment of the Canadian schooner Eastwood by the United States' coast guard cutter Seneca, off the New Jersey coast last week.

This was stated in the House of Commons to-day by Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary.

NO REPRISALS.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— The British government will consider no proposals to institute reprisals for the barring of the Countess of Catheart from the United States. This in effect was the reply of Foreign Secretary Sir Austen Chamberlain, to a spirited cross-fire of questions in the House of Commons to-day regarding the working of the United States' immigration laws.

Sir Austen said the British government considered it entirely the business of the United States' authorities as to who should not be admitted to that country.

Lindsay Provides Work With Aid Of Government

LINDSAY Feb. 24.—Lindsay is one of the first municipalities to take advantage of the Ontario Government's offer to furnish unemployment relief—assuming a portion of the expense of work undertaken during the winter months for the purpose of providing unemployed work. This week the Board of Works started a gang of men on the construction of a storm sewer, only married men and those having dependents securing work.

There have been quite a number of demands made upon the town for aid by those out of employment, and this work will come in the nature of a blessing.

OMAHA'S SNIPER IN POLICE TOILS

Ten Murders Laid at Door of Man Captured Monday.

NOT A "MANIAC."

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 24.—Omaha's "maniac sniper," who terrorized the Nebraska metropolis with night attacks in which he killed two and wounded others, is not a maniac, but shows a rational tendency in trying to escape the death penalty County Attorney Henry Beal announced Tuesday.

Beal, who filed first-degree murder charges against the sniper, who was captured at Bartlett, Iowa, on Monday, said the man was an "inoffensive-looking Iowa farm hand, and by no means insane." The prisoner said his name is Frank Carter.

"Of course," Beal explained, "the men has a low criminal mentality, but he is certainly nobody's fool.

"He wants to plead guilty, but I won't permit this, as I intend to send him to the electric chair."

Police believe that Carter is guilty of at least two other murders. They say he is the man who last September killed William Longerson and Harry Jones, in a hardware store in Sioux City, Ia. Carter denies this, but the Sioux City men were murdered with .22-calibre bullets similar to the ones used by Carter here.

Ten Murders.

"We expect to hang at least ten murders onto Carter when the entire country is heard from," Chief of Police VanDusen said.

The man stated that he has owned his peculiar, silent .22-calibre automatic for two years. He has admitted more than 50 holdups in Chicago, Sioux City, Des Moines, St. Joseph, Lincoln and Kansas City.

"I always had trouble making my victims respect my small caliber gun," Carter said. "When they laugh at it they make me mad, and I shoot them."

Carter is proud of his crime record He tells his story with a great deal of bravado and wealth of detail. He killed both Dr. A. D. Searles and William McDevitt because they failed to "show proper respect" for his small pistol.

Carter was born in Ackley Iowa, 45 years ago, and claims Kansas City as his home now.

LOCAL MEMBER TAKES PART IN HOUSE DEBATE

E. A. Peck, M.P., Appeals to Progressives to Consider Industrial Needs.

RAILWAY ATTACKED.

Rouyn Line is Principal Subject of Decision in House.

E. A. Peck, M.P. for West Peterborough, was among the speakers in the House yesterday during the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

Mr. Peck appealed to the Progressive members of the House to consider the problem which he said confronted the industrial centres of the Dominion because of the fact that many young men were leaving Canada. There were in his riding a good many electors who, before redistribution, voted in the old Progressive constituency of Peterboro East. Some of these may have given him support, said Mr. Peck. He was willing to admit that there probably was something in the Progressive movement in Canada. The Progressive group at present constituted slightly less than one-tenth of the membership of the House. Presumably they represented one-tenth of the whole electoral. All but two came from Western Canada. No doubt the Progressive group, however, might feel that it represented in a general way, the whole farming population of Canada. Mr. Peck was not prepared to contest the point, but he would submit to the farmer members that Canada as a whole required a policy which would provide employment for all Canadians of every class.

Mr. Peck remarked that the protectionist principle had been accepted in Ontario in 69 constituencies out of 83.

The proposed Rouyn railway was again the chief topic of the House of Commons yesterday. Conservative members continued the attack begun some days ago on the Government's procedure in launching the railway. The chief ground for objection was that the road had been authorized by an Order-in-Council instead of by a bill passed through Parliament.

HEAVY LOSS IN RENFREW FIRE

Seven Horses and Three Automobiles Destroyed—Hotel Threatened.

GARAGE BURNED.

RENFREW, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Seven valuable horses were burned to death, three automobiles were destroyed and damage totalling $25,000 was caused when the garage stables and coal sheds adjoining the Dominion House, and owned by Senator J. O'Brien, were completely destroyed by fire during the night. The blaze started in the garage and for a time the entire block was in danger. It was only by strenuous efforts that the Dominion House was saved.

THE WEATHER

While the temperature went down to 10 degrees below zero during the night it had risen to 2 above zero at daybreak this morning. Every twig and exposed object was covered with a coating of hoar frost, and presented a beautiful appearance. This usually foreshadows a change in weather conditions, and frequently a thaw. However the reader will be wise not to put too much faith in this "sign" or any other, as to forecast the weather is about as uncertain an undertaking as to foretell the result of a horse race.—W.P.

Four large volumes were required to contain the will of the late Mrs. Cook, of London and Brockenhurst. Altogether, this document comprised 95,940 words, more than there are in many novels.

Conservative Split Rumored in Toronto

Government Nervous After 4 Hour Caucus; Wets Make Demands

Story From "Inner Circles" Says Campaign Funds Benefitted To Extent of $300,000—Party is Weary of Old Man of the Sea Promises.

FERGUSON IN DIFFICULT POSITION.

Still No Definite Statement On Policy To Be Followed—Party Followers Not Advised of Outcome — Rift Started Last Night, It Is Said.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—A serious split in the Tory ranks in the Legislature and in the Conservative party over the liquor issue, is presaged by the four-hour Conservative caucus at the Parliament Buildings last night.

The question of doing away with the O.T.A. was discussed for four hours, and no decision was arrived at. No other subject of any importance was discussed at the caucus, it is said, which was called to deal with the liquor situation.

That the Government is nervous about its manifestly wet intentions, was obvious from the fact that even to their own followers last night they would not disclose the policy in the back of their minds, and on which they intend to appeal to the people at the next election.

It is stated that at the caucus last night, the Government for the first time exhibited weariness of the situation into which they have pitchforked themselves. It is stated that it is now frankly admitted in inner circles that the Conservative party made a big mistake in allying themselves with the distillers and brewers at the last election by accepting campaign funds totalling about $300,000, on the agreement that another plebiscite would be taken as to the repeal of the O.T.A.

Sanguine of Success.

The Ferguson cohorts were so sanguine that government control would carry, that they failed to consider at that time just what position they would be in if the vote of the people failed to authorize them to carry out their $300,000 obligation to the wets.

In the House Premier Ferguson has been getting more touchy and short-tempered every time the liquor question is raised by the opposition and he has seized every chance to debate the issue of late as fully as possible without actually giving away what the government hopes will be its policy in the next appeal to the country.

The premier is finding his position untenable. Assailed alike by the wets and drys of the opposition he is confronted as well by the difference of opinion among his followers, and by the jealousy of the brewers and distillers themselves. Between the brewers and the distillers there is a gap almost as wide as between the wets and drys.

At Queen's Park the statement is pretty authentic that the distillers contributed between $250,000 and $275,000 to the Tory campaign fund before the last election, and the brewers about $50,000.

When the plebiscite failed of its purpose, despite Premier Ferguson's promises, some return was made to the brewers in the form of 4.4 beer legislation.

Distillers Wrothy.

But the distillers, who gave five times as much, got nothing at all, and it is said that they have spent a good deal of their time since in reminding Premier Ferguson of the fact. And they are refusing to repeat their huge campaign fund of the last election unless the government go to the people on the government control issue.

This is just where the shoe pinches. It begins to look as though the insistence of the government and the wets in forcing a liquor policy on the whole Conservative party, will create a dangerous rift in the party throughout the province. This which has been suspected for some time, began to take concrete form at the caucus last night.

At the caucus the wets made their demands in no uncertain voice. They want government control. They claim the O.T.A. is unenforcable, and that people are ready for the government sale of liquor. There was considerable opposition to this view with the government largely sitting back as referees of the argument, it is stated.

The action of J. A. Pinard Liberal, in bringing in a ten per cent. beer amendment is another thing that is receiving a good deal of attention in Tory circles. Unless it is railroaded out of the House for good, a large number of the Conservatives will undoubtedly blot on this bill, and this is what the Premier is anxious to prevent.

It is stated that one Cabinet Minister within the past 24 hours expressed the opinion that the government would have been farther ahead to have rejected the wet campaign funds at the last election and left the liquor question severely alone. In this case it is said he felt the government would have been elected, though with a smaller majority, and without the legacy of the liquor trouble which it now faces.

He Telephoned His Wife And Was Brought Into Court

YONKERS, N.Y., Feb. 24 (United Press) — Telephoning one's wife may be a sign of marital fidelity but not when husband and wife are separated.

Judge Boote ruled thus yesterday when he sentenced Joseph Cmiel, 28, to a year's probation for telephoning to Mrs. Cmiel, with whom he does not live.

Mrs. Cmiel testified that her husband had rung her telephone for two hours at one time.

"Children should be allowed to take risks," says an English doctor. "The baby who tumbles about freely rarely hurts himself as he falls naturally with relaxed muscles."

R. P. Sparks Admits He Is Not in Position To Swear To Manufacture.

TELLS COMMITTEE.

Mr. Boivin Demands Name of Retailer Who Sold Shirt.

OTTAWA, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—The admission that he was not in a position to swear that the shirt he put in as evidence recently was prison-made, was wrung from R. P. Sparks, of the Commercial Protective Association, at today's sitting of the customs probe. In a stormy session, Hon. G. H. Boivin, Minister of Customs, accused Mr. Sparks of dramatically placing the shirt he had purchased in Ottawa and which he said was prison-made in the United States," as evidence against the Customs Department" when, as a matter of fact, he did not knew whether it was made in a prison or not. Mr. Sparks said that from the source of his information he had reason to believe the shirt was prison made.

The incident arose when Mr. Boivin demanded that Mr. Sparks make public the name of the Ottawa retailer from whom he had bought the alleged prison-made shirt.

Three Conservative members of the committee protested against the publication of the name. The Liberal members of the committee thought the name should be published.

The name of the retailer was not given out, and a motion to call him as a witness was laid on the table until a future date.

PARIS, Feb. 24 (United Press) — Leon Collot, French war pilot, was burned to death today when on a bet with American colleagues of the Orly aerodrome he attempted to fly his machine through the 150 foot high arch of the Eiffel tower.

The machine came down in flames, apparently started by contact of the wireless antenna with an overhead wire.

BOOZE AT COUNTRY DANCES ENDED FUN

Vigilant Committee Found Conditions Like Cobourg's.

STANWOOD, Feb. 24.—Cobourg is not the only town in Ontario that has its problems concerning the behaviour of its young people. Here at Stanwood there is a vacant house that the rising generation leased for the winter for the purpose of holding dances two or three times a week. The experiment was a success and everything was as merry as a marriage bell until a serpent in the form of a young man with a flesk invaded the social Eden. Then came a change. The owner of the house heard of the incident and the doors of the house were closed upon the guilty and the innocent alike.

Another vacant house near Healy Falls has been leased and the merry making is continued, a vigilant committee seeing to it that the law is in every way respected. There was no call made upon the police for assistance. The offenders were simply sent to "Coventry," and the purity of the social atmosphere was preserved.

Regal Splendor Marks Accession of Indian Ruler—Lavish Functions.

DURBAR TO FOLLOW.

JAMMU, Kashmir, India, Feb. 24.—Magnificent celebrations, rivaling in splendor those of the Arabian Nights, have been proceeding for the last fortnight in connection with the accession of the young prince, Sir Hari Singh, to the throne of Kashmir.

Sir Hari is perhaps better known to the world at large as the mysterious "Mr. A" in the sensational Robinson tried at London a year ago.

Huge Sum Spent

The religious ceremony of the coronation of the new maharapah of Jammu and Kashmir, as he will be known will take place on Thursday. The government alone is spending £200,000 on the celebration, this sum being used for the ceremony, the festivities of inauguration, public work, food for the poor and entertainment. How much more is being spent by the Kashmir nabobs is problematical, but it represents in the aggregate a huge fortune.

Durbar Will Follow.

The festivities are proceeding day and night ,and the famous palace itself is providing scenes of regal splendor such as only India can produce. Great reigning princes from all parts of the empire will attend the coronation, which will be followed by a durbar, one of the most picturesque functions of the east. Elaborate arrangements are being made for holding military reviews.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Tuesday was a busy day in Birmingham. The Prince of Wales made a hustling tour through the Birmingham section of the British industries fair, where he met Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, who is here on a political visit, and who last night made an important speech dealing with the League of Nations.

The prince's slogan was "get on with the export trade," in his conversations with various representatives of British firms. The prince's visit was semi-private, but he had a great ovation.

Sr Austen Chamberlain devoted his speech to his coming visit to Geneva and took the ground that it would be impossible to prevent enlargement of the League Council, but he did not commit himself to the proposition that enlargement should occur simultaneously with the admission of Germany.

Preceded Germany's Entry

He regarded the election of Germany to a permanent seat in the council as a foregone conclusion, because he believed that every state represented on the council had already expressed the view that Germany ought to have a permanent seat, and he had no reason to suppose that any difficulty in that respect would arise. He then alluded to the reports about claims for seats by other states to counterbalance Germany's entry.

"That," he said, "is not historically true as a description of how the question arises'"

SUGGEST REFUSAL FOR CATHCART CASE

Member Makes Proposal But Government Refuses to Probe Eastwood Incident.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—A suggestion that Americans guilty of moral turpitude, be treated here as Countess Cathcart had been treated in America, brought cheers in the House of Commons to-day.

INQUIRE INTO SHELLING.

LONDON, Feb. 24. —(Canadian Press.)—Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador at Washington, will be asked to make enquiries of the United States' government and send a report regarding the alleged bombardment of the Canadian schooner Eostwood by the United States' coast guard cutter Seneca, off the New Jersey coast last week.

This was stated in the House of Commons to-day by Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary.

NO REPRISALS.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— The British government will consider no proposals to institute reprisals for the barring of the Countess of Cathcart from the United States. This in effect was the reply of Foreign Secretary Sir Austen Chamberlain, to a spirited cross-fire of questions in the House of Commons to-day regarding the working of the United States' immigration laws.

Sir Austen said the British government considered it entirely the business of the United States' authorities as to who should not be admitted to that country.

Lindsay Provides Work With Aid Of Government

LINDSAY Feb. 24.—Lindsay is one of the first municipalities to take advantage of the Ontario Government's offer to furnish unemployment relief—assuming a portion of the expense of work undertaken during the winter months for the purpose of providing unemployed work. This week the Board of Works started a gang of men on the construction of a storm sewer, only married men and those having dependents securing work.

There have been quite a number of demands made upon the town for aid by those out of employment, and this work will come in the nature of a blessing.

OMAHA'S SNIPER IN POLICE TOILS

Ten Murders Laid at Door of Man Captured Monday.

NOT A "MANIAC."

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 24.—Omaha's "maniac sniper," who terrorized the Nebraska metropolis with night attacks in which he killed two and wounded others, is not a maniac, but shows a rational tendency in trying to escape the death penalty County Attorney Henry Beal announced Tuesday.

Beal, who filed first-degree murder charges against the sniper, who was captured at Bartlett, Iowa, on Monday, said the man was an "inoffensive-looking Iowa farm hand, and by no means insane." The prisoner said his name is Frank Carter.

"Of course," Beal explained, "the men has a low criminal mentality, but he is certainly nobody's fool.

"He wants to plead guilty, but I won't permit this, as I intend to send him to the electric chair."

Police believe that Carter is guilty of at least two other murders. They say he is the man who last September killed William Looverson and Harry Jones, in a hardware store in Sioux City, Ia. Carter denies this, but the Sioux City men were murdered with .22-calibre bullets similar to the ones used by Carter here.

Ten Murders.

"We expect to hang at least ten murders onto Carter when the entire country is heard from," Chief of Police VanDusen said.

The man stated that he has owned his peculiar, silent .22-calibre automatic for two years. He has admitted more than 50 holdups in Chicago, Sioux City, Des Moines, St. Joseph, Lincoln and Kansas City.

"I always had trouble making my victims respect my small caliber gun," Carter said. "When they laugh at it they make me mad, and I shoot them."

Carte. is proud of his crime record He tells his story with a great deal of bravado and wealth of detail. He killed both Dr. A. D. Searles and William McDevitt because they failed to "show proper respect" for his small pistol.

Carter was born in Ackley Iowa, 45 years ago, and claims Kansas City as his home now.

KING RATIFIES TREATY

LONDON, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—The foreign office announced today that King George has signed the instrument ratifying the Treaty of Locarno which will be deposited with the League of Nations.

LOCAL MEMBER TAKES PART IN HOUSE DEBATE

E. A. Peck, M.P., Appeals to Progressives to Consider Industrial Needs.

RAILWAY ATTACKED.

Rouyn Line is Principal Subject of Decision in House.

E. A. Peck, M.P. for West Peterborough, was among the speakers in the House yesterday during the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

Mr. Peck appealed to the Progressive members of the House to consider the problem which he said confronted the industrial centres of the Dominion because of the fact that many young men were leaving Canada. There were in his riding a good many electors who, before redistribution, voted in the old Progressive constituency of Peterboro East. Some of these may have given him support, said Mr. Peck. He was willing to admit that there probably was something in the Progressive movement in Canada. The Progressive group at present constituted slightly less than one-tenth of the membership of the House. Presumably they represented one-tenth of the whole electoral. All but two came from Western Canada. No doubt the Progressive group, however, might feel that it represented in a general way, the whole farming population of Canada. Mr. Peck was not prepared to contest the point, but he would submit to the farmer members that Canada as a whole required a policy which would provide employment for all Canadians of every class.

Mr. Peck remarked that the protectionist principle had been accepted in Ontario in 69 constituencies out of 83.

The proposed Rouyn railway was again the chief topic of the House of Commons yesterday. Conservative members continued the attack begun some days ago on the Government's procedure in launching the railway. The chief ground for objection was that the road had been authorized by an Order-in-Council instead of by a bill passed through Parliament.

HEAVY LOSS IN RENFREW FIRE

Seven Horses and Three Automobiles Destroyed—Hotel Threatened.

GARAGE BURNED.

RENFREW, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Seven valuable horses were burned to death, three automobiles were destroyed and damage totalling $25,000 was caused when the garage stables and coal sheds adjoining the Dominion House, and owned by Senator J. O'Brien, were completely destroyed by fire during the night. The blaze started in the garage and for a time the entire block was in danger. It was only by strenuous efforts that the Dominion House was saved.

THE WEATHER

While the temperature went down to 10 degrees below zero during the night it had risen to 2 above zero at daybreak this morning. Every twig and exposed object was covered with a coating of hoar frost, and presented a beautiful appearance. This usually foreshadows a change in weather conditions, and frequently a thaw. However the reader will be wise not to put too much faith in this "sign" or any other, as to forecast the weather is about as uncertain an undertaking as to foretell the result of a horse race.—W.P.

Four large volumes were required to contain the will of the late Mrs. Cook, of London and Brockenhurst. Altogether, this document comprised 95,940 words, more than there are in many novels.

THE FOUNDER OF ROTARY HAS PICTURESQUE CAREER

Life Story of Paul Harris, Whose Little Club in Chicago Blosomed Out Into a World Wide Organization.

Paul P. Harris, founder of Rotary, was born April 19, 1868, at Racine, Wisconsin. He received preliminary education in the public schools and the academies in Vermont, was a student at the State University of Vermont at Burlington and continued his literary studies at Princeton University. He took his law at the University of Iowa at Iowa City and graduated in 1891, was admitted to the practice of law in Iowa the same year, and received his Illinois license as an attorney and counselor at law in 1896. Has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Chicago and continuously since. On July 2, 1910, he married Miss Jean Thomson, a native of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Paul's life contains so many picturesque incidents that a mere recital of them would fill the word limit of this sketch. As a boy he was regarded as incorrigible, and his mischievous propensities continued up into his young manhood. The older members of the Rotary Club of Chicago can regale you by the hour with stories of the practical jokes he was author of in the early days of the club. Upon leaving Princeton University in 1889 he entered the offices of a marble quarrying company at Rutland, Vermont, and spent a year in their service. He then moved to Des Moines, Iowa, where he entered a law office, but finally elected to pursue his law studies in the University of Iowa. After completing his law course in 1891, he spent the following five years in seeing the world and learning to know his fellows by actual contact with them under all sorts of conditions.

These years were all full of adventure for him. During this period he worked as a cub reporter on daily papers in San Francisco and Denver, rode the range in the cow country, picked oranges in southern Louisiana, sold marble and granite, crossed the Atlantic twice on cattle ships, and made a third trip to Europe on business for Geo. W. Clark of Jacksonville, Florida, who later became the first President of the Rotary Club of Jacksonville. In 1896 he felt he had gained sufficient practical experience to be of service to his future clients, and opened a law office in Chicago. He had neither friends nor relatives in Chicago, but chose that city because he considered it the city of destiny, wherein many of the social and industrial problems of the day must be worked out. If there was to be a social maelstrom he desired to be in it. His first years as a lawyer were marked by the discouragements and struggles which are typical of beginners in his profession. He had much time for reflection and pondered much on conditions of life and business in a large city.

On becoming a benedict, Paul purchased a suburban home at Morgan Park, Illinois, where he has had a better opportunity to continue his studies regarding the Rotary movement. He has read extensively of philosophy and religions and in literature his favorite author is Dickens. He is a lover of nature and likes to take hikes through the country, and probably knows as much about the Sand Dunes of Indiana as any man in Chicago. Hunting and fishing are his favorite sports and he finds them an excellent means of building up his physical powers.

The Birth of an Idea.

In 1905 as a result of his study and reflections, Paul had formulated a definite philosophy of business relations. Calling together three of his friends, each of whom was engaged in a different line of business, he expounded his theory to them. This group met formally thereafter, gradually adding to its number, and evolved a scheme of organization which finally consummated in February, 1905, in what is now the Rotary Club of Chicago. Through the propaganda of Paul Harris, this novel organization soon had counterparts in other cities in the United States. In his extension work the acquaintances Paul Harris had made in the five years that he knocked around the country were of material assistance to him in the establishment of new clubs.

The National Association, 1910.

After a few years the necessity for some organization to bind these different clubs together became apparent. Thereupon Paul Harris, Ches Perry and others organized the National Association of Rotary Clubs of America in 1910. Later through the extension of the movement into Canada and Great Britain, the International Association of Rotary Clubs was formed. Paul was third President of the Rotary Club of Chicago, the first President of the National Association and the first President of the International Association of Rotary Clubs and is President Emeritus of the latter. He has done his greatest work in Rotary as an organizer, but has also filled numerous speaking engagements before Rotary Clubs and has written prolifically on the subject of Rotary. Of late years he has followed a policy of self-effacement, only taking an active part when he felt he could contribute in a special way to the good of Rotary.

MISSIONARY TEA HELD AT WELCOME

W.M.S. Branches From Four Churches Met at Parsonage.

WELCOME, Feb. 24.—A missionary tea was held at the Welcome parsonage on Friday afternoon, under the auspices of "Group B" of the Woman's Missionary Society.

The auxiliaries from Canton, Morish and Wesleyville, as well as Welcome, were well represented.

As it was the day of prayer for the women of Canada, this part of the programme was taken by Canton auxiliary.

During the afternoon an instrumental solo was given by Mrs. C. Simmons. An interesting paper entitled "How the Christian Can Live the Christ Life" was given by Mrs. W. Walker of Zion.

Miss Harris, president of Canton auxiliary, spoke on the value of the day of prayer and why it was instituted. Mrs. Hawthorne and Mrs. C. Lewis of Morish, sang a duet and Mrs. F. Lane of Canton spoke on the subject "Prayer."

The program outlined for the day was followed. Later Miss Wallace of Wesleyville spoke on "Lessons from the life of Jesus." Mrs. James sang a solo and Miss Thyra Martyn read a letter from Miss Luella Rorke of Japan. Instrumental duets were given by Misses Woodger and Runnals and also by Mrs. Hawthorne and Miss V. Osborne.

At the same time the annual meeting of the trustee board of the Welcome church was held in an adjoining room.

Later, all joined for a social time at the tea hour. There were about seventy-five present. The missionary offering amounted to $13.35.

The farmers have taken advantage of the recent snow fall and are busy putting in their supply of ice and drawing out wood, grain and hay.

The sleighing is excellent at present.

REV. A. J. THOMAS STAYS IN WINDSOR

Former Local Minister Yields To Urgings of Central Congregation.

WINDSOR, Feb. 24. — Yielding to urgent appeals from his congregation, Rev. A. J. Thomas, pastor of Central United Church, decided that he would not accept a tempting offer from one of the largest Toronto churches, and consented to remain in his present charge for a period of two years. The announcement was made at a special meeting of the official board of the church.

Since the consummation of Church Union larger churches have been approaching leading preachers of the denomination with a view to permanent appointments. Mr. Thomas, possessing a record as a brilliant preacher and efficient administrator of church affairs, was among the first to be approached, but the appeal of his fellow workers of the past four years, to remain here, was too strong to permit him to leave. The invitation to remain in Windsor carried with it a substantial increase in salary.

A vote of appreciation was extended to Mrs. Thomas for her work in organizing the junior church, and her assistance to all church organizations.

Since Mr. Thomas took charge of the church four years ago, it has increased in membership by 500 people, and has become the largest pastorate in Western Ontario. In the recent campaign for the Maintenance and Extension Fund, he led his workers past the object in $13,000, until an excess of $2,000 had been reached.

He is active in Masonic circles, and has also taken a keen interest in the affairs of the community. Efforts will be made to have his appointment made permanent. This matter rests with the General Council of the church.

"BRINGING UP FATHER" — Geo. McManus

LOCATION OF BURNBRAE SCHOOL HAS BEEN CAUSE OF DISCUSSION

Split of School Section Causes Difference of of Opinion.

DISTRICT HISTORY.

School Called Shea's Should Be Known as Burnbrae, Says Pioneer.

BURNBRAE, Feb. 24.—A misunderstanding seems to have arisen in some quarters regarding the location of Burnbrae school, and the Examiner representative has made inquiries relative to the matter.

M. T. Stephens, who is one of the oldest living settlers of the Burnbrae district, was consulted, and he assured the Examiner that S. S. No. 1 was the Burnbrae school. In late months this school has been referred to in the newspapers as "Shea's School," due probably to the fact that the Shea family at one time lived almost beside the school. Several members of the section who believed that the correct name was not being used, began an agitation to have the matter explained through the press, and this article will probably clear away some of the clouds surrounding the origin of Burnbrae.

According to Mr. Stephens' explanation, Lot 21, Con. 6, north half, known in bygone days as the "Scott" farm and now owned by E. C. Pollock, is the original Burnbrae farm. In those days Alex. Donald, father of A. T. Donald, well-known resident of Con. 6, was post-master at the Burnbrae post-office, situated just east of where Wm. Fry's residence now stands and on the Scott farm. Some of the old residents of the community were under the impression that the south half of Lot 21, Con. 7, or the old Watson homestead, was Burnbrae farm, but Mr. Stephens' story can be accepted as authentic, as he is well versed in the history of Seymour Township, having for years been prominent in municipal affairs.

It is not hard to understand how this difference of opinion has arisen. The origin of the word "Burnbrae" is intensely Scotch, "Burn" meaning a creek and "Brae" a bank. A small creek starts among the springs on Mr. Stephens' farm, Lot 20, Con. 6, crosses the road and cuts through the corner of the Scott farm and thence across the 7th Line and through the Watson farm, until it flows into the larger creek which has become known as the Menie Creek. The histories of the Scott farm and the Watson farm are closely allied, as James Watson, a son of James Watson, the pioneer owner of the Watson homestead, purchased the Scott farm, which he operated until about fifteen years ago, when his son, Allan G. Watson, took it over, and he in turn sold it to Mr. Pollock some four years ago. The original Watson farm passed down to William Watson, the younger son of a large family, and on his retirement and removal to Campbellford, the farm was purchased by Lindsay Watson, a son of James Watson, Jr., and an older brother of Allan G. It will thus be seen that although some doubt has existed as to the exact whereabouts of Burnbrae farm there can be no doubt as to the location of Burnbrae Corners or Burnbrae School as it is right in the section.

Until about forty years ago the No. 1 section included that now covered by S. S. No. 1 and No. 11, and the school building was situated on Mr. Stephens' farm, just across the road from Burnbrae farm. When the attendance grew out of bounds, the section was subdivided, and the new school for No. 1, built one lot north, while that of No. 11 was built one lot south and two east, so that the north section, in retaining the original number, also retains the right to the name of Burnbrae.

Although the name of Burnbrae farm and school can be somewhat localized, there are those in this essentially Scotch community who would resent any attempt to take the name of Burnbrae away from the whole district. The name has seemed so typical of the race settling here that it has come to include practically everything between the 9th and 4th Concessions, including Menie. Although in a strictly official sense the church on the 6th Concession road, known to some as the Scotch Church, is called St. Andrew's, Seymour East, and probably would not be recognized at Presbytery under any other name, yet it is, as the Burnbrae church, that it is known over a wide circle of acquaintances, and the Burnbrae cemetery adjoining contains the remains of many loved ones whose living relatives will remember the name Burnbrae for years for no other reason than this, no matter how far they may be from the old community.

WATERLOO LABOR MEMBER SAYS FERGUSON ADMINISTRATION IS GREATEST PATRONAGE DISPENSER

Paucity of Labor Legislation Charged By Karl Homuth in Legislature.

CLOSED TO-DAY.

Adjournment Until Thursday in Respect to Memory of Clerk.

TORONTO, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—The debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne was continued Tuesday by K. Homuth (Labor, South Waterloo) and F. H. Keefer, Legislative Secretary for Northern Ontario. The latter moved the adjournment of the debate until Thursday, a resolution having been unanimously adopted that the House adjourn one day out of respect to the late A. H. Sydere, Clerk of the Assembly.

Mr. Homuth declared that the people of Ontario had expected an honest and emphatic announcement from the government as to its attitude on the liquor question rather than the vacillating policy that seemed to have been designed to catch the vote of the electors.

Mr. Homuth said that the Provincial Secretary's department had gained part of its surplus by an unjust act which had taken away the grants to the provincial houses of refuge. "The county taxes had to be increased to take the place of the provincial grant and while it was a saving to this government, the money is still coming out of the people in another way," said Mr. Homuth.

The Labor member expressed disappointment that the Ontario Department of Labor had no further legislation to announce. "We might have at least expected an amendment to the Mothers' Allowances Act whereby a mother with one child would be entitled to compensation. but we aren't promised it," he continued. "We might also have expected this government to have taken a step forward and introduced a bill whereby the Industrial Disputes Act would be made permanently operative in this province. I am introducing such an act myself, as has been done in Manitoba and British Columbia. I hope that this government will work in cooperation with the Federal Government in the plan of the latter to provide old age pensions.

Lush Patronage.

"But I must give this Government credit, where credit is due, and I will say that it is the greatest dispenser of patronage we ever had in Ontario. It had made many appointments with an utter disregard for a class of men who should be given every privilege in this country. I mean the returned soldiers. I am, therefore, not surprised at the reply of the Attorney-General to questions I asked concerning certain appointments in North Waterloo when he said that the recommendations of the appointees were confidential and could not, therefore, be made known."

Mr. Homuth said that in 1921 when the Drury Government was in power he had recommended a returned soldier as bailiff in Galt and that the man got the job. However, this Government had appointed a woman over a returned soldier a few months ago for division county clerk in Galt. He understood that the patronage committee of the Conservative party in Galt had voted on the matter, but did not know if they carried their decision to Queen's Park. Then the clerk of the surrogate court had been vacant. "Now at the time of the vacancy there was a federal election, and the Conservatives after searching everywhere for a candidate, and after repeated orders from the Conservative powers that they must have one, selected Mr. Scully to oppose Mr. Euler in North Waterloo.

"Now it was rumored and rumored frequently that Mr. Scully was promised the clerkship if he would run. He had no chance and everybody knew it. So he ran. He lost his campaign, but he won the job."

Mr. Homuth also contended that an old agreement that South Waterloo and North Waterloo were to make an equal number of provincial appointments within the county was broken by this government. He further charged that the present government had dismissed a road superintendent on provincial highways in Waterloo County to appoint one of its own friends. "The man discharged knew his business and the one appointed had spent all his life weighing out sugar and salt behind a counter. It is surely time in Ontario that this kind of a thing for political gain ceased."

Profit in Liquor.

T. H. Keefer, Legislative Secretary for Northern Ontario continued the debate. He agreed with previous speakers, that no army of men could stop boot-legging. "I do not think that an army could stop it under government control either. But if the Liberals and their Progressive friends would see to it that the excise tax of $10 a gallon of whiskey were removed by the Federal Government, it would strike a blow at the boot-legger. It was put on as a war measure and should be removed.

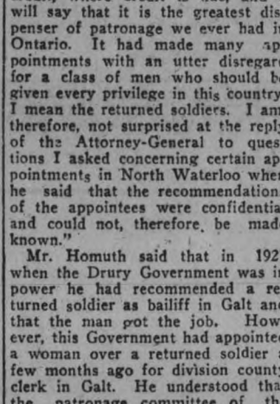
"Why should it be removed? Does not this province sell whiskey only as a medicine? What interests should it have?" asked R. L. Brackin (West Kent). Mr. Brackin contended that Ontario should not speak of cheaper liquor when this province made a profit of $800,000 on the sales of last year. If we want cheaper whiskey, why does not the Government cut its profit?"

Mr. Keefer, continuing, said he hoped to see the day when the doctor's prescription would be done away with.

Mr. Nickle then rose to reply to Mr. Brackin, and claimed that he was steadily reducing the price of whiskey sold for medicine. He said that previous profits had been by the fluctuation of the French franc and the English pound, where much liquor was purchased. He expected that this year the profit would only be $500,000 on a turnover of six or seven millions.

Mr. Keefer, continuing the debate, said that he hoped Alberta coal would be of such quality that it would stand re-shipping at Port Arthur and then the rate would be cut considerably. He declared that it was time the downcast people woke up to their opportunities and got behind Ontario in the St. Lawrence development and then they could bring their coal right to the centre of the country and displace the millions of tons of coal which now come from the United States. As soon as we all get behind the St. Lawrence development we shall have great trade expansion," said Mr. Keefer.

The Care Of Her Baby Weighs on the Energies of the Mother



Hamilton, Ont.—"After one of my children came, my health was very poor. My nerves were so bad I could not sleep—would walk the floor nearly all night long. I was so weak I could not do my work. I suffered from backaches and pains in my side. I was just a physical and nervous wreck, but after I took a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription my nerves were completely restored, I grew strong and well and was able to do my housework. AMERICANS BUY AND REMOVE OLD BRITISH HOMES

Bill in Commons To Curb Losses of Art Meets Opposition.

FREE COUNTRY.

Historic Buildings Transported Stone By Stone To United States.

LONDON, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—Sir Henry Slesser yesterday introduced in the House of Commons intended to curb the growing habit of rich residents of the United States in buying British works of art and transporting ancient or historic buildings piecemeal to the United States, but the Government gave no indications that further facilities would be afforded for its enactment.

"There is a constant flow of some of the most beautiful English works of art to America, most of which never will come back," Sir Henry said. "The same thing is true of historical documents, records and books, relics which every patriot ought to desire to see retained instead of becoming subject to traffic and sold to the highest bidder."

Sir Henry's views were countered by Frank G. Rye, Conservative, who insisted that Great Britain was a free country and that the King's subjects should not be interfered with in dealing in their own possessions.

Referring to pictures, Mr. Rye declared it was necessary for the owners to sell one occasionally in order to keep their big country houses.

One of the latest cases was Alexander W. Weddell's purchase of Warwick Priory. There were some protests against this purchase at the time, but it was pointed out that the priory was largely destined to be demolished so that the stone and brick could be used in the construction of a factory.

The materials taken from Warwick Priory, to be used in a reproduction near Richmond, Va., of Sulgrave Manor, the English home of George Washington's ancestors, recently were brought to the United States.

LOCAL MEMBER TAKES PART

Sectional Appeals.

I. D. Cotnam (Conservative, North Renfrew) attacked the Liberal party for its "sectional and class appeals" made in the last general election. Yet, he added, the prime minister was preaching national unity. "Whoever heard of national disunity before the last five years?" Mr. Cotnam asked. There was not sufficient unity in the Liberal party to hold this country together. On the other hand confidence in the Conservative party, and in the leader of that party had been expressed by the return of Conservatives as the largest group in the House.

If there was one thing that was undermining the confidence of the electors of Canada it was the growing belief that public men were insincere. The Prime Minister in his manifesto at Richmond Hill had declared against group government. After the election he had immediately sought to make an alliance with one of the groups in the house in order to carry on government.

Mr. Cotnam argued that it was an admission of weakness by the government that Premier Dunning, instead of one of the Liberal members of the House of Commons, had been selected as Minister of Railways and Canals. He wondered if the branch line programme of the Canadian National Railways, which provided for large construction in Saskatchewan, was designed to assist the new minister of railways and canals in his Regina campaign.

The emigration problem was greater than immigration.

While the government was dealing with the influx the exodus was going on constantly. What was most needed was a policy which would provide diversity of employment in the country. In his town of Pembroke and in every village of his riding were evidences of young people going to the States. Over 3600 graduates of Toronto University were in the States.

The education of each of them had cost ten thousand dollars lost to the country. Diversity of views on the tariff question indicated no settled Liberal policy. North Renfrew had turned to the Conservatives because industry was hit by the British preference and agriculture by the Australian treaty.

Not Isolated Case.

The Pembroke Woollen Mill in 1922 employed 110 men with a monthly wage of $60,000. The increased British preference came into operation and the mill closed, the operators going to the States. This was not an isolated case. There were several others in the same class.

The Conservative party, he said stood for adequate but not high protection. It was ready to make concessions to the west and to the Maritimes, and such a policy would bring about national prosperity.

G. R. Geary of South Toronto, denied obstruction by the Conservatives. If this were so why did not the government stop obstruction when it had the means at its hands? The blame for obstruction must rest on the government.

In late September, said Mr. Geary, at a time when most of the members of the government were so preoccupied with the election campaign that they could not attend to the work of their department, the Cabinet had found time to assemble in order to confirm the arrangement for the issue of bonds for the construction of the Rouyn Railway, which was "so much desired by somebody."

Mr. Geary said he offered no criticism on the construction of the railways nor on the route decided upon. He merely wished to say that in his opinion the government had "flouted the rights and privileges of this House" by denying it an opportunity to pass upon the construction of this branch line of the C.N.R. This procedure was not only wrong in itself, said Mr. Geary, but it was an indication of what the government would do—and must do—to keep itself in office. It was all a part of the governments record of "subterfuge and barter."

The Rouyn Railway.

G. H. Nicholson (Conservative-Algoma East) also discussed the Rouyn Railway. The company formed to construct this railway, he said, might better have been called "the campaign funds company of 1925." Why had not the government come to parliament in the recognized way to get an appropriation for the construction of that branch line? Why form a company at all? Why rush through an order in council in September, 1925, when the project for a Rouyn Railway had been before the government and the country since 1922?

He criticized the action of the government in authorizing a bond issue of $5,000,000 when one of its ministers was ready to admit that the cost of construction would be $2,600,000. Mr. Nicholson expressed the opinion that it would not cost more than $2,225,000. There was no provision in the contract, said Mr. Nicholson, for proper supervision on behalf of the Canadian government of the cost of construction. The rental to be paid by the C. N. R. should not have been a fixed sum but should have been proportionate to cost.

Hon. Chas. Stewart asked if there was not a provision in the contract whereby the engineers of the C. N. R. should supervise the costs?

Mr. Nicholson retorted that it was a "trustee of the bondholders" that was authorized to exercise such supervision, and there was no protection for the National roads.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen interrupted to ask if there was anything in the contract to prevent the government issuing bonds for more than the actual cost of construction.

Mr. Nicholson said there was not and Mr. Stewart interjected, "That is a very adroit question. Provision is made for proper supervision of cost."

Mr. Meighen began to say that supervision was provided for but that there was nothing to protect the National Railways when F. S. Cahill, Liberal, of Pontiac, appealed to the speaker for a ruling as to whether all this desultory cross-questioning was in order.

Mr Speaker ruled that it was if the member who had the floor did not protest.

Mr. Nicholson said he was not the person to say that the Canadian National Railway should not build branch lines. If the government had come to the House with a proper bill for the construction of this railway he would have been prepared to consider it on its merits. But the usual course followed in connecton with building a branch line, was to call for tenders. No tenders had been called for in the case of the Rouyn Railway. The dummy company simuly went ahead to build the railway, turning over the construction to those contractors which it favored.

One of the provisions of the agreement, said Mr. Nicholson, was that the province of Quebec would guarantee $50,000 per annum and the Noranda mines $20,000 per annum. If the road proved to be a losing proposition, but, he contended, precautions had been taken to see that these guarantors would never have to put up a cent. It was provided that one third of the revenue from traffic both into and out of the Rouyn field would be credited to the Rouyn Railway. By this arrangement more than eight times the revenue per car mile than the Canadian National would receive. There was no possibility of the guarantors being required to pay their contribution.

J. C. Ross (Liberal, Moose Jaw) declared that the Conservative leader had "scolded" the Saskatchewan members for their views on the tariff. He would point out, however, that since Saskatchewan became a province it had elected only two Conservative members to the House. Saskatchewan was against any increase in the Customs tariff.

Men Women Children use Vicks for Colds

For smokers' sore throat o coughs, let a little Vicks melt in the mouth. Then at bed time rub it well over throat and upper chest.

For severe chest colds open pores of throat and chest with hot wet towels and then rub well with Vicks.

At first Vicks VapoRub was used chiefly for children's colds. Mothers have a way of finding out the best things for children's ailments and they soon discovered the great value of treating children's colds externally—with Vicks. It meant quick relief without dosing; no danger of upsetting delicate little stomachs. Later, men and women found that Vicks is just as good for their colds, too. Today Vicks is sold in over forty countries and over 21 million jars are now used yearly.

When rubbed over throat and chest

Vicks Attacks Colds Two Ways at Once:

(1) Its medicated vapors (released by the body heat) are inhaled right to the inflamed air-passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing. At the same time,

(2) It acts through the skin like an old-fashioned poultice, "drawing out" the tightness and soreness, and thus helping the vapors inhaled to break up the congestion.

A very simple, but effective, way to treat a head cold or relieve nasal catarrh is to melt a little Vicks in a bowl of hot water and inhale the vapors.

CANADIAN BONDS SOLD IN NEW YORK

Major Part of $105,000,000 Issue To Sell at Home.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—As part of a $105,000,000 financing program, the Government of Canada has sold to a new York banking group, headed by Blair and Company and the Chase Securities Corporation, a $40,000,0000 issue of 10 year, 4 1-2 per cent bonds. Public offering of the securities was made today at a price of 98 3-4 to yield 4.65 per cent. The remainder of the bonds, consisting of $45,000,000 twenty year and $20,000 four year 4 1-2 per cent obligations, will be sold in Canada.

Proceeds of the three issues will be used by the Dominion Government largely for refunding purposes. A $70,000,000 one year 4 per cent loan, floated in this market last fall, will be retired on April 1 and funds also will be provided for redeeming internal issues.

A nation-wide syndicate of bankers will be associated with Blair and Company in the United States end of the financing.

MADOC NEWS

MADOC, Feb. 23.—Miss Emily Stewart of New York is spending a couple of weeks with her father, D. E. K. Stewart.

Mrs. Fraser Aylesworth is in Toronto for a few days this week.

Mrs. W. Wyper is a visitor in Montreal for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. J. Hannifan and little daughter, Rita, were week-end guests of Mrs. D. Haslip.

Mrs. Newton of Tweed spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. C. Whytock.

Miss Essa Dafoe is spending a few weeks with her father, Dr. W. A. Dafoe.

Mrs. Cleveland Moon is visiting in Belleville this week.

Dr. P. J. Alexander of Bancroft, formerly of Madoc, had the misfortune to injure his knee while putting his car in the garage. The injury necessitated a visit to the Belleville hospital and the use of a crutch.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches, get busy with good old Musterole.

Musterole relieves the congestion and stimulates circulation. It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Rub it on with your finger-tips. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief. Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

MUST KEEP IT COMING.

The quick response of the Federal Government to the offer of Premier Ferguson, followed by an announcement from the Alberta Government that they also endorsed the proposition by which the three administrations will each pay one-third of the excess cost above $7.00 per ton of transporting Alberta coal into Ontario, is most gratifying.

Thus a steady stream of Alberta fuel into this Province would be assured, and the people of Ontario could face the possibility of another month of winter weather with confidence.

That there is need of ensuring a supply of fuel is shown by the fact that 400 people crowded the wickets at the Toronto City Hall yesterday when orders for Alberta coal were being taken.

The situation seems to be that many of those citizens who put in what they considered an adequate supply of coal before the winter began are now finding that their reserve has gone, and they are coming into the market for fresh supplies, while, of course, there are many other people who are forced to buy in small quantities whose needs have to be taken care of as usual.

Under these conditions it is most desirable that the shipments of Alberta fuel be continued until the winter is safely past.

HON. GEO. P. GRAHAM.

The departure from public life of Hon. George P. Graham, whose resignation from the Department of Railways and Canals has been accepted and who will be succeeded by Hon. Chas. Dunning, will be regretted by Canadians of all political stripes.

The genial old Minister, a veteran in the public service, had the unique faculty of being able to win the affection of his political opponents as easily as he held the regard of those on his own side.

The tributes paid to him in the House of Commons by Hon. Mr. Lapointe, the Government Leader, and by Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Leader of the Opposition, were merely a public voicing of what is being said by Canadians everywhere.

Mr. Graham lays down his portfolio with the plaudits of his fellow-countrymen ringing in his ears; mingled with the regret that necessarily is involved in thus severing associations that have become dear to him there must be a great measure of consolation in the realization that the people of this country have found his work good.

Mr. Graham has been in the public eye for a long period, and few men have completed such a lengthy political career and found themselves so popular at the end of it than the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals.

THE BANNING OF "LIBERTY."

The banning by the Customs Department of the magazine "Liberty" from Canada as a result of publishing scurrilous articles about Queen Alexandra and the Prince of Wales will be regarded by a lot of good loyal Canadians as a mistake.

No one will attempt to defend the offending articles, but at the same time there are many who will look upon the banning of the publication as an intimation that the loyalty of Canadians is a weak reed, liable to be destroyed altogether by a magazine article.

The affectionate regard of the people of Canada for the memory of Queen Alexandra, the warm liking and respect they have for the Prince of Wales are, as a matter of fact, not likely to be shaken in the least by a dozen magazines.

On the other hand, the barred publication "Liberty" has until this lapse been a bright, cleanly written and sanely edited magazine, much superior in the quality of its contents to many of the publications published in the United States and allowed entry into Canada.

To ban such a magazine from this country while other publications filled with pictures of scantily-clad women and stories full of suggestiveness are permitted to come in will strike many Canadians as ridiculous.

THE TOURIST TRADE.

Figures quoted at the meeting of the Peterboro branch of the Ontario Motor League as to the amount of money spent in this city by tourists last summer emphasize once more the desirability of doing everything possible to advertise this district as offering many advantages to summer visitors.

That advertising should take the form of boosting the Peterboro district as ideal for the motor-boat owner, the canoeist, the camper, the motor tourist, and in some degree the fisherman.

We say "in some degree" advisedly, inasmuch as to boom this section of Ontario as a fishermen's paradise is to create a false impression that is bound to have a boomerang effect.

Nothing hurts the reputation of a summer resort more quickly than to have a number of people go home and spread the intelligence that its advertising is untrue, and nobody is more liable to spread such news than a thirty-third degree fisherman who finds that the "anglers' delight" he is persuaded to visit is far from being any such thing.

There are places in Ontario where such fishermen can be sure of what they want, and they should be sent there, while in advertising the Kawartha Lakes district we should stick to the truth.

There is plenty to offer the visitor to this section, and the publicity should be confined to a list of these guaranteed attractions.

"WE ARE SEVEN."

The Peterboro Examiner seeks from Premier Ferguson a logical explanation of why the seven ridings in Ontario that remain unrepresented in the Legislature should be deprived of a voice in the administration of Provincial affairs. The Examiner is altogether unreasonable in its demand. It should be less extreme—even less peremptory—than it is in this summons served on Mr. Ferguson. For our part we should be satisfied, for a time at least, with any explanation of why these constituencies remain disfranchised. But Mr. Ferguson refuses to speak at all, declines even to allude to these vacancies. When reference is made of them the Premier's features, usually so mobile and alert, take on an air as vacant as the seats under discussion. His attitude is one of complete detachment. One would think he had never heard of Cochrane, Centre Grey, East Kent, Kenora, London, North Norfolk and South Simcoe. Or that, if he ever had heard of them, he associated their names with something in the South Seas or Madagascar, or the Cyclades, which the sailors call the "sick ladies." And, indeed, if the word constituency were spoken of as in the feminine gender these electoral ridings in Ontario might not inaptly be called the "sick ladies." Their electorates are sick enough, and seem likely to remain so, for aught the Premier is doing for their relief.

It is because the Premier so stolidly refuses even to mention the subject of by-elections that we say that any explanation would be welcomed. What could be regarded as a "logical" explanation by Mr. Ferguson on this matter we cannot even guess. It would no doubt be logical enough if Mr. Ferguson declared that these ridings did not need representation while he was at the helm. It would certainly be logical enough from his standpoint, considering what he may do to them, what perhaps he meditates doing to them, and to the Province at large, while they are unrepresented. The fact is, it is not safe to ask for logic from Mr. Ferguson while he has his majority behind him. The logic of keeping these constituences disfranchised may mean Government control of liquor, beer over the bar, cheap licenses, and a return of the old happy-go-lucky hic-cupping days of "a little of the same" in the barroom and of an empty larder at home.

Let us have some—have any—explanation from Premier Ferguson, and then we can deal with him. We won't ask for logic.—The Globe.

A SPEECHLESS BANQUET.

To those who find satisfaction in promoting banquets at which the chief item upon the menu is the speech-making, we commend the example of the lawyers of Dallas, Texas, who have arrived at a decision to hold a speechless banquet and for once to be able to enjoy themselves. Such abstinence on the part of gentlemen whose chief stock-in-trade is talk and yet more talk is greatly to be praised. Lest, however, too much merit be attached to their action, we hasten to add that the speechless proceedings are the outcome of failure to invoke the closure act at previous affairs of the same kind. It wasn't that the lawyers did not want to talk, but that some of them talked too long for the comfort of their associates. There was too much talk even for lawyers. Hence the decision to attend the banquet, enjoy the food and conversation with their "elbow" neighbors, and then go home.

A speechless banquet! What a glorious prospect! The hardened banquetter knows what is in store when he accepts an invitation to attend the annual dinner of the Ancient and Honorable Order of Master Street-cleaners. He prepares to spend a thoroughly dull evening, and if he is well advised he carries his gas-mask with him. He is crowded into a hall or room suited to the accommodation of about half the number in attendance. Should he be fortunate, there is space enough on the table before him for his plate and his cutlery. Ability to establish contact between the said cutlery and his hands is made possible only by co-operation with his neighbors, who are held in the same vise-like grip. It is generally arranged that while one eats the other remains motionless. Then comes the food. It may be good or it may be poor. It all depends upon the reputation of the caterer and the funds at the disposal of the organization in question. If it be good, the banquetter enjoys it as best he may, his predicatment considered; if it be poor, he utters smothered maledictions, breathes destruction to the Ancient and Honorable Order of Master Street-cleaners and all its works and wishes that he could be safely and comfortably at home listening to the radio. As the dinner progresses, the banquetters are enveloped in a smoke-shroud of denser and still denser intensity until it may become difficult to recognize those who sit at the extremities of the hall. In self-defence contribution to the fog becomes essential. Non-smokers generally appreciate this part of the programme. When the haze has become well nigh impenetrable, the chairman arises. He is the man who is usually to blame for what follows. If he is a novice at the job so much the better. But beware the professional chairman! He has power to ruin an otherwise enjoyable evening—and he generally does. The professional chairman likes to be heard as much as do those who occupy places upon the imposing list that he holds in his hand. He opens the speech-making by making one himself, and he continues to repeat the practice throughout the proceedings to the greater prolongation of the near-oratory and to the dismay of those who are hopeful that the ordeal at last may be approaching the end. If he confined himself to mere introduction of the speakers, all would be well. But he doesn't. He rambles pleasantly along oblivious to the passing of time and the feelings of his auditors, repeating all of his stock sentences and taking keen delight in inflicting the torment of feeble witticisms culled from joke-books that Artemus Ward must have known. The professional chairman is very often, without appreciating the fact, what Wells recently called Poultney Bigelow. He is to be avoided.

What follows is familiar to every banquet habitue. Speaker after speaker is introduced until the entire gamut of oratorical talent has been run. Just when the long-suffering banquetter fondly imagines that the speaking has come to a conclusion, up jumps the professional chairman with diabolical cunning to announce a further trial. At last the chairman signals to the orchestra for "God Save the King." To the banquetter whose powers of endurance have long since come to the breaking-point, never was music more welcome. He leaves the hall with a firm mental resolve never again to find himself entrapped. But when the year rolls round, once more he finds himself going through the same distressing experience. He hates banquets but he cannot resist the temptation.

Kept within proper bounds, banquets are pleasant and convivial affairs. One good speaker is all that any conventional banquet should offer. One good after-dinner speaker is worth a dozen mediocre performers. But we think that we would like a banquet of the speechless variety best of all. All honor to the lawyers of Dallas!—Exchange.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The nice things said about Hon. Geo. P. Graham in the House will be echoed throughout the country. The veteran Minister is one of the most popular public men in Canada.

The proceedings at Ottawa are occupying less newspaper space, but, unfortunately, take up as many pages of Hansard as ever.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

LEADERS.

There are, of course, natural leaders and natural followers among the human race. The leaders less affected by his followers than the follower by his leader, yet, because most of us want company in our exploits, it is common for even the leader to regulate his deeds according to the abilities of his followers, exerting himself only sufficiently to keep ahead. Leaders should choose companions who will compel them to stretch themselves to maintain their leadership.

However, there are many leaders who, because to be in the van means more than anything else, limit their own abilities by selecting their followers from among those whom it is easy to excel, thus allowing themselves to become less and less able through lack of exercise. In politics we call this kind of leader a demagogue. He is the type who maintains his prestige by agreeing with the ignorant beliefs and the thoughtless superstitions of mankind, but expressing them a little more brilliantly than the mob.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—The cattle market at the Union Stock Yards has struck a rather stagnant week. Sales of cattle on Monday were only 2,142, a little more than half of the receipts. Receipts this morning are 69 cars, 934 cattle, 406 calves, 1,400 hogs and 228 sheep and lambs. Rogers and Maybee bought 600 head of exports on Monday. Steers cost on the average 10 to 25 cents a cwt. less than last week. Heifers were steady and bulls were easier by about 25 cents a cwt. Butchers' cattle are exceedingly slow and easier by 25 to 50 cents a cwt.

One load of 1,100-lb. steers sold at $7.40 and a bunch of 18 fair quality mixed handyweight butchers went at $6.40 a cwt. Some of the cow buyers were off the market this morning and this trade was consequently not as good as on Monday. Four choice cows sold at $6 a cwt. Commission men claim that butchers' cattle are lower by 75 cents a cwt. than last week, but the buyers say the biggest part of this is due to quality. One load of 1,100-lb. shortkeeps sold at $6.75 and a load of 900-lb. feeders at $6 a cwt. Rogers and Maybee bought export heifers this morning at $7.25 a cwt., steers up to $7.85, and bulls at $5.25 a cwt. A large carry-over of butchers' cattle is expected today.

The calf market continues active and steady, with choice calves 13 to 14 cents and good calves 12 cents up. Medium quality calves are bringing up to 11 cents a pound.

Lambs are a little firmer and all of today's good ewes and wethers sold at 13¾ cents a pound. Sheep are steady, with tops at 8 cents a pound.

Hogs sold from $12.75 to $13 a cwt. f.o.b. on Monday and no change is thought likely for today's business.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 23 (Canadian Press) — The trade in cash grain in the domestic market today was again restricted, sales being confined to a few odd cars. The demand for spot supplies of grain from the country was slow and prices were unchanged.

The trade in a jobbing way continues good for fresh eggs on the local market with a good amount of business passing. Prices remain unchanged. The demand for storage eggs was limited and prices were unchanged. Receipts today were 2969 boxes.

A steady feeling prevails in the local butter market and prices show no important changes, but the volume of business continues small. Receipts today were 1926 packages.

A firm feeling prevailed today on the local cheese market at the late improvement in prices and some further business was done in current receipts of winter made goods at 19c to 19 1-4 per pound. Receipts today were 199 boxes.

ANIMALS NEGLECTED.

Humane Inspector at Kingston Finds Appalling Conditions.

KINGSTON, Feb. 24.—(Special to The Examiner).—When Dr. William Nicholls, inspector for the Kingston Humane Society, was called to investigate a case near Perth Road, he found a most appalling condition of affairs. Five cows and two horses were nearly dead for lack of food and water. The owner of the farm, a woman, is over seventy years of age. She lives a mile and a half from the farm, and is unable, during rigorous weather, to traverse the snow-covered fields to feed the animals and they suffered as a consequence. The animals had not even been bedded, and suffered from the cold weather. Owing to the circumstances of the case, the Humane Society will not prosecute, but Inspector Nicholls states that the conditions are such as to warrant such procedure in any normal case.

Music was recently transmitted by wireless from Caterham, Surrey, to an American warship, in Wellington Harbor, New Zealand, 14,000 miles away.

"Flint-knapping" is perhaps the oldest industry in the country. The tools used have remained unchanged for centuries.

HOLSTEIN HEIFER PROVES QUALITY A BEEF BREED

Sold By Dartford Man, Yearling Gives 570 Pounds of Meat.

OPPOSED TO CHANGE.

High School Principal Would Retain Entrance Tests—Campbellford News.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 23—W. H. Nelson of Dartford sold to J. H. McArthur, a local butcher, a yearling heifer that weighed 1,005 pounds live weight and which, when killed, dressed 570 pounds of beef. This heifer was a pure bred registered Holstein, raised by Mr. Nelson who sold her for beef as she was of no use for breeding purposes. This seems to dispose of the argument so often heard among cattle men that a Holstein cannot be made to take on beef.

Opposed to Change

Boards of Education in various parts of Ontario according to press reports are availing themselves of the authority vested in them by the regulations of the Department and are deciding to do away with the entrance examination and to admit pupils to the High School on the recommendation of the principal.

Principal Charles Haig of the Campbellford Public School is opposed to any such change. His main objection is that it would place upon the principal a responsibility that none of them would care to assume. It would also, he says, tend to encourage pupils to let up in their studies in the hope that the principal would be inclined to see them through. Then, too, parents whose children were not recommended for advancement would be apt to accuse the principal of showing favors and another burden would be added to the many which the teacher already bears. All credit for the good work required to get pupils through the entrance examination would to a great extent be lost if the results were no longer decided by an impartial and independent board of examiners.

Principal Haig has always been remarkably successful in passing his pupils into the High School. Two years ago he passed his entire class of 35, and last year all but one were successful, the one who failed having been kept out of school for half the term by illness.

Horses Fell Into River

George Hendy of Seymour West was cutting ice on Moday near the town power plant and had a team of horses attached to a scraper with which he was clearing the snow from the surface. The team was driven onto a part of the river where ice had been cut last week and which had been frozen over slightly and covered with snow. Both horses broke through the thin ice into the water which is about 20 feet deep at that point. The men in charge of the work were able to keep the horses' heads above water in spite of their struggles and a valuable set of harness was almost cut to pieces in order to give the animals a chance for their lives.

J. R. Wilkinson, who was driving past at the time, came to the rescue and a crowd, including employees of the power plant, soon gathered. The horses were rescued, apparently none the worse, after they had been in the ice cold water for over half an hour.

The team is a valuable pair, the handsome blacks with which Mr. Hendy has won so many prizes at the Fall fairs in this district.

At St. Andrews

It required 15 double sleighs to accommodate the scholars of St Andrew's Sunday School at their annual outing and at the end of the ride the children were given a hot supper in the school room.

William Pearson, the organist and choir leader has brought so many new singers into the choir that it has been found necessary to purchase more gowns and to put in a number of additional seats in the choir gallery. A new feature of the musical services Sunday night was violin selections by Police Chief Brown whose services in that capacity are in demand at all public functions. The organist was accompanied by Walter J. Lowe on the cornet. The new members of the choir are drawn from the class of young girls whom Mr. Pearson has been training for some months past.

Ku Klux Klan Workers Here

Agents of the Ku Klux Klan are in Campbellford at present, working so quietly that their identity is concealed. A number of residents have found circulars explaining the objects of the order, these documents having been surreptitiously placed in their pockets either while they were on the streets or while attending some public entertainment.

Lovers of Darkness

Read Jn. 3:14-21. Text: 3:19.

Men loved the darkness rather than the light; for their works were evil.

Meditation—In Christ we learn to think of God as Father more often than as Judge. The first loyalty of the judge is to vindicate the law. That of the father is to save his child to bring him to full status as child. Jesus came to save us to the blessedness of filial love and to obedience by disclosing the glory and loveableness of God. We deceive ourselves and try to find happiness in disobedience, we labor to escape the light and to remain in darkness because of our fondness for the pleasures of sin that endure for a season. We fear His light and we madly flee his presence and yet he follows after.

Prayer—O Lord of Love forbear not to follow with Thy light, though it burn our consciences and reveal the black selfishness of our souls. Show us the Father in His beauty that our souls may desire Him. Deliver us from the vain shadows of sense and from the vanity of our desires. Amen.

PASTOR GIVES BOOKS.

United Church Sunday School Library Enriched By Volumes.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 24.—Rev. Joseph Wilks has generously donated fifty volumes from his fine library for the Sunday school of the United church.

About thirty volumes are of a religious and theological character, and the remainder are standard poetical works. Teachers and members of the adult classes, with leaders in the young peoples' organizations of the church will find the library of much practical value, and indeed it will provide a supply of helpful literature that has long been desired in connection with the school.

This library will be kept separate from the regular school library, and will be put in place as soon as new shelving can be built for its accomodation. The executive of the school appointed Mr. Fallis, superintendent, Mrs. Rea, teacher of the Boneka class, and the superintendent of the primary department a committee to wait on Rev. Mr. Wilks and thank him for his generous gift.

BOY ACQUITTED.

Killed His Half Brother in Self Defence.

WELLAND, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Frederick Salisbury, aged 18, was acquitted of a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of William T. Ward, his 39-year-old half-brother by a jury at the assizes last night after a few minutes deliberation.

The evidence indicated that Salisbury had been engaged in a quarrel with his half-brother but the defence pleaded self-defence. According to the evidence of Ward's 13-year-old son, his father had beaten his own mother and Salisbury had been drawn into the quarrel.

LOVERS KILLED.

Engagement Sunday— Both Die Monday.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Feb. 24—The betrothal of Miss Mary C. McClellan, 24, of Scranton Pa., and William M. Feuchter, 26, a Syracuse University graduate, and employee of the D. & W. Railroad at Roseville, N.J., was announced at the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity house here Saturday night.

Yesterday the bodies of the two lovers, whose romance started on the campus hills of old Syracuse, lie side by side at the county morgue, victims of a tragic automobile accident. The couple were fatally injured when the taxicab in which they were riding skidded and crashed into a street car here last Monday night.

Housework won't worry you if you have abundant vitality, for the real burdens of housework are run down nerves and lack of vitality. These are what make you feel sometimes that you are not strong enough to go on any further and that you must just lie down for a rest.

Medical research has definitely proved that one of the causes of a run down condition of the body is a shortage of certain mineral elements, including iron, potassium, calcium, sodium and phosphorus, and until a sufficient supply of these minerals is restored to the body, good health is impossible. Wincarnis contains every one of these elements in addition to other health giving ingredients, and in a form in which they are most rapidly absorbed into the blood and carried to every part of the body to be converted into vital force.

Wincarnis has been recommended by over ten thousand physicians in cases of nervousness, anaemia, sleeplessness, and the general debility that accompanies a run down body. For fifty years this strength giver and nerve restorative has brought new life and happiness to weakened men and women.

USE UNEMPLOYED ON PUBLIC WORK LLOYD GEORGE PROPOSES AS DOLE SUBSTITUTE

Points Out That Germany Adopted That Scheme During Post War Unemployment—Conversation With Churchill Noted.

LONDON, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—Former Premier Lloyd George may be responsible for some non-party attempt to deal in a better way with the unemployment problem.

In the course of a discussion of grants for public works in the House of Commons last night, Mr. Lloyd George appealed to the Government to seek a more suitable method than demoralizing doles to deal with this question. He pointed out that when Germany emerged from her period of unemployment, it would be found that she had used her unemployed for the permanent enrichment of her resources.

Mr. Lloyd George urged the Government to appoint a departmental or cabinet committee to ascertain whether it was possible to utilize the unemployed in some great work of public utility.

Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, later had a conversation with the former Premier and also with Walter Runciman, of the Liberal party, which lobby gossip connected with this appeal to the Government.

LIBERAL INTRODUCES BILL FOR 10 PER CENT. BEER IN PROVINCE; PREMIER AND RANEY CLASH AGAIN

O. T. A. Amendment Proposed By J. A. Pinard—Currie Wants Government Control.

FIRST READING.

Speaker of Legislature Rules Raney's Question Was Proper.

TORONTO, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—The Ontario Temperance Act is under attack through bills introduced by private members in the Legislature. Yesterday J. A. Pinard (Liberal, East Ottawa) introduced a bill which would allow the sale of ten per cent. beer in Ontario instead of 4.4. R. L. Brackin (West Kent) seconded the motion of introduction. Previously Col. J. A. Currie (Conservative, Toronto) had brought in a bill for government control of hard liquors and a measure to sell beer and native wine in those districts which voted "wet" in the last plebiscite. None of the bills were discussed but were given first reading in the usual way.

There was the usual before the order of the day questions, and W. E. Raney, Progressive leader, complained of the manner in which certain formal questions had been answered by the Government. He quoted from various authorities on Parliamentary procedure in an endeavor to show that the Government was obliged to answer his questions. The Premier replied with further quotations from various other authorities. Speaker Thompson, however, simplified the whole matter by stating that he would abide by the ruling of Speaker Lowther in the British House of Commons "that private members could ask questions, but the Government was not obliged to answer them."

Mr. Raney started things by pointing out that on Friday last Premier Ferguson, in reply to a question of Mr. Raney's, as to whether the Government had drafted a government sale of liquor bill, stated that the question was improper and should not have appeared upon the order paper.

Is Proper Question.

Mr. Raney contended that the question was entirely proper. The Premier's contention that the Government could not be queried upon questions of policy was quite incorrect, said Mr. Raney. He quoted such authorities as Bourinot and May to show that members could question the Government on matters of intention or policy.

"I do not know whether the Premier is a greater authority than these, but I doubt it," was one of Mr. Raney's opening shafts.

"I want to know," concluded Mr. Raney, "whether we are to be allowed to ask proper questions or whether the Government is to be allowed to hide behind its own interpretation of some rule that no one ever heard of."

Col. Currie rose to read a line or two from the rules of the House. "Here's the forecast lawyer," remarked Mr. Raney, amid laughter, but he withdrew the remark when requested to do by some Conservatives, notably Hon. Forbes Godfrey.

"There's not a tittle of foundation for the Progressive leader's argument and he knew it. It is just another characteristic effort of his," Premier Ferguson stated in reply.

U. S. WETS TO WORK FOR REFERENDUM

Want Vote Taken at Same Time as Election of 1928.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. — (United Press.—A program to force the wet and dry issue before the nation for a referendum at the 1928 presidential election was adopted by the second face the fact conference of the association against the prohibition amendment.

After speakers from all parts of the country had voiced the "evils of prohibition" in a ten hour session, Capt. W. H. Stayton, chairman of the association, announced that political and legislative committees had been formed for modification of the Volstead act.

GOOD ATTENDANCE AT TWO CHURCHES

Anglican and United Congregations Heard Good Sermons.

MARMORA, Feb. 24.—Exceptionally good attendances marked the services at the Anglican and United churches on Sunday. At the evening service at the latter place of worship the choir excelled itself in its rendering the anthem, "I Lay My Sins on Jesus." Miss Gertie Potts took the initial solo very sweetly while the second solo was effectively taken by Rev. F. J. Horwood. Mr. Horwood chose "Rejoicing" as his topic, selecting Philippians 4, 4 as his text. He endeavoured to show the interpretation of rejoicing according to the principles of Jesus Christ. "It might be asked what relation hath religion with amusement?" he said. "Christ issued the injunction to be happy. We are bound to aecept also what Paul doubly emphasized in one verse. Social religion demands, however, that amusements be active, recreative, elevated and conscientous." The remainder of the sermon consisted of an elaboration of these four points.

At the afternoon session of the Sunday school the attendance was the best for the past two years.

Wednesday next, being St. Matthias Day, there will be a celebration of Holy Communion at St. Paul's at 10 a.m. At evensong at 7.30 p.m. the special preacher will be the Rev. Arthur Strothers, rector of Madoc.

OTTAWA, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—Hon. J. A. Robb, minister of Finance, last night announced the issue of $105,000,000 Dominion of Canada bonds to provide for the refunding of maturing loans. All of the maturing bonds are payable in New York. Of the new issue $65,000,000 will be payable in Canada and the balance in New York. All the new bonds bear interest at 4½ per cent.

The bonds will be offered in Canada by a country-wide syndicate.

DANCE MUCH ENJOYED.

Many From Outside Points Attended—Satisfactory Financially.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 24. — The community dance under the auspices of L.O.L. No. 79, held in the Town Hall, on Thursday evening, was well patronized, at least one hundred couples being present.

Excellent music was furnished by the Byam family orchestra, and L. H. Morton was floor manager for the square dances, which interspersed the programme at intervals.

A number of car loads drove in from Cavan, Port Hope, Peterboro, Garden Hill and other outside points, and dancing was kept up until about 2 a.m. Wives and daughters of members of the lodge furnished the refreshments and a bountiful supper was served about midnight, the thorough enjoyment of the occasion causing the majority of the guests to remain for another hour or two before the gathering finally broke up.

On the whole this was voted the most successful dance held under Orange auspices for some time. Financially, the results were quite satisfactory.

There were twenty tables of euchre and competition was keen, several of the prizes being drawn for by two or more persons. Mrs. Richard H. Cole secured ladies' first, Mrs. Arthur Tripp got the prize for lone hands, Mrs. A. Ibey the ladies' consolation prize. T. E. Hall won gents' first prize, Chas. Ackerman the prize for lone hands and Harry E. Cassan the consolation prize. After the game the ladies of the lodge served lunch.

YOUTH SURRENDERS HELD FOR MURDER

Port Arthur Boy Charged With Patricide.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Weitto Lyyttenen is in a cell in the district court house awaiting preliminary hearing on a charge of murdering his father by shooting near their home Sunday evening.

The boy, who is sixteen years of age, was placed under arrest after he had been taken to the provincial police headquarters by his mother and uncle.

Monday night, at dusk, the boy who had disappeared in the woods following the shooting, turned up at his mother's house at Kivikoski. He told his mother and uncle that he did not think he had killed his father. They told him his father was dead. Tuesday morning they started into the city with him. There is a possibility that the inquest, which was set for next Monday night, may be set forward in order that the boy can take take his preliminary hearing as speedily as possible. Weitto speaks no English.

BASKET SOCIAL

Good Sum Was Realized at Entertainment in Young's Point.

YOUNG'S POINT, Feb. 24 — On Thursday evening the United Church held a most successful concert and basket social in Charlton's Hall. The hall was packed with an attentive audience and the proceeds amounted to $79.80.

The concert was splendid in every detail. Rev Mr. Kemp of Lakefield, pastor of the United Church here, acted as chairman, and his witty sayings were much enjoyed by the audience.

The McCue brothers of Chemong who rendered a number of mandolin selections in a splendid manner, received hearty applause. Johnny Hill also delighted the audience with his comic songs, Chinese, Scotch and Irish, and was encored heartily.

A minstrel sketch consisting of songs, dancing and witty sayings, formed a big part in the evening's enjoyment. Those taking part were Ernest Dunford, Oswald Brooks, Roy McIlmoyle, Norman Hurl, Wesley Cummings and Clint McComb.

A pantomine, "Some Day the Silver Cord will break," was given by five girls, Edith Hockaday, Edna Freeburn, Helen Coones, Edna Hurl and May Cummings. The solo was sung off-stage by Mrs. Norman Hurl.

The dialogue, "Her Aunts Love Affair," received a hearty laugh, the players being Mrs. Roland Bullock of Lakefield, Misses Ettie Bullock and Olive McNaughton.

Mr. Percy Northey rendered several violin selections accompanied by his sister Miss Northey of Haultain.

Twenty eight baskets were auctioned by John McIlmoyle, Miss Margaret Hurls bringing the highest bid, $4.50.

Other items on the programme were:

Recitation: "I Don't Care," Kathleen Lane.

Solo: Norman Walsh, "The Prisoner's Song."

Solo: Helen McGee, "Yes ,sir-Thats my Baby."

Recitation: Mrs. Roland Bullock.

Solo: Mrs. Norman Hurl.

PROGRESS SHOWN IN ANNUAL STATEMENT

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Hastings, Has Had Successful Year.

HASTINGS, Feb. 23. — The annual meeting of the congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, was held in the basement of the church on Wednesday evening.

The meeting opened with the singing of a hymn in unison and prayer by Rev. D. A. Thomson.

The chairman of the Board of Managers, Mr J. A. Brown, was nominated chairman of the evening, and Mr. C. P. Doughty, secretary.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and adopted.

The report of the session was submitted by the Moderator, and gave a short resume of the affairs of the church under the oversight of the session. Three members were added to the session during the year, and one has removed from Hastings.

The Sabbath school report was a very encouraging one indeed, and showed that the teachers and scholars were faithful in their attendance and duties and the report evidenced progress in every department of the school.

Mrs. William Fleming read the report of the Woman's Missionary Society giving a glowing report of the work accomplished by this society and their activities since the reorganization after June 10, 1926.

The Ladies' Aid report was given by Miss Mary Spooner for the treasurer, Mrs. A. E. Spooner. This organization has just recently been organized ,and has accomplished wonders in the short time since it has been in working order. A verbal report was presented from the Young People's Society and it was felt that the young people had a society which was making great strides and keeping the young people together in the congregation.

The treasurer Mr. W. R. Learmouth submitted the financial statement of the congregation for the past year.

The report showed the congregation to be in good financial condition, with a balance on the right side of the ledger.

Mr. Learmouth was re-elected as treasurer, and was tendered a hearty vote of thanks by those present for his services.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the different organizations of the church on the reports of the year.

The choir and its leader received a hearty vote of thanks for the leading in the service of praise, as did also the ushers.

The minister, Rev. D. A. Thomson, received a very hearty vote of thanks for his work in the congregation, and as minister during the year.

Rev. Mr. Thomson replied thanking all for their many kind words of appreciation.

Messrs. Gordon Johnson, Roy Skinkle and Walter Humphries were re-elected to the Board of Managers for the next two years.

After Rev. Thomson closed the meeting with prayer the ladies of the congregation served a dainty lunch.

If Your Skin is Normal it is Without Blemish

Mother, the Health Doctor, says:

Give your skin a chance. Use Lifebuoy regularly—exclusively—for casual cleansing and for the bath. Its rapidly vanishing cleanly odour is your assurance of its antiseptic value.

A CLEAR, velvety-smooth skin from head to toe—that is the normal skin.

Any roughness or eruption is unnatural and unnecessary.

Most skin blemishes are caused by infection from the thousand and one things we touch during daily life—things that others have touched—by lack of towel friction after the bath, or the use of harsh, adulterated and so-called beauty soaps.

From babyhood to old age the purity and antiseptic qualities of Lifebuoy Soap will keep the skin normal and alive, and free from blemish.

Lifebuoy's mild, creamy lather goes into the pores and keeps them open—alive—and protects against infection.

For a healthy, velvety-smooth skin, use Lifebuoy, the world's most widely used soap.

TRENT RIVER NEWS.

TRENT RIVER, Feb. 23.—Mrs. W. Cross, Norwood road, who is ill in the Havelock hospital, is reported to be slightly improving.

Mrs. Tom Sedgwick has been ill again. Her many friends wish her a good recovery.

Mrs. John Garneau has spent the week visiting her daughters, Mrs. C. Jones and Mrs. M. Rylott of Marmora.

Mr. N. Garneau has removed the high board fence inclosing the open air rink and skating will not be resumed further for this season.

Mr. Joe Dunn, who was injured by a falling tree a few weeks ago, is not improving very rapidly, as he was considerably bruised internally and it will be some time before he will be able to go back to work.

Rev. Forbes Stillman of Norwood United Church take charge of the service here Sunday afternoon next.

The Trustees of the Public School had men engaged draining and cleaning the well on the school premises Wednesday.

There was a large attendance at the L.O.B.A. progressive euchre held at Mrs. A. Wight's Tuesday night.

The Ladies' Aid are arranging a play in aid of church funds for the near future. Rehearsals are under way.

DAY OF PRAYER WAS OBSERVED

Missionary Societies of All Norwood Churches Assembled.

CHURCH SERVICES

NORWOOD, Feb. 23.—The Women's Day of Prayer for Missions was held on Friday afternoon in the Sunday School room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The suggested programme was used. Mrs. (Rev.) McLennan of the Baptist Church presided. The first part of the programme was taken by the ladies of the Baptist Congregation. Mrs. J. Stevens read the Scripture reading and Mrs. Jno. Rorabeck offered prayer. The Anglican ladies were represented on the programme by Mrs. E. P. Cuffe. The ladies of the Presbyterian Congregation had charge of the second part of the programme, prayers being offered by Mrs. Rork, Mrs. W. D. Robson Mrs. J. Frost and Mrs. Edith Tedford

Mrs. (Rev.) Stillman, Mrs. (Rev.) Wesley and Mrs. Wm. Spence of the United Church offered prayers of thanksgiving for what had been accomplished in averting war, and establishing righteous peace between nations; for international endeavor to right social evils. Also for the further effectiveness of the League of Nations in establishing the principles of Jesus Christ in world relationships and for the evangelization of China.

The latter part of the programme was given over to the W.C.T.U. Mrs. Lawlor, president of the Union, gave a short synopsis of the work of the Union after which prayers were offered by Mrs. O. Buck, Mrs. G. A. Brethen, Mrs. J. Long and Mrs Lawlor for the homes and youth of all nations, for king, country and empire

A very interesting address on religions of China was given by Mrs. (Dr.) Mortimer Clarke. Solos were rendered by Mrs. N. C. Porter and Miss Lillian Hugill.

There was a very large attendance of ladies from all the Protesant churches of the village.

Anniversary services will be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Norwood, on Sunday, Feb. 28, at which a free-well offering will be taken.

Rev. E. O. Seymour of Havelock preached at both services in the United Church on Sunday last. Splendid discourses were delivered at both serives. Rev. F. Stillman, pastor of the local church preached in Havelock and Trent River.

Lenten services are being held in Christ Church (Anglican) and St. Paul's Roman Catholic Churches.

A meeting of the Upper Canada Bible Society will be held on Thursday evening next in the Baptist Church at which the Rev. Mr. Herrington of Toronto will be the speaker.

The Young People' League of the United Church purpose holding a skating party on Monday evening.

The Anglican A.Y.P.A. has been re-organized.

The first of a series of group socials to be given under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society and Young Women's Auxiliary of the former Presbyterian Church was held on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Clarke, Queen Street. Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Weir were the hostesses. An enjoyable time was spent by all present.

of

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

May Stop That Cough

Mr. Frank D. Comeau, West Bathurst, N.B., writes:—"I had a very bad cold and cough that settled on my lungs, and I thought that I would never get rid of it.

One day a friend spoke to me about your wonderful remedy, so I sent and got a bottle of it, and after the first dose I took I got relief, and by the time I had finished the bottle I was completely relieved of all my trouble."

THE KAISER'S BIRTHDAY.

The ex-kaiser of Germany recently celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday at his castle at Doorn, Holland, with his wife and her children in the quietest fashion. In the above photograph he is shown walking with his wife, Princess Hermoine, and her daughter on his birthday to pay a visit to a few old friends.

MANY ATTENDED ANNUAL CARNIVAL

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 23. — Thursday night was gala night at the Rink on the occasion of the annual fancy dress carnival. Between 450 and 500 were present, the percentage of these in costume being large and the variety of the costumes especially good. The music for the evening was provided by the Citizens' Band, and was much enjoyed by spectators and skaters, adding as it does a festive note.

The costumes were varied and excellent, the proportion of original costumes being large. There were the usual assortment of pierrettes, pierrots, clowns, tramps, Jews, Gypsies, boys dressed as girls and girls dressed as boys, and many outstanding costumes. A very clever impersonation of Night is worthy of mention, also the Musical Peri, the costume of the Majola Oil Girl, the Green Corn, and the Flame. Crepe paper played an important part as usual, and assisted or composed many of the costumes. The Lakefield Service and Gas Station was a unique impersonation, the gas tank had an electric light which flashed on and off, a measuring rod and every detail complete, the helper in overalls, oil can and monkey wrench, added the last touch. There were several Highland lassies, and no less than three devils all in scarlet with horns and tails complete. A cat and mouse were especialy good, and one saw the unusual spectacle of the mouse chasing the cat as often as the cat chasing the house. A small boy in flaxen wig attired as Dolly Dimple puzzled everyone, as it was the general impression that it was a little girl. Tommy Tiptoe was good among the smaller children. Bill Lambe was a splendid girl, and created considerable diversion by skating in both boys' and girls' classes. Grandfather frog was very cleverly done, and also Simple Simon, who ran a close race for the comic prize. Dr. Smith's impersonation of Mephisto was excellent, his costume being complete in every detail.

A distinguished visitor, who announced that he had just returned from Prince Albert, was Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, in afternoon attire, impersonated by N. R. Wagar.

The judges were Messrs. E. W. Bailey, N. H. Casement, W. J. Charlton, G. J. Elmsley and R. J. Jory, who awarded the prizes as follows:

Lady's fancy costume — Mrs. William Millage—a Lady of 1840.

Gentleman's fancy costume—Mr. C. F. Webster—Zulu Chief.

Girl's fancy costume — Miss Thelma Carveth—Rainbow.

Boy's fancy costume—Gray Kemp—Parrot.

Lady's comic costume—Mrs. W. E. Gillman—Gasoline Tank.

Gentleman's comic costume — Mr. James Cockburn—Jew.

Girl's comic costume — Miss Lilian Mason—Grandma.

Boy's comic costume — Charlie Tanner—Mr. and Mrs. Bumble.

Special prize for child under ten—Miss Cora Charlton—a Red Cross Nurse.

The judges had a difficult task in judging the costumes, as there were so many good costumes in each class.

After the prizes had been given by the president of the Rink Co., E. W. Bailey, the ice was free to all skaters, who spent a happy evening enjoying themselves till the signal was given for departure.

This was the most successful carnival held in the rink, both financially and in the quality of the costumes.

Among those in costume were: Mrs. M. Dever, Samantha Allen; Mrs. Wm. Millage, Lady of 1840; Mrs. Ira Lennox, Aladdin; Mrs. R. J. Knox, Lady of the Harem; Mrs. Russell Ball, Rose; Mrs. N. H. Stabler, Queen of Hearts; Mrs. Sam Trude, Aunt Jemima; Mrs. A. C. Carveth, Snow Queen; Mrs. W. E. Gillman and Mrs. G. G. AUNT SUSAN'S VISIT

"Aunt Susan's Visit,' 'a four-act play, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of Bridgenorth United Church, was the attraction that filled the Foresters' Hall in Bridgenorth on Friday night.

The plot hinges on a visit paid by Aunt Susan of Pepper's Corner, a very wealthy and very eccentric lady, to her nephew, John Thomas Tibbs. The latter has a genuine affection for his aunt, but his wife is socially ambitious and is loath to have the genteel atmosphere of the house disturbed by the presence of a fussy, rustic old lady from the country. One of the Tibbs girls, Rebecca Jane, also a social climber, has no use for common folk and along with her mother, resolves that, cost what it may, Aunt Susan must be prevented from meeting any of their elegant guests and especially Senator Smith, whom Mrs. Tibbs hopes to have one day for a son-in-law. The other daughter, Mary Alice Tibbs, has a real liking for Aunt Susan and takes no part in the attempt to hide her from the view of the aristocratic friends of the family. But Aunt Susan is not easily kept under. During a call from two of the 'best people,' Mrs. Johnston Highborn and her son, who is not uninterested in Rebecca Jane Tibbs, Aunt Susan appears on the scene and enters volubly into conversation with the guests. Mrs. Tibbs, at first overcome by mortification, is later astonished to observe that Aunt Susan's kindly way and shrewd common sense make an impression, which culminates in a cordial invitation extended to Aunt Susan to visit the Highborn home. The effort to keep Aunt Susan and Senator Smith apart is equally unsuccessful. They meet and the whole family is astonished by the revelation that the Senator and Aunt Susan are old friends who were brought up together in Pepper's Corner. The effort to unite the Senator and ambitious, haughty Rebecca Jane is unsuccessful, but Mrs. Tibbs is consoled by the fact that he exhibits a marked preference for plain Mary Alice.

Mrs. Tibbs' antagonism to Aunt Susan is entirely broken down when her husband, John Thomas, falls seriously ill and is nursed back to health by the devoted efforts of the despised old aunt. From that time she takes a delight in bringing Aunt Susan to the notice of all her friends and the last act of the play is occupied by a farewell party given by Mrs. Tibbs on the eve of Aunt Susan's departure for Pepper's Corner.

Mrs. Albert Nicholls was Aunt Susan, Mrs. Jobe took the part of Mrs. Linda Suggs, an unaristocratic friend of the Tibbs family whom Aunt Susan, with true plebeian perversity, became very fond. Miss Phyllis Jopling was the cold, scheming Rebecca Jane, Mrs. Melville McWilliams, the warm-hearted Mary Alice Tibbs; Miss Jean Touchburn was Pauline, the maid in the Tibbs' household; Miss Freida Jobe was Mrs. John T. Tibbs; Mrs. Fred Jopling was Mrs. Johnston Highborn, the caller on the Tibbs; Mrs. Marcus Fowler, Miss Helen Jopling, and Mrs. J. V. McNeely were, respectively, Mrs. Sodden, Mrs. Jenkins and Mrs. Wheatley, guests at the farewell party.

The Rev. J. V. McNeely was Senator Smith, Garbutt Mann was Mr. Johnston Highborn, and Melville McWilliams was John Thomas Tibbs, the nephew of Aunt Susan and the purveyor of cash for the furthering of the social aspirations of Mrs. Tibbs.

At the farewell party in the fourth act, a piano solo was rendered by Mrs. Tibbs (Miss Jobe); a reading, "The Ladies' Aid," by Senator Smith (Mr. McNeely); a solo, "Home Sweet Home," by Aunt Susan (Mrs. Nicholls); a reading, "The New Church Organ," by Mrs. Wheatley (Mrs. McNeely); a reading, "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," by Mr. J. Highborn (Mr. Mann.) At the conclusion of the party, the cast all joined hands in singing "Aud Lang Syne."

Between the acts the McCue brothers from Curve Lake Indian Reserve, played Hawaiian music, each number of which was rapturously encored.

LIBERAL INTRODUCES

"Why don't you keep your temper?" interrupted Mr. Raney. "I haven't lost my temper," replied Mr. Ferguson. "As I have said before, I am immune from fleas and mosquitos."

Business in Secret.

"The honorable member," continued the Premier heatedly, "criticized the secretary of the caucus. During the three years that he and his friends were in power they held more caucuses than had been held here in the last ten years, and even a newspaper man could not pry out of any member what went on. He is indulging in hair-splitting again in the hope that the public may get the impression that we are doing the people's business in secret here. Something has been said about him being a tough old bird. Well I thing he is getting tougher every day. I think he is losing cast as a parliamentarian."

"The Prime Minister must be wrong or he wouldn't be so offensive," interrupted Mr. Raney. "Abuse is not answering my argument."

"My honorable friend gets irritatable every time he is wrong," retorted the Premier.

Rules With Raney.

"The purpose of these questions is to give to the country the impression that the Government is afraid to announce its policy. To be able to go out and say we will not say what our policy is. In other words he wants to misrepresent the position of the Government."

"The Government's position is that we will enforce the O.T.A. as long as it is on the statute books. But if the Government should reach the conclusion there should be a change, some improvement in the Act, the Government will not hesitate to say so to the public."

The Sneaker then quoted British precedents to show that the questions had been properly asked and placed on the order paper, but that the Government did not have to answer them unless it wished.

"Hear, hear," exclaimed Mr Raney, amid Liberal and Progressive applause, while the Government ranks were silent. In introducing his ten per cent. amendment to the O.T.A., J. A. Pinard explained that several years ago he brought in a 4.4 amendment and it was defeated, but later the Government itself had given effect to that very thing. Now he hoped that his ten per cent. amendment would find a place on the statute books, sooner or later.

'GET ON WITH, ETC.'

He then proceeded to declare that the question of what powers should have permanent seats arose long before Germany's entry came under discussion that the cases of these claimants had been postponed and that the council carried on from year to year with temporary members almost as if they held permanent seats.

The whole machinery of the league had been held up partly for the entrance of Germany. He layed stress on this point because much of what had been said and written was due to a misunderstanding that this problem had been postponed until Germany's entry and had unavoidably to be discussed when any alteration was made in the composition of the council.

The minister would discuss no individul claim, but desired to submit a view which had received too little attention. The council with Germany would consist of eleven members. Were eleven members sufficient to speak the moral judgment of the world when at any given moment in most solemn and critical circumstances six out of the eleven might be unable to give a vote or take part in a decision because they themselves were interested parties and the views of the council might be the views of a minority?

Recognized by World

It seemed to him that it was putting too great a strain upon their loyalty and faith. If there could be sound and suitable additions to the council, there was good reason for some addition to its numbers, so that in cases where so much depended upon the moral authority of the council's decision, that decision might be recognized by the world as authorative.

He concluded: "We welcome Germany to the League of Nations because we believe it is a step in the reconciliation between the enemies of yesterday, upon which depends the peace of tomorrow. To deny the right of any other nation's claim even to be considered is a denial which German statesmen are too wise to make in the interests of their own country in its new position in the newly constructed world and its relation to foreign nations."

The YELLOW STUB

by Ernest Lynn

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the yellow stub of a theater ticket.

JIMMY RAND, his son, goes to Chicago, where the theater is. The stub is traced to THOMAS FOGARTY, politician, who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints in his arms when she learns police want her for murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees them and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub and handkerchief might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder. Jimmy receives several mysterious warnings to leave Chicago but ignores them. Later he is attacked at night by two men. He escapes, after seizing a blackjack from one of them.

With Jimmy and Mary estranged, Church presses his advantage and gets Mary's promise to marry him. Mary tells Jimmy this when they meet. Jimmy, trying to hurt her, accuses her of marrying for money.

He goes out that evening with Olga "trying to forget." They are walking along the street when she sees the man she had been looking for, sitting in an automobile. Jimmy recognizes him as one of the men who had attacked him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The two of them stood transfixed for a moment staring at the face in the automobile window. The man was sitting on the right of the driver. He was looking straight ahead.

And then, just as the car began to move and while Jimmy was gathering his scattered wits together preparatory to making a leap for the running board, the man turned and saw them.

He jumped, and turned to his companion and whispered something in his ear. The automobile shot ahead with a grinding of gears. Jimmy could see the man—he was wearing a cap pulled down tightly on his head—snap back in his seat as the car leaped forward.

"A taxi!" Jimmy yelled, grabbing Olga by the hand and fairly pulling her with him toward the cab stand a few steps ahead.

He pushed her roughly into the first one at hand. "Follow that car," he said to the astonished driver. "That green sedan. Step on it—he's trying to give me the slip."

He shouted in the driver's ear, after closing the door behind him. "Ten dollars if you don't let him get away!"

Olga moved up close to him, white of face and nervous.

"I'm afraid, Jim." She clutched his arm. "I'm afraid."

"This is what we've been waiting for," he answered, patting her hand. "Don't go to pieces now. There's nothing to be afraid of. I'm going to hail the first policeman I see and take him along. I'm only afraid they'll get away from us in this traffic."

He thanked his lucky stars for the driver they had chanced upon. The cab was weaving in and out of the lane of automobiles almost like a football runner in the open field. Never once did they lose sight of the car ahead of them, and to Jimmy it seemed that the distance between them was being perceptibly cut down. They careened around a corner, the sudden turn knocking him out of his seat and slamming Olga up into the corner.

He laughed as Olga helped him scramble back to his seat. "Do you know who that man was we saw in that car?" he asked her.

"No—only that it's the man I went out with that night. The same man I told you and Lieutenant O'Day about."

"Well, it's the same man I had the fight with that night—one of the men who followed me home. I didn't get a good look at the other fellow in the car—the man at the wheel—but I wouldn't be surprised if it was the man who was with him that night."

"Oh Jim, I'm nervous—I'm afraid."

"Afraid of what? Good Lord, girl, don't talk like that when the answer to this whole mystery is almost in our hands." He clenched his fists. "If I get my hands on that man I'll get the truth out of him if I have to choke it out."

"I'm afraid of what they'll do to you, Jim, if we do catch up with them. They'll shoot you; they'll do anything to get away."

They had left the brightly lighted downtown district behind and were racing through dark streets in a shabby residential neighborhood.

"Don't go in sight," muttered Jimmy, "and we haven't time to stop and look for one."

The driver shouted at him through the open window at his back. "Say, brother what do you do when you catch these dudes?"

"Hold them until we can get a cop," Jimmy shouted back.

"Count me out. I'm not holding anybody that don't want to be held. They may be tough boys. I don't want to get plugged."

"There, you heard what he said," Olga cautioned Jimmy. "They'll shoot if you try to stop them."

"We're gaining on them," he said, paying no attention to her warning. "They're less than half a block ahead. Step on it, driver," he called through the window.

"She's all the way down now, buddy. Ain't we gaining fast enough to suit you? Whoa there!" He slammed on the brakes. "Look at 'em now."

The green sedan had come to a sudden stop alongside the curb. Two men jumped out and ran straight for the house in front of which they had stopped. Jimmy saw them cut across the lawn and disappear into the darkness of the front porch.

The taxi jolted to a stop, and Jimmy hopped out.

"Where are you going?" Olga cried, grabbing him by the arm.

"I'm going in after them. Are you coming with me?" he said to the driver.

"Who—me? Not a chance, brother. I'm staying right out here in my little gas buggy. Take a tip from me and don't go in there. You might get crowned."

"Listen to him, Jim." Olga was pleading with him. "He's right. Don't go in there after them. Let's find a policeman and then go in."

"And let them get away?" he cried. "Do you think I've been waiting all this time for a chance like this only to throw it away? I'm going in the house. You two get a policeman."

"No, Jim!" She clung to his arm frantically.

"Let me go." He tore himself loose and she fell in a heap to the pavement. He ran across the grass and up the steps. There he turned and shouted back to them. "Go on and get a policeman if you want to help."

The front door was ajar. He flung it open and the house inside was in utter darkness. He struck a match and found himself in a long hallway. The match flickered and he strained his ears and eyes for sound or sight of the men who had gone in ahead of him.

The match went out and the gloom enveloped him again. He started feeling his way along the wall, had taken perhaps two or three slow steps when he heard a slight scuffing sound in the rear of the house. It sounded like heavy feet scraping along the floor. His only thought was that the pair were making their escape through the back, and he sprang forward in the darkness toward the door that the match had revealed at the end of the hall.

The noises were louder now. He heard a knob turn in a door and saw just ahead of him, in the kitchen, a dim, shadowy form—crouching. Out of the darkness another and larger figure loomed—close beside him. He ducked instinctively, but too late. A crashing blow caught him squarely on the temple and he sank limply to the floor. He heard the door slam and then consciousness left him.

He awoke to find the blinding rays of a flashlight turned full on his face. Voices murmured about him. A slim, cool hand was on his forehead. It was Olga's. She was kneeling beside him.

The voice behind the flashlight said: "You were lucky they were in a hurry to get away or they might have bumped you off. You're a pretty reckless young feller, aren't you?"

It was a policeman.

"Wh—what happened?" Jimmy gsked, dazedly.

"Well, if you don't know, nobody else does. This young lady and the taxi driver here found me down the street and said you had run in this house after a couple of roughnecks. You've got a bump on the side of the head where somebody hit you. Some wallop!"

"And they got away?" Jimmy asked.

"Clean. I've looked all around and I've got a squad to come and search the neighborhood. What's the game? What were you after them for? Who were they?" He volleyed the questions at Jimmy.

"One of them I'm pretty sure is a murderer. Ask Lieutenant O'Day. He knows about it."

"Don't ask him any more questions, officer, please." It was Olga. She had wet her handkerchief at the faucet—they were in the kitchen of the house—and was applying cold water to Jimmy's temple.

"Did you ever see the men before?" The officer turned to the taxi driver.

"I haven't seen them yet. This man and the lady pile into my cab and tell me to follow the green sedan. I do, and here's where we ended. I didn't get a good look at either of the guys in it. This guy here wanted me to come into the house with him. Hell, I've got a wife and family. I should get bumped off in somebody else's argument!"

"You did just right. I don't blame you," the officer answered. "This young bucko here has got too much nerve for his own good."

"You don't understand how important it was," said Jimmy from the floor. "You'd have done the same thing if you had been in my shoes. You wouldn't have stopped to figure on any danger—" He was interrupted by the clatter of feet on the front porch.

It was a squad of policemen.

Lieutenant O'Day listened attentively to the story that Jimmy and Olga told him. They were sitting beside his desk in the station.

"What did he hit you with?" he asked, looking at Jimmy's face.

"I don't know—it might have been just his fist. He's a great big fellow. I don't remember a thing, Lieutenant—just that blow and then waking up on the floor."

"Come upstairs with me. We'll go up to the Bertillon room. I've got a man now looking up the license number of the sedan. Chances are it's a stolen car. These crooks never use their own. Come on. I want you to look at some pictures."

Upstairs in the Bertillon room he produced several books and threw them down on the table. "Here," he said to Jimmy. "You look through this one, and you," indicating Olga, "take a look at this one. See if you recognize any of the pictures in there. We've got some more files to look at if you don't see anything there."

They turned the pages of the albums. A tense silence fell on the room. It was broken by a cry from Olga.

"Look, Jim—here!" She was pointing with her finger, had risen from her chair in her excitement. "Right here! That's the man!"

CONTRIBUTE TO FUND.

Resolution Was Passed During Course of Social Evening.

NORHAM, Feb. 24—The social evening held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Clark on Friday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of Meyersburg United church was well attended considering the weather and roads, and was much enjoyed by all those present. A resolution was passed making a generous contribution to the Maintenance and Extension fund which will bring the total for the Meyersburg appointment up to the amount requested from the people there. A committee was appointed to arrange for some repairs to the church hall so that it would be a more convenient place for holding public meetings and entertainments.

"They haven't missed a single day at school!"

"They re well all the time. The doctor says they are the healthiest children he knows.

"He told me constipation is what makes so many growing children sickly. Poisons from the waste matter spread through the little bodies, and lower their resistance to disease. So I'm very careful to guard against constipation. I simply give them a little Nujol every night.

"Nujol isn't a laxative at all, you know, but it keeps them just as regular as clockwork. They like it, and the doctor says it's just the thing for them."

Nujol helps Nature in Nature's own way

Mothers are the best friends of Nujol. When their children's health is at stake they seek the remedy that medical authorities approve because it is so safe, so gentle, so natural in its action.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination, without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and let your children enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when their elimination is normal and regular.

Menus for the Family

By Sister Mary.

Breakfast—Canned cherries, top milk, broiled bacon, soft cooked eggs, crisp whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Fish chowder, toasted crackers, cabbage and grape fruit salad, apple tapicoa pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—Broiled shad, lemon butter, boiled rice, lima beans in cream, spinach salad, lemon meringue pie, graham bread, milk, coffee.

Tart canned cherries are very acceptable as a breakfast fruit. Any cannot fruit, not too sweet and well chilled can be used just as stewed dried fruits are used.

If the breakfast bacon is wanted c isp and that's the way it should be dip the fat off as fast as it cooks out if the meat is broiled.

Fish Chowder.

Two pounds cod or haddock, 2 slices salt pork, 1 onion, 3 cups diced potatoes, 2 teaspoons minced parsley, 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons flour, salt and pepper.

Remove fish from bones and cut flesh in small pieces. Cover bones with cold water and bring it to the boiling point. Simmer for 30 minutes. Strain.

Cut pork in small pieces and try out fat. Strain fat into sauce pan and add onion thinly sliced. Cook slowly until a pale straw color. Add potatoes and parsley, pepper and fish stock. Bring to the boiling point, adding water to cover and add fish. Cook until fish is tender about 30 minutes. Add water to prevent sticking as needed but a chowder should not be too thin. When fish is tender add hot milk. Stir flour to a smooth paste with a little cold milk. Stir into chowder and bring to the boiling point but do not let boil. Split 4 Boston crackers and dip in cold milk. Put in soup tureen and pour over chowder. Serve at once.

Costume Slips Reflect Vogue for Flared Lines

Fulness is at the bottom of every smart new frock, and the newest slips now follow the movement. Pictured here is a simple model with just the right amount of fulness to produce a graceful flare when the wearer is in motion, but adhere to the general slim line when in repose. To insure the bodice of one's frock fitting smoothly, there are two small darts in the front and back of the camisole top, and ribbon straps may be used over the shoulders instead of material. The skirt section is in two pieces with a seam on either side. No. 1289 is in sizes 36, 40, 44 and 48 inches bust. Size 36 is suitable for 34 and 36 bust; size 40 for 38 and 40 bust; size 44 for 42 and 44 bust; and size 48 for 46 and 48 bust. Size 40 bust requires 2⅞ yards 32-inch, or 2¼ yards 39-inch material. Price 20 cents.

Every woman's desire is to achieve that smart, different appearance which draws favorable comment from the observing public. The designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book are originated in the heart of the style centers and will help you to acquire that much desired air of individuality. ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

Seeing you have given so many girls such good advice I though I would write for some.

I am a girl of sixteen. I dearly love a man of eighteen. He lives quite aways from me and he has a steady girl friend but he comes to see me every once and a while, and would you please tell me how I can gain this man's love, as I truly love him and I think that he likes me.

I also kept company with another young man last year and now he has gone away. He still writes to me. Please tell me how I can stop him from writing to me as I don't care for him, but he tells me that he loves me, but I know I never could love him so tell me what to do. And also how old a girl should be before she should marry, and is it proper for a fellow to kiss a girl when he is leaving her at a dance or any place else. Can a girl of sixteen know what love is and how late should a fellow stay when he calls on her? Hoping to see my letter in the Peterborough paper as soon as possible as I am going away and would like to see it before I go. I remain,

SNOWFLAKES.

SNOWFLAKES: As you are only sixteen years of age, I don't think you can be absolutely sure about the state of your affections. I don't mean that you can't love someone when you are sixteen, only that love at that age usually lacks permanency. It is just in the experimental stage, so to speak. Your boy friend of eighteen might be included in the same class. If you try hard to win him away from his present girl friend, the time may come when you will wish he was back with her again, and that will be when you see someone else you like better. I don't think I would take him or anyone else very seriously for a few years, if I were you.

As for the other young man who writes you, why stop him? Probably he is about eighteen years old too and enjoys writing to any girl. Why deprive him of the pleasure? And why lose a friend?

The age at which a girl should marry depends on the girl. Some woman could settle down quite happily at eighteen and make admirable wives, while others would be happier if they had waited another ten years. Why not strike a happy medium, and decide to get married when you are about twenty-two or three years of age. Most people have cut their wisdom teeth by then.

If you like a man, you might let him kiss you, provided he doesn't do it too often, but if you let too many men kiss you, you will become "cheap." Save the best of them for a few years longer.

A girl of sixteen thinks she knows all about love. When she is twenty-five, she realizes just how little she knew about it. Juliet was only fourteen when she had her fiery affair with Romeo, but then she was a lady in a book and lived in a different age.

Not later than eleven o'clock, anyway, if her parents like him. If they don't he had better take his departure about half past ten.

WISE WORDS.

The most efficient loud speaker in history is the backfence gossip.

HER OWN WAY

by A GIRL of TODAY

MORE UNDERSTANDINGS.

Chuck looked at me a moment in perfect surprise and then he said:

"Jude, I don't think you understand I'm perfectly willing to marry you—"

I stopped him right there.

"I have just seen a man who was perfectly willing to marry a girl and I came to the conclusion that she was letting herself in for a terrible life, for she seemed perfectly willing to let him marry her. I'm going to try out my own way first."

The word first was rather unfortunate, for it seemed to make Chuck angry again.

"There won't be any 'second' with me, Julia Dean. If you marry me, it'll have to be before this eye gets back to its natural color or not at all."

That comeback should have made me laugh harder than ever. I don't know why I had such a change of feeling, but, as before I had wanted to laugh, now I wanted to cry.

This was my first proposal of marriage and it was so different from what I thought it would be. I had had dreams of what it would be like but now whenit really came, there was not even a thrill or a bit of romance in it.

"Chuck, you don't want to marry me," I told him, "and up to the time Dad went to see you, you hadn't even thought of it. You like me. I'm probably the best pal in the town for you. But, someway, Charlie, there's a difference between loving and wanting a girl. Loving a girl means the only girl and wanting a girl means any girl. You'll find it all out some day when the real girl comes into your life.

"You, as well as I, have seen so many marriages go on the rocks among the older set because the man wanted the girl and the girl wanted to be wanted before her marriage, and after marriage, the man wanted to get rid of the girl and the girl wanted to be rid of him.

There must be some place along the line, Charlie, where one can be happy though married, but some way I've never happened to strike it.

"Ever since I left high school I've determined I would train myself for some kind of service by which I could earn my own living and then I'd never marry a man just because I thought he could take care of me."

Chuck got rather interested in this.

"My goodness, Julia, where did you get those crazy ideas? Leave it to me to pick up a serious one when I know that the girl I really do want is a Jazz-Queen!"

"Then, Chuck, you see you really don't want me."

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A SMART SATIN FROCK.

There are certain things which Madame is interesting herself in for Spring, which I think well worth mentioning at the moment.

I have gained a more definite idea of these things because of a conversation I had with Haidee this morning. She remarked:

"Aren't the cape-coats Madame is doing just too ducky for words?"

"Agreed," I replied instantly. Then I asked:

"What do you think of the simple satin and crepe frocks, the ones with a touch of pique or crepe georgette at the neckline?"

"I think they're the best things Madame is making," Haidie returned. "I'll tell you why."

Then she proceeded to explain what Madame had just outlined to her—the fact that such simple frocks may be matched up with a coat, thus creating an ensemble. But the ensembles achieved in this way are much more likely to be individual than the ready matched ensembles.

"Take this little navy blue satin," Haidie said, indicating a satin frock she was modeling at the moment.

"I'd love to take it," I interrupted, but Haidee went on:

"It's so effective, with its shirring at the waist and its cream georgette crepe jabot and vestee. The point is that one may choose a navy coat, lined with cream or blue or anything, just so it's pretty."

"To be sure," I conceded.

"Well, my point, and Madame's, is that a frock picked out separately in this manner is so much more likely to be becoming than a frock that is simply part of an ensemble."

"But both parts of Madame's ensembles are becoming," I protested.

"Yes, her's may be, but unfortunately many women who buy elsewhere select their ensembles because either the coat or frock is attractive, but not both," Haidee insisted.

Cream Color Crepe Georgette Gives the Proper Spring Touch to Navy Satin.

I consider this a very good point for the average woman to watch. She may do far better by picking carefully a coat that harmonizes with her frock than by looking for the two in ensemble form.

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

"THE WORLD DO MOVE!"

The comely face of the lady Higher Education is again the target for paper wads! This time by a senior in a University who, for a welcome change, writes from the inside looking out, and not from the outside looking in.

But, strangely enough, the changed viewpoint seems to make little difference, and the college youth describes as many warts and moles and freckles on Lady Higher Education's phiz as do the gray-bearded critics outside! He says:

"Papa and mama proudly refer to their offspring as 'college students.' The term is a misnomer. John and Mary are no more students than Henry the Eighth was a woman hater!

"The university of today is an immense varnishing works where one learns to dance, play bridge and poker, carry a load of alcohol gracefully, and invent clever excuses for undone work."

Something tells me that colleges won't be so sardine-packed next year! After all, papas pay the bills!

Men are carrying vanity cases in public, dainty little vanity cases in filigreed gold and burnished metals!

One is supposed to tirade against this sure example of the strong male's downfall. But, mindful of traces of tobacco stain upon manly jowls, and soot specks upon the masculine proboscis, I am inclined to think the male's occasional use of a vanity case mirror not such a dumb idea!

Politics Affecting Women.

Babies come to millions of women upon whom every atom of science and knowledge and luxury is lavished in this day. But babies come to at least 750,000 mothers here every year who do not even have the general country doctor, according to the Department of Agriculture which asks for more rural hospitals.

Housewives of United States are battling the $2,000,000,000 food trust formed in Wall Street recently with the formation of the Ward National Food Products combine. The movement is led by Mrs. Julian Heath of the National Housewives' League. Women everywhere are denouncing this combine as "absolutely foul" and "a menace to the nation."

No wonder women are rabid. A penny more or less on one loaf of bread doesn't mean much to Wall Street, but it means homes with or without radios, and new rugs, a flivver or no flivver, and whether or not Johnny can keep on in school, to millions of "our best people."

BEAUTY TIPS.

Women will, soon be bald and have whiskers on their chins unless they stop bobbing their hair, says a hair expert who explains that constant cutting atrophies the scalp muscles and nerves and causes the hair to drop from the scalp and appear elsewhere on the body, especially on the face.

Oh well, what with boyish bobs getting shorter and shorter, it won't worry the girls much! They'll just paint futuristic scenes atop their bald pates!

But—if you want to keep your hair—don't brush it with a wire brush, and don't put any faith in this singeing stuff!

FASHION.

They're making exquisite, fairy-like evening gowns of mesh bag mail in Paris. Fine jeweler's mesh embroidered in crystal beads until the wearer looks, like a lady from the Age of Chivalry times!

HEDDA HOYT TALKS ABOUT THE THINGS THAT INTEREST THE BUSY WOMAN OF 1926.

TODAY'S FASHION

(Written for the United Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 24 (United Press).—Navy blue is no longer considered one of the dead shades for it is to be revived for Spring. All medium blues as well as dark navy are being stressed by gown manufacturers.

Flexible bracelets in silver or gold are being worn with the wrist watch. One can purchase these half-inch width bracelets in most of the department stores and they are far prettier with the watch than ribbon since they give the band-bracelet effect. They are fitted with safety catches.

Cape effects which will be so popular for coats this coming season are also seen on some of the newer boudoir robes. One model selling for $19.00 is made of heavy satin crepe which is trimmed in matching fringe about the hem border and on the hip-length cape. The arms slip through openings at the side of the robe which are concealed under the cape. A model in coral is extremely lovely being matched by coral fringe. This garment is of wrap-about type, the left front tying on the right hip and the right side tying on the left hip.

Many Spring frocks have an upward movement at the front waistline. That is, the low waistline is higher in front than on the sides and at the rear. This treatment is used where the waistline is suggested by a band treatment.

In spite of the short-skirt vogue, conservative matrons are wearing their skirts 10 inches from the ground. Flappers still wear theirs from 18 to 20 inches.

Choker necklaces are being replaced by slightly longer gold chains from which dangle many jewels in pendant manner. The pendants extend half about the throat, being longer in front and graduating towards the sides.

Colorful stones adorn most of the new jewelry. All colors may be worn in one necklace or bracelet, thus giving the many-colored jewel effect.

Beret tams in tan shade are worn by many smart women at tea time. Both belting ribbon and felt in tan shades are popular.

The aviator cap which fits the head snugly and has tabs coming over the ears is still worn by young girls in New York.

The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin. —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

M. C. J.—You have a good deal of mental ability and could accomplish much along mental lines if you had followed out another life work. As it is, your present condition is one of a certain amount of uncertainty. Life does not always treat you with kid gloves, but then, experience should serve to make you stronger. You may not achieve a great deal of happiness or success in this world, but you can make yourself happier by turning your attention to a few faults in your own nature. You are inclined to be critical. Perhaps you will not admit this and think it is a mistake, but you have an unconscious habit of dwelling too much on the weak points in other and refusing to listen to any criticism of your own conduct. You are kind hearted and generous and willing to help others in many ways, but are selfish in the way of looking for much personal attention and regard to your own wishes. Learn that others have ideas and rights, and respect them. Control your temper and your aptitude for taking a dislike to some without a real cause and you will be a happier woman. Think before you speak, even in trivial matters.

You were born on Friday. Your colors are opal and canary shades.

P. L.—Yes, you are ambitious and you should have some special talent that would carry you far if you could encourage it. Is it necessary that you continue to work in this trade that you have learned? Can you not use it as a means to something better? There are many things that you would excel in. You have an aptitude for business, commerce and finance, or you could make a good surgeon or minister, actor or judge. Rather a wide range, is it not? But if you wish to accomplish anything, and success does not come to your type very early in life, you will have to lift yourself by your own boot-straps—rather a hard task, perhaps, but worth the trial. Decide now what talent you wish to develop and then stick to it—with no side-stepping. Follow your own intuitions, stop worrying and go to work with a will, and curb that extravagant tendency that will ruin your life. Speculation appeals to you. You would make a good real estate dealer. You may accomplish almost anything you wish in life, if you will conquer your temper and tendency to worry. Patience should be your watchword. Aim high, begin important undertakings in August and December, and preferably on Friday. Never forget the Golden Rule of conduct.

You were born on Thursday. Your colors are red and brown. The day you ask about, a Monday, is one on which to co-operate with those around you.

M. O. M.—You have a strong, active mind, rather self-centred, however, and apt to disregard the rights of others. Your life will be one of change and uncertainty at times, filled with experiences which will not always be of the happiest. But you have much within yourself to be thankful for. You have a remarkable will power, poise and skill with your hands, and can influence others for good if you so desire. Do not put things off. That is a bad habit, and do not scold and nag. A quick temper and a tendency to sarcasm also belong to you. You like to be amused and demand constant attention. Do not be extravagant with your money. Try to overcome suspicion and jealousy. Stop making excuses for yourself and put the blame where it belongs. Be more careful of the feelings of others and less tender of your own.

You were born on Monday. Your color is flame, in all its variations from yellow to gas blue.

P. N.—You have a mild, peaceable nature, strongly inclined to home and home life, and should make an admirable husband and father. The care of others in a relationship where the service is inspired by love is your manifest destiny. You belong to the class which is said to be the strongest and the weakest in the world, endowed with great possibilities but not always realizing them or enlarging upon them. You possess the power of making those around you happy and are a good character reader. You have a high sense of honor, but a great degree of sensitiveness which sometimes causes you much worry. Although you may appear cold to strangers, you will go through fire and water for your wife and family and will be happily married. You like to have your own way. Study how to concentrate and learn self-reliance. Take advantage of opportunity and improve upon it. Study yourself. Begin important undertakings in April or August, preferably on Saturday.

You were born on Wednesday. Your colors are scarlet and grey. The day you ask about, a Sunday, is one on which to acquire knowledge and collect information.

RUBBER MARKET DROPS.

Price Down Two Pence on Tuesday.

LONDON, Feb. 24. — Canadian Press. — The London raw rubber market lost it buoyancy Tuesday and in spite of the fact that stocks in London showed a decrease of 457 tons, the price fell two pence a pound, to 26 3-4 pence (50½ cents). Rubber shares on the stock market showed a corresponding weakness.

JUNIOR COLTS TIED CLOTH CO.

Clerks Won 2-1 Decision From Campbellford Hydro.

BOTH GAMES FAST.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 23.—Two of the best games of the Town League were staged at Covert's Arena Monday night. The Junior Colts and Cloth Co. played to a 3 all tie, and the Clerks got the decision over the Hydro, 2 to 1.

The Colts showed improved form over their previous games, and had a slight edge over the Cloth Boys all through the game, but young "Ted" Owens in the Cloth Co. net, turned in a clever goal-tending card against the rather weak shooting of the Colts and many opportunities to register were lost.

The Cloth Boys were leading 1 to 0 at the first rest, but were behind 2 to 1 at the second interval, and the Colts made it 3 to 1 early in the third period, and looked like certain winners, but Rouselle put the Cloth Boys back within hailing distance half-oway through the period. With a couple of minutes to go, Ayrhart carried down and passed across to the left. Judge of play Stewart called the play back for offside, but the Cloth Boys netted the rubber and Referee Nesbitt over-ruled the other official and allowed the score. The Colts are entering a protest.

Line-up

Cloth Co.—T. Owens, goal; W. Owens and Wilks, defence; Rouselle, centre; Ayrhart and Zvisky wings; Reynolds, Nicholson and Reid, subs.

Junior Colts.—Irwin, goal; Davidson and Ingram, defence; Haig centre; Baker and Reynolds, wings; Blute, Bland, Newsome, subs.

Referee—Jack Nesbitt.

Judge of play—Tommy Stewart.

Clerks and Hydro.

The Hydro cut out a dizzy pace at the start of the Hydro-Clerk game, and had the red-shirted Clerks backed in their own end of the rink, the biggest part of the initial period, and Fox in the Clerk net, had a busy session handling the bullet shots of Johnston, Cowell and Watt.

The Red Shirts had few chances during the period and the Hydro were leading 1 to 0 at the rest. The Hydro were unable to maintain the fast clip they had set, and the Clerks took a brace, both teams having their share of the play.

Fox took one of Cowell's fast ones on the head and was knocked out. He came back and refused to be beaten, and when Labrash slipped down the right boards and placed one in the corner, the teams were on even footing again, and it was a deadlock to within three minutes of the end, when Parsons slipped one in under Smith's pads on a pass from Wood and the Clerks added another two points to their standing.

Line-up.

Clerks.—Fox, goal; Flint and Lucham, defence; Lebrash and Wood; wings; Atkinson and Blake, subs.

Hydro. — Smith, goal; Badgley and Beatty, defence; Cowell, centre; Johnston and Cecil Watt, wings; Nesbitt Free and Col. Watt, subs.

Referee—P. Saunders.

Judge of play—T. Stewart.

The clean play warning, issued to the boys before they went on the ice, evidently had it effect. Both games were exceptionally clean; the few penalties issued were for minor infractions of the rules. The crowds are increasing with every game and interest is keen.

Tonight's games are:

8.15 p.m.—Outlaws vs. Campbell Cloth.

9.15 p.m. Menie vs Junior Colts

HOCKEY

OMEMEE, Feb. 24. — A junior hockey team from the Central School, Lindsay, met the Omemee Juniors on the local rink on Saturday afternoon. The ice was in good condition, and both teams worked hard, but the locals proved a little too much for the visitors. The score was 4-3 at the end of the third period. Mr. A. Clemett acted as referee.

The line-up was as follows:

Lindsay—Goal, H. Lee; r. defence C. Power; l. defence, L. Blair; centre, L. Reeves; r. wing, C. Lytle; l. wing, B. Bathgate; sub., O'Leary.

Omemee—Goal, R. Williamson; r. defence, F. Parsons; l. defence, ... Wilson; centre, H. McGinness; ... R. Overholt; l. wing, ... ley.

FATE UNKIND TO YANKS' YOUNG STAR

Babe Ruth and Broken Leg Handicap Career of Earl Combs.

GREAT OUTFIELDER.

By BILLY EVANS.

"The greatest outfielder that has broken into the American League since Cobb and Speaker made their big league debut." That is Miller Huggins' opinion of Earl Combs.

The mite manager of the Yankees is wise in the ways of baseball. He spilled big praise in behalf of Combs, but it was deserved.

Despite the admitted greatness of Combs, it is doubtful if any star of equal magnitude has ever been less press-agented. Two huge obstacles have stood in the way of Combs getting the publicity his play deserved.

The commanding figure of Babe Ruth proved the greatest handicap. It was a tough break for a young star to join the Yanks with Ruth cutting high jinks with his home-run swats. Combs found himself in that very position.

The year that Combs came to the Yankees, Babe was going big. The rest of the personnel of the New York outfield was such that even so great a youngster as the "Kentucky Colonel," as Combs is known to his teammates, was unable to break into the lineup.

Fate Makes and Breaks.

Then fate paved the way for the big opportunity that he had so long awaited. A Yankee batting slump was the cause. Sent into the New York lineup in a series against Detroit, he went over big. He made it evident by his brilliant play that it was going to be a tough job to get him out of the lineup.

Cleveland was next on the schedule after Detroit. Almost before he had a chance to show his real worth to the fans of that city, Combs suffered a broken leg in sliding into the home plate.

Fate could have scarcely been more unkind. First the greatness of Babe Ruth had kept him under the cover of the bench, just a substitute. Then, after weeks of patient waiting, a broken leg put him out of the running for the rest of the season, perhaps forever.

Combs Made of Stern Stuff.

But Earl Combs is not the run-of-the-mine player; he is made of sterner stuff. Very fast on his feet, it was freely predicted that Combs was through, that the accident would rob him of much of his speed and most of his confidence.

When the Yankees reported at St. Petersburg, Fla., Combs was the big question mark, but he didn't remain that way very long. Almost instantly he became the exclamation point with the New York sport writers.

He soon showed that he was as fast as ever. It didn't take much longer to demonstrate that he had the same sublime confidence in his ability to make good.

Earl Combs is just about ready to blossom out as one of the real stars of the American League. He is a great hitter despite the fact that his style is rather unorthodox and many of his base hits savor of the fluke.

Crouch Style at Bat.

Combs has a peculiar crouch at the plate and chops at the ball rather than swings. Many of his hits drop just out of the reach of either the infield or outfield and rival players often refer to him as a "lucky stiff," but Earl just smiles.

If Combs has a single fault it is a rather weak arm. But tell me what outfielders are throwing runners out at the plate? He isn't a good base runner yet, because he has still to master a fadeaway slide and get the break with the pitcher. Those things will come with experience.

LEAGUE LEADERS PLAY TIE GAME

For Second Time in Four Days Montreal and Ottawa Deadlock.

CANADIENS DEFEATED.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—For the second time in four days, Montreal Maroons and Ottawa Senators battled twenty minutes' overtime to a deadlock before a crowd of 11,000 spectators here last night, when the two teams waged a gruelling struggle to a 1-1 deadlock. Ottawa scored their goal early in the second period, Smith capping his brilliant play with a tally from a scramble in front of the net.

Pittsburgh 3, Canadiens 2.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press). — A brilliant goal by Darragh in the final period aided Pittsburgh to defeat Canadiens in a gruelling hockey game here last night 3 to 2. The winning marker by Darragh was one of the prettiest pieces of work of the season. He took the disc from mid-ice, raced down the right side, weaved his way like a snake through the visitors' defence and shot as he closed in on Goal-tender Rheaume.

CARELESS PLAY ALIBI OF YANKS

Claim Jean Borotra Said He Did Not Defeat Real Bill Tilden.

SEE GOOD EFFECT.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Carelessness more than inferior tennis caused the poor showing of the American players in the indoor tennis championship which closed with an all-French final round, according to a prominent American authority.

"Through the tournament," he said, "the lower ranking players acted like they didn't have a chance and the American stars seemed to be convinced that the French team didn't have a chance.

"The French players realized the conditions, and that is what caused Jean Borotra to say, after he had beaten Tilden: 'That was not the real Tilden. He will give me a beating the next time.'"

The French team was invited to a party that was given Saturday night and that was attended by some of the American players. Rene LaCoste, who won the championship Monday, declined the invitation, and went to bed early.

"He takes his tennis too seriously," one of the American players said.

It is unusual to hear any European athlete charged with taking his game too seriously, as in France and England the American athletes are criticized for taking their sport so seriously that they have made a business of it.

Officials of the tennis association believe that the beating Tilden, Vinnie Richards and Frank Hunter took in the indoor tournament will have a beneficial effect and they look for its first result in the international team matches which start here to-morrow.

Six years of continuous success in international tennis apparently went to the heads of American players, and they became possessed of the notion that they couldn't be beaten. Confidence turned into carelessness, and they were due for the fall that came with startling speed.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

TEMPERAMENT. GETTING GOOD START. BANKS ON JOE BUSH.

If you're a genius, you have a perfect right to be temperamental.

At least that is the thought of Bill Tilden, tennis champion. It will be recalled that Sir William "blew up" recently when he was ruled out as a scribe.

In justice to the distinguished Mr. Tilden it might be said that he took the decision over the rules committee.

Tilden at present is elevating the stage. While he isn't a John Barrymore, he's probably doing a better job back of the footlights than Barrymore would on the tennis court.

Interviewed relative to the chances of Helen Wills against Suzanne Lenglen, Tilden said:

"Suzanne should win but may have her troubles if Miss Wills plays a slashing game. She should try Babe Ruth's stuff on the tennis courts against Suzanne, because the French girl is the better strategist.

"Miss Wills has the poker face, but Suzanne has the chess brain. She will prove too smart for the American champion unless Miss Wills simply plays her off her feet, speaking literally."

You know now how that worked out.

* * *

The Philadelphia Athletics and Washington Senators are unquestionably pennant contenders. All experts so agree.

Getting away to a good start means much to a club with championship aspirations. The American League schedule for 1926 may hand one of the two above mentioned teams a stiff jolt.

It is a baseball theory that the ability of a team to knock off its strongest contender, is very often the margin that decides pennant issues.

Washington had the edge on the Athletics last season and won the American League pennant.

Each team in the majors plays 22 games against every other club, 11 at home and abroad. This year's American League schedule calls for Washington and the Athletics to meet eight times in the first 11 games of the season. In other words, the 22 game series will be more than one-third over in less than two weeks of play

If either club should get away to a bad break in these eight games it might have a strong bearing on the pennant chances.

* * *

Now they are saying that the principal reason for the passing of Joe Bush from St. Louis was due to laxity in observing training rules.

I know nothing of such things. However, I do know that Joe Bush was a pretty good pitcher last season. I look for him to be an even better one with the American League champs.

The reason—the much larger playing field at Washington. The short right field bleachers at St. Louis bothered Bush.

"I never feel safe unless I have a five-run lead in this part," was a remark Bush made to me one day last summer at St. Louis. "A pop-fly home run with the bases filled can wipe out four runs at any time."

Some of the experts who argue that Bush is hard to handle won't even make an impression on Stanley Harris. They said "Dutch" Reuther was a trouble-maker, yet he never behaved as well as last season and had a big year.

I'll wager Stanley Harris is banking on Joe Bush for 15 wins and probably thinks he will turn in 20 victories.

GIRLS BUY PIANO.

Basket Social Helps To Raise Proceeds For New Instrument.

BETHANY, Feb. 24.—The Young Ladies' Mission Club held a very successful entertainment and basket social in the Sunday school room of the United church on Friday evening. Although the night was stormy and disagreeable the room was comfortably filled when the programme opened with Rev. A. Poulter as chairman. This was a very special occasion as the young ladies through various ways and means, and with the assistance of the Adult Bible class have been able to purchase a new piano to be used in the young peoples' work in the church. The piano was installed for the Friday evening entertainment. Several fine selections were played by Mr. Haddow of Peterboro, Miss Isabel Black, soloist, also of Peterboro, and a general favorite with a Bethany audience, assisted with a number of vocal selections. Miss Viola Gray, one of our local elocutionists, gave several fine readings. Beatrice Darroch gave two lengthy and difficult recitations in splendid style George Smith, another of the local entertainers, sang several songs and was accompanied at the piano by Miss Verna Belle Lee. The second part of the entertainment was in charge of Mr. A. H. Monk who auctioned off the baskets, which were many and beautiful. The baskets brought good prices, all going over $2.00 and were quickly and readily sold. A number of the older ladies assisted the girls in serving lunch and coffee to those who had not purchased baskets. The proceeds of the entertainment and sale of baskets was $65. The young ladies were able to make a generous cash payment on the piano and before they separated on Friday night had commenced a campaign in another direction to get the remainder of the purchase money due.

On Sunday afternoon the Sunday school scholars gathered at 1.50 for a song service before the regular Sunday school service. The new piano was used on this occasion and dedicated with prayer to the service of God, by the superintendent. The special music was in the way of a quartette sung by Miss V. B. Lee, Miss Jean Thorndyke, Keith Thorndyke and Harry Preston.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

No. 20—SOME FUNNY PEOPLE.

"I wonder where the elevator is," said Nancy looking around.

"Yes, I wonder," said Nick. "All I can see is the sign."

The sign said, "Elevator to China."

That's all there was.

Jupe, the kangaroo, looked, and Hickydoo, the wooden man, looked, and the Twins looked. Even Paddyfoot, the mouse, who stayed in Jupe's pocket, peered about with his little sharp eyes. But nary a thing could he see, either. Nothing but the sign!

Suddenly there was a whirring noise and Nancy cried out, "We're sinking!"

And so they were. A piece of ground on which they were standing beside the road, began to go down like the iron elevators you have seen on sidewalks for taking big boxes into cellars.

"Help!" shouted Nancy. "Help! Help! Help!"

"Oh, hush!" said Nick. "It must be all right. It's just some more magic. And if it saves us a trip around the world what's the difference?"

"That's what I say," agreed Jupe, switching his tail into a corner to get it out of the way.

"I'll have to look in my index and see what it says about elevators," said Hickydoo.

But this time no one seemed interested. There was too much to be seen around them.

The elevator had gone down about a quarter of a mile now. And as it was open on all sides, it was quite possible to see what was going on in the center of the earth. Every little while the elevator stopped to take on more passengers who were all going to China, it seemed.

First there was a nice friendly mud-turtle.

"How do you do, friends and neighbors," said he, settling his eyeglasses firmly on his nose. "The sunset was beautiful this morning. I suppose you noticed it."

Before anyone could reply to this queer speech, a muskrat got on. "Good morrow, neighbors and friends," said he. "I never eat spinach without plenty of pepper and twice as much salt. Thank you, I wish you the same."

"I wonder what he expects us to say to that," thought Nancy. But she didn't say anything, and neither did Nick nor the others.

Fortunately the elevator stopped again, and this time it was a Sandwich-Man.

One side of him said, "Things reduced at Smiths." And the other side said, "Dine at the Palace. Stew—fifteen cents. With pickles—twenty-five cents extra."

"How do you do, gentlemen and lady," said the Sandwich-Man. "The paper says it's going to rain, but personally I prefer the dark ones with gray linings. They always fit better and besides you can save the juice for gravy."

"They're all crazy," whispered Nick to Nancy and Nancy nodded back. She quite agreed, and Jupe looked as though he were going to burst if he didn't get a chance to laugh soon.

But all this time Hickydoo was so busy looking in his index, he hadn't noticed a thing.

The elevator went down, down, and down. Always down!

The mud turtle got off, the muskrat got off, and the Sandwich-Man got off, too, finally. Then other people got on.

One was a fat chinaman with a pigtail.

"Do you know where we can get a bushel of bottle-green dragonflies?" Nick asked him.

"Ooly hooly ony yippy yang sang werry," chattered the Chinaman.

"Yes, sir! I guess you're right," said Nick with a grin.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

WHY MR. GRASSHOPPER WEARS AN OVERCOAT.

"Hum," sneered Missy Butterfly when she saw who was sitting on the weed next to her. "Who are you, anyway. Some common traveler, I should judge by your somber coat."

"Yes?" drawled the stranger sitting on the weed. "Well, it's not always good policy to judge a fellow by his clothes. Now you, for instance——"

"How dare you!" fairly screamed Missy Butterfly. "There isn't a butterfly in this whole meadow that is as beautiful as I am. Look at my golden wings marked with black and blue! Then put them beside your own old, gray, dusty looking things."

"Well, they are rather dusty looking," replied the stranger good-naturedly. "But I thought may be my long red stockings would brighten the outfit some. You see grasshoppers never dress as gaudily as butterflies do."

"Oh, I'm surely glad you don't belong to our branch of the family," retorted Missy Butterfly. "I should have known by your sober, clothes you were not a butterfly. May I ask why you have such dreadfully long hind legs, Mr. Grasshopper? You see I haven't been hatched very long and I'm not really acquainted with the ways of the meadow folks. Do your ungainly long legs help you in flying?"

"Look At My Golden Wings."

"Well," laughed Mr. Grasshopper, who felt sorry for the silly little butterfly lady, "I don't fly exactly. I get through the world more by jumping. Maybe that's why I don this somber gray suit. Now if I could fly up into the blue sky like you beautiful butterflies do, I would be beautiful, too. But my home is down among the grasses beside the dusty roads and——"

"I might have known that too," laughed Missy Butterfly. "You wouldn't be wanted in polite society with that garb on. Then, too, genteel folks, who have wings, generally sit with them opened when they light on a weed or flower so that others can tell to what family they belong. I'm sorry you are not one of us. I rather like your red stockings."

Mr. Grasshopper winked his great big eyes good-naturedly, and spread out his dusty wings.

Missy Butterfly caught her breath in astonishment. Mr. Grasshopper's wings were truly beautiful on the upper side. They were a lovely rich brown with lemon colored bands on them, even prettier than the wings Missy Butterfly boasted of.

"Good-by, little Butterfly," he laughed and with a merry chirp he jumped away, a beautiful winged creature.

Missy Butterfly looked ashamed. She was certainly sorry she had been so disrespectful to Mr. Grasshopper.

"Never mind, little Butterfly," chuckled a soft voice, and Creeky Cricket clambered over the stem of the weed. "You'll know better after you're older. That grayish-brown coat of Mr. Grasshopper's is simply his disguise. All grasshoppers wear them."

"Thank you, Creeky Cricket," said Miss Butterfly. "I'll be more careful what I say next time."

FIRST ANTHRACITE COAL IN STRATFORD

Carload Delivered Tuesday From Scranton.

STRATFORD, Ont., Feb. 24. — (Canadian Press.)—Eleven days after the formal announcement of a resumption of work in the United States' anthracite coal field, a carload of Scranton coal rolled into Stratford Tuesday. The car, which was consigned to a local coal firm, is the first United States' coal reported to have arrived in Western Ontario since the tie-up in the Pennyslvania field started last September.

Easy Lessons in — AUCTION BRIDGE

New Series by WYNNE FERGUSON

Author of 'Ferguson on Auction Bridge'

Copyright 1925 by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 36

One of the points about every game or sport that every player recognizes is the necessity of constant play and practice to keep in tip-top form. Auction bridge is no exception to this rule, and a player who wants to keep his form or improve, can do so only by constant play and practice. One of the best means of practice is to work out the problems of play and bidding that are given in these articles. They stimulate the mind and give the player the benefit of other points of view that he might otherwise have missed. Here are several hands, for example, where proper bidding and play would have been well rewarded. See what you would have done and then compare results with the writer's analysis.

Have you ever noticed how often certain cards or groups of cards will be duplicated in one or more hands? An observing player can gain many a trick by looking out for these duplications or repetitions. The writer saw a good example the other night.

Hand No. 1

Hearts — A, 6, 5
Clubs — 8, 4, 2
Diamonds — 8, 7, 6, 3
Spades — 9, 4, 2

Y
A B
Z

Hearts — Q, J, 9, 8, 7, 4
Clubs — K, J, 9
Diamonds — K
Spades — A, K, 7

Score, YZ-10; AB-20; rubber game. Z dealt and bid one heart. A and Y passed and B bid one spade. Z bid two hearts and all passed. A opened the eight of spades and Z won the trick with the king. In order to make game and rubber Z must win nine tricks. What was his best plan of play to accomplish this result? Z noted that he held a hand divided among the four suits in the ratio of 6-3-3-1. In his own hand he held six hearts and in the dummy three. If there was a duplication or repetition of the division of the cards in his own hand and those of the heart suit, it would be divided in the same ratio 6-3-3-1. This is, one of Z's opponents would hold a singleton heart. If that conclusion were correct, was there any guide as to what the singleton heart would be? Z noted that he held the singleton king of diamonds so that if one other player held a singleton heart, it should be the king. Having analyzed the hand in that manner, Z led the four of hearts at trick two and when A played the deuce, Z played the ace from dummy and B's singleton king dropped. Every one at the table said: "How did you guess that?" So Z explained the frequency of repetitions or duplications not only of the distributions of the suits but also of the exact card or cards. It's really very interesting so be on the lookout for hands of this type and if you run across any good examples, send them in. Z's application of the rule in this hand gave him a game and rubber not otherwise possible, as he won six heart tricks, two spades and one club.

Hand No. 2

Hearts — A, K, 7, 4
Clubs — 9, 8, 4, 3
Diamonds — J, 7
Spades — Q, 8, 5

A B
Z

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump. If A bid two diamonds and Y passed, what would you bid with B's hand? B should bid two no-trump. If A's bid of two diamonds is sound, AB should have a good chance for game at no-trump. A bid over a no-trump when you have the lead should indicate a very strong hand, so B should try for game by bidding two no-trump.

Hand No. 3

Y
A B
Z

Hearts — A, 9, 4
Clubs — J, 8, 7, 6, 2
Diamonds — J, 10, 9, 8
Spades — A

No score, first game. What would you bid, as dealer, with the foregoing hand? Z should pass. It is too unbalanced a hand to justify a no-trump bid. Let the other players bid and then decide what to do.

Hand No. 4

Hearts — K, J, 10, 8
Clubs — 9
Diamonds — A, 7, 5, 4
Spades — K, 9, 8, 3

A B
Z

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump and A passed. What would you bid with Y's hand? This is a very close hand. Most players would pass but the singleton club is a danger spot for a no-trump. The writer would bid two hearts, particularly because of the distribution 4-4-4-1 which, as a rule, indicates a long suit in one or more of the other hands. If this suit is clubs, it will undoubtedly be opened and will probably prevent a game at no-trump. There is just as good a chance for game at hearts as in no-trump but without the risk, so the writer prefers the two heart bid with this type of hand.

Hand No. 5

Y
A B
Z

Hearts — K, J, 8, 7, 5
Clubs — 10, 8
Diamonds — 9, 6
Spades — 6, 5, 4, 3

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed. A passed and Y bid one no-trump. If B passed, what would you bid with Z's hand? Z should bid two hearts. His hand is of no value whatever at no-trump and yet should do fairly well at two hearts. In this particular hand, YZ score four odd at hearts and only one odd at no-trump; quite a difference.

TOWNSHIP TO OPEN NEW SET OF BOOKS

Shortage of $10,000 Due To Low Estimates.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—It was announced yesterday rhat London Township Council will hear the full report of the auditors now inspecting the township's books at the regular monthly meeting next Monday. At this meeting an explanation as to the cause of the $10,000 deficit uncovered by the auditors will be made and cleared up to the satisfaction of the ratepayers.

It is now apparent that the deficit resulted from improper estimates being made which failed to take care of the municipality's indebtedness. The auditors expect to have finished their examination by the end of the week.

After things have been straightened away it is the intention of the Council to open a new set of books. In past years the Reeve has been the sole one with power to sign cheques, but this was amended at the first of the year when authority was given the township treasurer to pay out money.

FORGERY AND FRAUD.

Kitchener Man Held in London, Ont.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 24 (Canadian Press). — Pending further charges which Crown Attorney Judd said would be preferred within a week, E. J. Schmalz, 29, of Kitchener, who was taken into custody here Monday night by Detective-Sergeant Harry Down and Detective Thos. Bolton on a fraud accusation, was remanded in city court Tuesday by Magistrate Graydon, before whom Schmalz appeared. Forgery will be one of the charges to be laid before the accused is brought again before the Magistrate, the Crown intimated. Others will involve the obtaining of money on worthless cheques.

Schmalz, who, contrary to former reports, is not a member of the Preston Senior O.H.A. team, is said by police to be wanted in Kitchener and Galt.

Early manhood is apparently the danger period; of the 46,807 people convicted of crimes during 1923, over 10,680 were men between twenty-one and thirty years.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

We hear a lot about a "balanced diet." Do you know what is meant by a balanced diet?

It is understood, of course, that everybody must have enough food to keep the human machine running. But the body needs are not supplied merely because you have "enough" food. You must have enough of each kind of food.

Every once in a while I speak of the three food elements—proteins, fats and carbohydrates. The proteins supply the framework of the body and the building materials. The fats and carbohydrates furnish the heat and energy. You must have them all.

A balanced diet is one which supplies these elements in the right proportions. The proper ratio is 1, 3 and 6. There should be one part of protein, three parts of fats and six of carbohydrates.

The chief protein food is lean meat. Potatoes offer a chief source of carbohydrate supply. You can see that in potatoes you require six times the weight of the lean meat.

The carbohydrates include starch and sugar. These do not build tissue except in so far as they furnish fat. If taken in excess they do not leave the body but are stored up for future use. If stored up in too great quantities the scales may show an uncomfortable increase in weight.

We need fats to make the flesh and muscles flexible and to supply the grease for the proper oiling of the body. Likewise, the fats supply heat and energy. In common with the carbohydrates they give us "pep" and stimulate us to activity of every sort.

If we take too much fat and an excess of carbohydrates, then we are in danger of clogging the system. You see a surplus of fat is not laid on the exterior of the body alone. It is deposited in the kidneys and liver, it replaces the heart muscles, and crowds the abdominal organs. It is a menace to health and shortent life.

There is no need to become a "crank" on the subject of food and eating, but you should learn enough about them to choose your meals with intelligence. Everybody should know how to provide a balanced ration.

I must hasten to tell you that besides the three elements I have named, there are other foodstuffs just as important. You must get the minerals. If you select your foods with care, you will not lack these.

There is another element, however, without which disaster will surely come. It is given the name of "vitamine." Just what the vitamines are nobody knows as yet. But without them we would sicken and die.

The various vitamines are found in green vegetables, especially the leafy vegetables, in fruits, in cream and in fresh flesh. One reason why salads are good is because they are made of the vitamine carrying foods.

Learn to choose a balanced diet. When you have done this you will eat less, but the food will be so well chosen you will have clearness of eye, cleanness of skin, vigor of body and increased prospect of long life.

FAMOUS FORTUNES

By Barbara Bayne

LEVI ZEIGLER LEITER.

"Three generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves" is an exploded axiom. At least the shirt sleeves at the initial end of the Leiter line are now three generations back and the terminal shirt sleeves are not in sight.

Levi Z. Leiter, who lived to see his daughter Mary Victoria mistress of the Government house in Calcutta, wife of the Viceroy of India, a position with the rank of queen, began life, figuratively, at least in his shirt sleeves.

He Clerked in a Country Store.

He was born in 1854 in a little town in Maryland (afterward called Leitersburg), where he started in a general store. But in his veins ran the blood of adventure and a boundless ambition that was to carry him somewhere.

"Chicago is the door of opportunity," he probably suggested to himself in an incidental way. At least he was headed in that general direction when, bowing to circumstances he stopped off in Springfield, Ohio, and again found employment weighing potatoes and measuring calico behind a counter.

In 1855 he finally reached his destination and went into the dry goods house of Cooley, Wadsworth & Co., first as an employee, then as a partner. Marshall Field also had an interest in that concern until Jan. 1, 1865, when they both sold out to John V. Farwell, and with their combined capital bought the controlling interest in the dry goods business of Potter Palmer. Until 1881 it was known as Field, Leiter & Palmer. Then Leiter sold his interest in the firm and stood at the threshold of a future crowded with great enterprises and giant corporations in which he was a powerful figure.

It was a period of big opportunities that bred big men. Among Leiter's numerous activities he was on the directorate of the Mexican Central Railroad syndicate. Formed in Chicago in 1901 to expend more than $20,000,000 in the big project of development in Mexico.

Two of Leiter's daughters married into the English nobility. His son Joseph became a spectacular figure in the financial world when, in 1898, he "cornered" the wheat market. But the distinction of being the largest individual holder of wheat in the history of the grain trade brought financial calamities upon "Joe" Leiter when the concerted action on the part of his competitors broke the corner and he was reputed to have lost $10,000,000.

Following in his father's footsteps he became director of Chicago's Elevated and City Railway Companies, the Chicago and South Side Rapid Transit Co., the Chicago Edison Co., and many other corporations.

When Levi Zeigler Leiter died in 1904 he left a vast estate in Chicago properties, stocks and bonds.

CHARGE OF PERJURY.

Sentence Suspended in Lindsay Case.

LINDSAY, Feb. 24.—At a session of the police court Tuesday J. Martin, who figured as a witness for the defence in a recent liquor case, and who was severely scored by Police Magistrate Bradford because of the nature of his evidence, was called upon to answer to a charge of perjury. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence, but was severely lectured by the Magistrate, who pointed out the enormity of the offence and its prevalence in the courts throughout the country. The stiff sentence meted out to the accused in the liquor case was considered by the magistrate in suspending sentence.

CURLER DEAD.

Billy Williams, of Lindsay Peterboro Favorite.

LINDSAY, Feb. 24.—The local Curling Club lost one of its stalwart members yesterday in the death of Gwillym G. (Billy) Williams, who passed away after an illness of only a few days from pneumonia. A pathetic circumstance in connection with his death is that his five children are also ill—one of them in a critical condition, from pneumonia. The deceased was one of the crack curlers in the local club, was a member of several Tankard rinks and a former baseball player.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25.

Judging by the dominant lunar configurations this day may develop some adverse conditions both in business, finance and in the personal affiliations. There may be an inclination to make a change or a journey, but these are attended by hazard and loss. Money may be lost or parted with through extravagance or self-indulgence or possibly through enforced legitimate outlay. In drmestic, social and affectional matters the augury is not a happy one.

Those whose birthday it is may best turn their affairs to success and profit by safeguarding their substance and refraining from any risky or extravagant use of money. There may be inroads on the savings necessary, but these should not be squandered in self-indulgence. Domestic and personal matters of every nature may unfold in harmonies. A child born on this day is likely to suffer from extravagance and self-indulgence, being inclined to display. Even this will not secure for it happiness or satisfaction. This proclivity should be given early attention.

FIRST AID.

Seven years old, and a fine little tot. You've known one just like her, as likely as not. The sort of a youngster that makes mothers glad. So good about things, they've no time to be bad.

With sweepin', an' dustin' and dishes and such, the housework for mother is sometimes too much, and folk who have raised one most likely have found, it helps when you have a wee daughter around.

A hummin', an' workin' and smili... all day, forgettin' she's missin' a hea... good play. The worth of a child, in... early life's told as early, sometimes, ... seven years old.

There's comfort for mom whe... household is such, though maybe she help ne'er amounts to so much. It isn't the work that is done, but, in truth, the working around with the spirit of youth.

I envy the mother who boasts of the tot, who really does little, but helps out a lot. When plans for the work of the household are made, she knows she can call on her little first aid.

VALENTINE TEAS

HASTINGS, Feb. 23. — A Valentine social was held under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A. of St. George's Anglican Church on Monday evening, Feb. 15, in the church basement.

Lantern slides were shown on a trip through Japan.

A short programme was given as follows:

A selection by orchestra.

A biblical tableaux, given by the Blackbourn family.

Duet—Mrs. E. Radford and Mrs. J. J. Duff.

Recitation—Robert Murray.

Solo—Mr. C. Blackbourn.

Orchestra selection.

Instrumental—Miss Ona Doxsee and Mr. A. Shand.

Before lunch was served a Valentine post office was distributed, which created much enjoyment for all present.

Barbara La Marr, like Wallace Reid and her other young kindred, has made her last personal appearance. She made it in an open coffin in a small church here—open for all the world to come and gaze for a last time upon the girl who was "too beautiful to live.' And the world did come to see. Thousands passed in a single file before the bier of the girl who was a cold Cleopatra in the land of make-believe and a warm human being in the skein of reality.

A tragic fate seems to have stalked in the wake of a trio of movie star sisters here. Viola Dana, Shirley Mason and Edna Flugarth, ex-British movie stars, are sisters. Viola's first husband, John Collins, a director, died from pneumonia shortly after they were married. Shirley's mate, Bernard Durning, also a director, died from the same illness. Edna's husband of more than 13 years, Harold Shaw, a director, was instantly killed the other day in an auto accident. Viola recently remarried. The groom is Maurice "Lefty" Flynn, ex-Red Grange of Yale and now a movie star.

HUMANE SOCIETY WORK REPORTED

Inspector Tells of His Activities During Recent Weeks.

MANY CASES.

A meeting of the Peterboro Humane Society was held last evening in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, with a good attendance. C. H. Ackerman, president of the organization, was in the chair, and an interesting report, showing a great deal of the work done during the past month, was presented by the inspector, R. C. Smith.

Mr. Ackerman spoke of the activity of the inspector, and of the excellent way in which he was carrying on his duties. He asked the members to advise the inspector of all cases of cruelty to animals but not to be too officious in interference with matters noted on the streets.

It was decided on motion of J. E. A. Fitzgerald and C. S. Stapleton, to hold executive meetings with the privilege to each member of attending, if they desired, on the last Tuesday of each month, in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, and regular meetings every three months.

The proposed tag day by the society was also discussed, and it was decided, if possible, to have this on April 2nd, Mrs. E. S. Martin to be in charge of arrangements.

Representatives of the Society at the provincial convention to be held in Toronto on March 10th and 11th, will be the inspector, R. C. Smith, E. S. Martin, J. E. A. Fitzgerald and Mrs. J. S. Chandler, the secretary-treasurer. Mr. Ackerman will probably be in Toronto for the meetings also.

A suggestion made by J. E. A. Fitzgerald to the effect that the present statutes dealing with the Humane Society's work should be amended so that it might be made an indictable offence for a driver who had run over an animal on the street to drive away without investigating the nature of the accident, brought a remark from the president that a solicitor should be engaged by the society. This matter will be dealt with by the executive.

Mrs. Chandler, the secretary-treasurer, read a letter from the general-manager of the Humane Society in Toronto, commending the action of the local organization in bringing a case against a man charged with cruelty to animals in the district and speaking of the support promised in such matters by the Attorney-General.

The report of the Inspector, Mr. Smith showed a good deal of work done during the month. Horses and their ills were the main cause of the Inspector's activities. A horse with the Clyde itch in a dirty stable, a horse being driven with a crack in its hoof, another badly lamed in both front feet, men over driving their beasts of burden, an old stiff horse that was working under painful conditions, a lame horse on a delivery route, horses with ill-fitting blinders and without blankets, the horse that figured in the recent action in Havelock, where a man despatched the animal by cutting its throat and by a bullet through its head—all came in for attention during the month. Several dogs that had been badly used were also destroyed, along with a cat which had been worried by dogs. Dogs kept in dirty quarters were attended to and the conditions remedied, the stable home of some cows was ordered to be cleaned up and a stray kitten had a good home provided for it, all through the offices of the Society's inspector.

The Peterboro branch has at present a membership in the neighborhood of one hundred and ten.

W.M.S. TEA AND SALE.

Splendid Attendance and Social Held By St. Andrew's Branch.

There was a splendid attendance yesterday afternoon at the tea and sale of home-made cooking and candy held under the auspices of St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society, at the home of Mrs. R. W. Cormack, Park street. The proceeds, which were in the neighborhood of fifty dollars, will be used for the Expense Fund of the society. Decorations were in the bright yellow of tulips in a silver basket on the table, flanked by lighted candles in silver holders. The guests were received by Mrs. Cormack and Mrs. J. John, president of the W.M.S. Tea was poured by Mrs. J. W. Gordon and Mrs. J. E. R. Munro. Mrs. A. Moir and Mrs. J. W. Fraser had charge of the tea room, assisted by Mrs. J. Forbes Allen, Mrs. P. L. Allison, Mrs. J. Mackintosh, Mrs. R. A. Carman and Mrs. Herbert Gillespie.

During the afternoon, a pleasant musical programme was given, with vocal solos by Mrs. N. D. Foote, Mrs. Saunders and Miss G. Collins, with accompaniments by Mrs. C. H. Crowe, Mrs. W. H. Dicken and Miss Louise Letellier, also a pianoforte duet by Mrs. Saunders and Mrs. Dicken.

The sale of home-made cooking was in charge of Mrs. W. Nelson and Mrs. A. Moore, and the sale of candy was in charge of Mrs. Hugh Niven and Mrs. W. Zeihr. Mrs. T. E. Ross also assisted.

NEW ORGANIST IS WELCOMED

Miss Mabel Clarry Greeted at Trinity Choir Banquet.

GRACEFUL SPEECHES.

On Friday, Feb. 19, the members of Trinity Choir held a banquet in the Reid street hall, the occasion being to welcome Miss Mabel Clarry, who was recently appointed to the position of Organist and Choir Leader. The pastor and the members of the Music Committee were the guests of the evening. About forty sat down to do justice to the good things provided for the occasion.

The dainty appearance of the tables with their tasteful colorings and decorations, which were much admired, reflected great credit on the ladies who had charge of the arrangements.

After the banquet the Rev. A. J. Langford, acting as chairman, expressed the great pleasure it afforded him to be there and meet everybody who was there and spoke of the inspiration a good choir was to any minister when conducting a church service.

Mr. Fred Skitch was then called upon for a speech which he made, in a few well-chosen and graceful remarks, as, in the name of the choir he welcomed Miss Mabel Clarry to Trinity Church as its organist and choir leader, wishing her every success and hoping that the future would be all that could be desired. The happiest relationship existing throughout the choir was mentioned and he remarked that with loyalty and co-operation and every one taking an interest in the musical part of the church services, success and blessing was assured.

Miss Clarry, on rising to reply was greeted with a round of applause. She reiterated the pleasure it afforded her to be there and thanked the previous speaker for his kind words of welcome which meant so much to anyone entering upon a task where loyalty and co-operation was so essential to success. The speaker felt assured, that, judging by the spirit of the evening and the warm welcome accorded her, the future of the choir could only be as every member would wish, namely, a success.

Mr. R. F. Downey was then called upon and in a jocular strain welcomed the members of the music committee. Mr. J. Ridyard, Sr. also added a few remarks to the previous speaker's words of welcome, to which Mr. W. G. Morrow and Mr. W. D. Campbell replied, their remarks causing much merriment.

Mr. J. Kennett, for the choir, called for and emphasized the necessity for a continuation of the loyalty and co-operation that had characterized the work in the past and assured the members that the success that had attended them would be theirs still in the future by careful attention to the things that are "worth while." He hoped that as harmony was the soul of music, then "souls in harmony" should be the aim and ambition of church choirs.

"Blest be the tie that binds" was then sung by all, followed by prayer by the pastor.

Mr. Newton Staples moved a hearty vote of thanks to the ladies and all who had in any way helped to make the banquet such a success, which was ably seconded by Mr. J. Ridyard, Jr. Mrs. F. Rappe very gracefully replied.

AT THE CAPITOL

HOOT'S CANADIAN PICTURE ACTUALLY SHOT IN CANADA

'Calgary Stampede,' Coming Capitol Feature a Dominion Thriller.

The making of a motion picture is a task made many times more costly than usual when the entire company has to be taken on a long location trip.

Probably one of the largest motion picture pilgrimages of recent years was made by the Universal company producing "The Calgary Stampede," a Hoot Gibson starring vehicle which is coming to the Capitol theater tomorrow.

In the spring of 1925 Raymond Schrock, general manager conceived the idea of producing a picture in the actual Canadian location. So he sent E. Richard Schayer and Donald Lee, staff scenario writers, Hoot Gibson, star, and Herbert Blache, director, to look the country over.

After two weeks of exploring the party returned to Universal City and the story was written. From this a script was prepared.

Forty-four persons, a half dozen trained horses, a car load of properties, two large motor-driven transportable generators for lighting scenes and wardrobes of anywhere from one to eight changes for the various members of the cast were passed upon.

Six cameras were taken—run by a head camerman and his assistants.

When stampede weeks came in July, much of the picture was shot in Calgary. After those trying scenes were secured the company returned to California happy that they had produced a picture showing Canada as it really is.

Among the cast which made the trip were: Hoot Gibson, Virginia Brown Faire, Clark Comstock, Ynes Seabury, Jim Corey, W. J. McCulley, Philo McCullough, Charles Sellon, Ena Gregory, Frank Rice, Tex Young and Bill Gilis.

AT THE REGENT

"EAST LYNNE" ON SCREEN REVIVES HAPPY MEMORIES.

When you see the William Fox screen version of "East Lynne," which played last night at the Regent Theatre, there will flit through your mind many happy moments and fond memories which everyone associates with this veteran of melodrama. And somehow, the picture does not give the impression of being "old timey," but rather a well directed drama of an olden period that holds your interest every moment it is being enacted on the screen.

Beautifully staged, "East Lynne" might pass as a fashion show of grandma's time with all the frills and bustles that tend to make us smile to-day, yet gorgeously appointed.

Mr. Fox has chosen wisely in his cast, too. Alma Rubens makes a beautiful and pathetic Lady Isabel and Edmund Lowe is the handsome dandy of a half a century ago as Archibald Carlyle. Lou Tellegen as the villainous Sir Francis Levison and Marjorie Daw as Barbara Hare are ideal. In fact, every member of the cast fits into the character as a well-chosen glove.

FADING IN STATION

When a singer or an orchestra, while broadcasting increases in volume too suddenly, it is liable to take the set off the air by overloading the transmitter tubes. When operators think that an unusually high note or crescenda is coming, they turn down the volume. Receptionists often believe that this decrease in volume is due to fading.

NEW 'PRO' LEAGUE IS NOW ORGANIZED

Will Include Teams in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Boston and Toronto.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.— (Canadian Press.)—The organization of a hockey circuit to be known as the International Professional Hockey League was announced after a secret meeting here yesterday, at which E. J. Livingstone, of Toronto, was elected president.

The new circuit plans to place two teams in New York, two in Chicago, one in Detroit, and one in Buffalo, and one in Toronto. President Livingstone issued the following statement:

"Additional applications from other cities were taken up but were laid over luntil the next meeting.

"Notification will be given star hockey players throughout the United States and Canada to be ready to consider contracts in the near future.

JIM BARNES—PLAYING THE MID-IRON.

In a general way the swing for a mid-iron is the same as with a driver, except in the following details: In the first place, the swing is, or ought to be, shorter. Also the shaft of the club is shorter, and the player must, accordingly, stand closer to the ball. This tends, or should tend, to make the swing more upright—also the stance is possibly a little more open.

There is no reason to feel that the right hand predominates in the swing more than it does with the driver.

As the name suggests, the mid-iron is a club for shots ranging from 135 to 170 yards, depending on the player.

For longer distances a more powerful club should be chosen. Thus the swing ought to be shortened to little if anything more than a half swing, no more than a three-quarter.

Naturally, with a shorter swing the player has better control. Hence he can be a little more certain in applying the force in hitting the ball.

This gives the impression that the mid-iron stroke is more of a hit. As a matter of fact, there may be just as much hitting with a full swing.

OMEMEE WON FROM UTILITIES

The local Utilities hockey team journeyed to Omemee on Monday night and was defeated by the sextette of that village after a hard battle by 7 goals to 5. At the end of the first period the teams were tied with one goal each, and the deadlock remained unbroken at the close of the second, the score being 2-2. Omemee drew away in the last period, however, to win out.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE PLAY-OFF

Will Be An Excursion If Fans Signify Intention of Going.

Unless sufficient fans signify their intention of going to Toronto for the Parkdale-Peterboro' game to-morrow night, by leaving their names at Bert McLeod's to-night, there will be no special train so far as the Peterboro Hockey Club is concerned. However, extra coaches will be placed on the 3.35 C.P.R. train to-morrow afternoon so that there will be plenty of accommodation for those who want to see the group play-off.

It is up to the fans; if enough of them desire to go and say so, there will be a special train at 5.45; otherwise the excursion will not be arranged.

CHECKER TOURNEY RULES ARE CHANGED

Hoped To Attract Crack Players From Western Canada.

Important alterations governing the Dominion Checker Tournaments were decided on at the meeting of the association, held this week at Central Y.M.C.A. Toronto, the Rev. W. S. Edgar, president of the association, occupying the chair. With a view to attracting more of the crack checkerists of Western Canada, it was resolved to shorten the length of the tournaments by abolishing all preliminary ties. Players will be graded in accordance with past performances in recognized competitions. A system of penalties to be imposed on competitors who failed to play off ties at the exact time marked on the time table was also devised.

COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURE NOT SWAYED BY FARMER COMPANIES

But Rule of Unanimity Enables One Member To Block Action.

REGINA MEETING.

REGINA, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press).—Charges that the Canadian Council of Agriculture was dominated by representatives of farmer companies were vigorously denied Tuesday by W. A. Amos, Palmerston, Ont., in his presidential address at the opening of the 17th annual meeting here Tuesday.

Thirty-five representatives from nine farmer organizations are present.

Mr. Amos declared it was impossible for any group to control the Council but admitted that it was possible for one person to block any move by the Council because of the rule that resolutions and recommendations of the Council must be unanimous.

Operations Explained.

The charges that the Council was dominated by company representatives was made by E. A. Partridge, Sintaluta, at the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Grain Grower's Association and the Farmers' Union of Canada, in Saskatoon. In denying them, Mr. Amos explained the operations of the Council.

"Composed as it is of the executives of the affiliated organizations the Council brings the combined wisdom of the whole movement to bear upon each problem which it discusses, and when the course of action has been determined upon, the Council speaks with the united voice of the farmers of five provinces," he declared. "It should be made clear, however, that the Council has not jurisdiction over the bodies in membership, each of which retains complete control over its own policies and activities. The Council, therefore, is in reality a conference of the representatives of the affiliated bodies and any resolutions relating to inter-provincial or national subjects will be considered."

Balance of $5,000

The report of the Secretary John W. Ward, Winnipeg, reviewing the activities of the year, was submitted and adopted. The auditors' report showing a credit bank balance of $5,000 was also read and adopted.

A. E. Darby read the report of the research department dealing with transportation, rural credits and old age pensions. Questions brought out in this report will be dealt with in resolutions to be submitted to the meeting today.

OLD COUNTRY SOCCER

LONDON, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press). — Arsenal defeated Aston Villa by 2 goals to 0, and Manchester United won from Sunderland by 2 goals to 1, in re-played fifth round games in the English Football Cup competitions today. The games were played on Arsenal and Manchester United grounds.

In the sixth round, to be played on March 6, Arsenal meets Swansea at Swansea and Manchester United meets Fulham at Fulham.

SCHOLARS COMPETE IN SPEECH MAKING

Good Programme Put on at Home and School Meeting.

The annual concert put on by the pupils of the Queen Alexandra School; in charge of the teachers of the staff, was presented in the kindergarten room, filled to capacity for the occasion, on Monday evening. A splendid programme was presented, with Mr. M. H. Park as chairman. An important feature of the evening's entertainment was an oratorical contest, in which six pupils of the school, five girls and one boy, took part. The judges, Mr. J. W. Fraser, Miss M. Morrow and Miss Thelma Paxman, had great difficulty in awarding the prizes, all of the contestants doing exceptionally well, and it was finally decided, after the awarding of the three prizes, to bestow a token upon the three remaining contestants. The prizes, which were donated by the Home and School Association, were presented by Mr. Fraser. At the conclusion of the entertainmentfi Mrs. H. G. Walker, president of the Home and School Association, spoke briefly, expressing gratitude to all who had taken part in the programme, to the teachers for their interest in the children, and to the parents for their good attendance. Ice cream and cake were then served by the ladies, with Mrs. R. Read in charge.

The oratorical contest consisted of the following orations, with first prize to Virginia Deyell, speaking on "Bye-Products of Coal," second prize to Max Parnell, on "Three Men Who Changed the History of the World," and third award to Barnardine Detlor, on "Rubber." The remaining three contestants were Alma Mark, speaking on "Tecumseh," Mary Vance, on "Peterborough," and Alice Wills on "The Raising of Wheat on the Prairies."

Other numbers on the programme were selections by the "Big Four" orchestra, composed of pupils of the school, Max Parnell at the piano, Reg Kingdon and Perrin Clarke, violins, and Eric Westbye, cornet. They played the "Apollo" Overture and "Norma" March. Choruses by the pupils of the Junior and Senior Fourth classes were "In Tara's Hall," "Captain Morgan's March," "Early One Morning," "Sweet and Low," "Men of Harlech," "Ye Banks and Braes of Bonny Doon." A chorus by the juniors of the school was "The Seed Baby," with an encore in "Dandelion." Miss E. Morrow played accompaniments for the choruses and readings by Margaret Wise were "Dad Paid It," and "Six

SANITARY ICE FOR ME

I am not the "Miller's daughter"
But I am sitting here so still,
Craving for a drink of water,
With the Sanitary Ice's chill.

I am not the "Miller's daughter"
But hot baths to make me clean,
With Sanitary Ice, in the water,
I like, to cool off—I mean.

I am not the "Miller's daughter"
But am careful, temperate and nice
As to what goes in the water
I drink, without Sanitary Ice.

I am not the "Miller's daughter"
And I'll not make a mistake,
Even when the weather's hotter,
But Sanitary Ice I'll take.

MAYOR HOLLOWAY WANTS PERMANENT SLIDES
His Worship Mayor Holloway took exception this morning to the attitude taken by the Examiner regarding a toboggan slide. "One of the chief reasons," he said, "for not erecting a slide at Jackson Park is that it would not be on city property, and in addition it would cross Bonacord street, which is a public thoroughfare. If the city were to build a slide I think that the logical place for it would be on Armour Hill, where there is already a sufficient elevation. In that case also there are difficulties to be overcome because of the proximity of streets."

"I believe in encouraging sport," he continued, "but I also believe that the matter of the erection of a permanent slide should be considered thoroughly before any definite steps are taken."

PROGRESSIVES PLAN FOR ELECTION SOON

Convention Will Be Held Immediately After Present Session.

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—To prepare for a possible Provincial general election this year, or by-elections to fill the seven vacant seats in the Ontario Legislature, a convention of the Progressives of Ontario will be held in Toronto immediately following the conclusion of the present session of the Legislature. This was decided on at a dinner of the Progressive members of the House last evening.

TICKETS HERE FOR BIG SENIOR GAME

KOREANS COME TO PETERBORO'

Salvation Army Temple To Be Scene of Stirring Lecture.

FASCINATING STORY.

A party of Koreans, consisting of four Salvation Army officers and two bandsmen, is touring the Dominion of Canada, under the leadership of Major and Mrs. Hill and will visit Peterborough on Tuesday, March 9.

Commencing at Vancouver, the party has filled a lengthy list of engagements on its journey east, and such has been the stir created that many of the halls have been far too small to accommodate the eager crowds which have gathered to hear them. Audiences have listened spellbound as they have heard the converts' thrilling stories, and interest in the Army's missionary operations has been greatly enhanced, for these are in very truth the "fruits of missionary service."

Before conversion in the Salvation Army, these native Koreans were slaves to superstition and heathenism, but each now testifies in his or her own quaint way of the wonderful change which has been wrought by Divine power.

The visit of this party to Canada is unique in that it gives evidences of the confidence that the Japanese Government has in the Army, for it is not customary to permit natives to leave their country, and this is the only party of its kind which has thus travelled abroad.

Major and Mrs. Hill, who are in charge of this picturesque party, are English by birth. The major has seen sixteen years of missionary service in the "Hermit Kingdom," having assisted in pioneering the Army's work in that land.

The party comprises, in addition to the leaders, Adjutant Sin Soon Ill, Ensign Kim Tong Soo, Lieutenant You Chang Soon, Lieutenant Youg Kwung Duk.

The opportunity of seeing these interesting Orientals and hearing their intensely fascinating experiences should not be missed.

I.O.D.E. HOLDS TEA.

Attendance Good at Entertainment of Otonabee Chapter.

The Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E. held a very well attended and successful tea yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. J. A. Morgan, George street. The guests were greeted by Mrs. Morgan and the Regent of the Chapter, Miss S. A. Tomkins. The table, which was prettily centred with a bowl of narcissi and daffodils, flanked by yellow candles in silver holders, was presided over by Mrs. J. A. Aylmer and Mrs. N. D. Buchanan. The tea room was in charge of Mrs. C. A. White, assisted by Mrs. D. R. Fleming. Assistants were Mrs. R. W. Davidson, Mrs. Wm. Lytle, Mrs. William Comstock and Mrs. F. S. Wightman. During the afternoon enjoyable vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. D. C. King and Miss Ruby Quartermaine, with accompaniment by Mrs. G. Evans and Miss Hurley.

PRINCE IN DANGER.

Horses In Show Ring Near Him Rear Badly, Causing Commotion.

LONDON, Feb. 24. Canadian Press. — The Prince of Wales had a dangerous experience at the Shire Show at Islington to-day, when a mare in the ring near him began to kick and set several horses to rearing and plunging. There was a general commotion about the Prince but no one was injured.

Just before this he had been compelled to duck and jump aside to avoid a horse which had suddenly swerved in his direction.

Not having had enough of horses for the day the prince went hunting in the afternoon, this being the second time he has followed the hounds since the recent accident in which he suffered a broken collar bone.

WELL BABIES' CLINIC.

Dr. J. A. Morgan Lectured on Winter Ills of Children.

At the open meeting of the Well Babies' Clinic, held in the rooms at the G.W.V.A. hall yesterday afternoon, Dr. J. A. Morgan gave an interesting talk on "Common Winter Ailments of Children."

Emphasizing as the foundation of many winter illnesses the common cold, Dr. Morgan divided this ailment into two categories, the cold which appears as a slight manifestation of inflammtion of the nose and throat, and is usually caused by the throwing off of extra clothing by the child when it becomes overheated in play, and the more serious type which is infective. For the first sort of cold, the speaker recommended the use of clothing on children which could not be unfastened by them without coming indoors, and for the second, avoidance of the sufferer was suggested. The infective cold is much more easily transmitted to another person while indoors than in the fresh air.

Results of the infective type of cold may be tonsilitis or an infection of the ear which may attack the mastoid bone, whose cells are directly connected with the brain. If the running ear ruptures within, death may result. For an active mastoid infection, an operation is the only remedy. These colds may also affect the glands of the neck and the bronchial tubes, resulting in bronchial pneumonia.

Dr. Morgan said it was far better to try and prevent illness in its inception than to attempt to cure it later. Children should be properly fed, because they are more liable to take cold when in poor condition, the house should be kept warm and well ventilated and the children prevented from playing in rooms of varying temperature. Their clothing should be light when playing in the house, and should be warm when out of doors, without being of a weight which will allow them to perspire, as this makes them more susceptible to colds.

Speaking of infective diseases of other types, the doctor said that skin eruptions in children were more prevalent in the cold weather, and were often caused by some break in the skin resulting from rough clothing over the tender surface, allowing an inlet for germs and bacteria.

At the conclusion of the meeting, tea was served by the King's Daughters.

STORY OF COAL TO-MORROW NIGHT

Engineering Institute Brings Speaker on Interesting Subject—To-morrow.

The Peterboro' branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada have brought to the city speakers on many subjects of interest to the general citizen, as well as to the members of the engineering profession, but probably no subject has been of such general importance to the general public as the subject chosen for the next meeting.

This meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday evening, February 25, at 8:15 p.m., when an address will be given by Mr. Geo. W. Allen, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Gas Association.

The lecture is entitled "The Story of a Lump of Coal," and covers the history and development of the manufacture of coal gas and the by-products thereof, and will be fully illustrated by lantern slides.

The Peterboro' Chamber of Commerce will join with the engineers for this meeting on account of its importance, and it is hoped that any citizen who is interested in the subject of fuel conservation will also accept this notice as an invitation to attend.

The chair will be taken by Mr. H. Beal, superintendent of the Peterboro' gas plant, and the meeting will start promptly at the specified time, so please come early.

Dr. Peter McGibbon, of Muskoka, Quotes Figures To Progressives in Commons.

ADJOURNMENT NEAR.

Division May Come To-night With Recess Until March 15.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press) — Another sitting of the house left debate on the address still unconcluded. There is talk, however, of division tonight with adjournment from then till March 15. Today Conservatives continued the debate. E. J. Gott of South Essex compared duties imposed in the United States on Canadian farm products with those imposed by Canada on America farm produucts.

A. U. G. Bury of Edmonton East declared he had been charged with his constituents to make a permanent alliance between Alberta coal and the Ontario housewife. If, he added, the Ontario market were secured for Alberta coal, it would mean the employment of 44,000 miners in Alberta instead of 12,000. Peter McGibbon of Muskoka had the floor when the House adjourned until today.

Alberta had captured the Ontario market but it had only done so because of the anthracite strike in the United States, said Mr. Bury. Now the strike was over and American coal would again come knocking at the gates of Ontario. The attitude of the Minister of Interior was that the measures for assisting Alberta coal to reach the Ontario market were emergency measures. If the emergency passed, the government presumably would withdraw its help. This he protested against. He wanted the bringing of Alberta coal to the Ontario market to be a permanent policy of parliament. Canadian coal should be used by Canadians.

Criticize Progressives

Peter McGibbon (Conservative-Muskoka) said that the member for Nelson (T. W. Bird) in moving the motion eliminating further amendments, had done something which he had no right to do. "If the Progressives have no more interest in this country than to vote themselves a holiday and an indemnity, their constituencies made a very poor choice of representatives," he said. If the motion moved by Mr. Bird was really prompted by the government the latter had chosen "a cowardly method" for bringing in a measure of closure. Why, he asked, had the Minister of Justice delegated the right to control legislation in the House of Commons to the member for Brandon (Mr. Forke). The acting leader of the government was playing the part of a political Lazarus at the table of the Progressives dives. Was legislation to be brought into the House of Commons on its merits or for political purposes.

Dr. McGibbon said he felt it his duty as a member from Ontario to show "these people" (referring to the Progressives) who paid the tax bills of Canada. He reviewed the income tax, the postal revenue, the business profits tax, and the customs and excise revenue from the different provinces to show that Ontario and Quebec bore the per capita brunt of the taxation.

He referred to the income tax as the most unfair of all taxation. The salaried class paid $62,000,000 out of the $177,000,000 collected for income tax in the last five years. Other classes were able to pass along their burden to the consumer, but not so with the salaried man. He urged some modification which would lessen the burden on the salaried man.

Chicago Drainage

Hon. Charles Stewart read a summary of the correspondence between tthe Dominion and United States Governments regarding the Chicago drainage canal, the broad effect of it being that the present diversion is 9,200 cubic feet per second, which it is promised will be reduced to 8,000 or probably 6,000 cubic feet by the end of this year, and to 4,167 feet by 1935.

G. R. Geary, of South Toronto, inquired if there had been any consideration of the legal rights of the United States Secretary of War to authorize any diversion at all.

Mr. Stewart was not prepared to offer any official opinion beyond saying that the matter was being discussed.

Hon. J. A. Robb informed Donald Sutherland that no reply had been received from Australia for information regarding the reported bonus being given there for the export of butter.

ICE BROKEN BY LOAD OF WOOD

Farmer Has Narrow Escape From Drowning in River.

ONE HORSE LOST.

CARGILL Ont. Feb. 25 (Canadian Press). — George Lippert, Greenock farmer, had a narrow escape from death by drowning yesterday afternoon when, as he was crossing the Teeswater River with a team of horses and a load of wood, the ice broke and the whole outfit sank out of sight. After struggling in the water for several minutes Lipper was rescued with much difficulty by Louis T. Chenkley, who happened along at the time. One of the horses was drowned, having disappeared under the ice.

Coastal Defence By Submarines and Small Cruisers Considered.

NO COMPETITION.

ROME, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press) —Premier Mussolini yesterday received all the admirals of the Italian navy, headed by Vice-Admiral Alfredo Acton, chief of the general staff, with whom he conferred lenghthily on important problems, particularly a programme of construction.

It is learned from authorative sources that the Premier and Admiral Acton intend to reorganize the naval forces in accordance with specific needs such as coastal protection by submarines, and fast small craft of short cruising radius. In building such craft there is no question, it is emphasized, of engaging in naval construction competition with France since Italy's forces are far inferior and do not approach the limit set by the Washington conference.

Was Bankrupt Yesterday Wins State Lottery To-day

BERLIN, Feb. 25 (United Press)—A Berlin merchant who yesterday filed a petition in bankruptcy today won an eighth share in the $125,000. First prize of the Prussian state lottery. The other winners were laborers, including an octogenarian couple who were impoverished and threatened with the poor house.

Adenoids and White Bread Make Women Less Beautiful

LONDON, Feb. 25. — United Press. — Adenoids, lack of vitamines, and especially, the white bread habit, are making modern women less beautiful than the women of the Tudor period, according to Sir Harry Baldwin, Surgeon dentist to the King.

He says the women of Sargants pictures suffer in comparison with the Tudor personages of Holdbein.

GILBERT SENT FOR TRIAL ON THREE CHARGES

Preliminary Hearing Held in Closed Court at Millbrook.

VICTIMS GUARDED.

Names of Witnesses and Complainants Have Not Been Divulged.

(Special by Staff Reporter)

MILLBROOK, Ont., February 25 (Flash)—Harold Gilbert, former organizer in Peterborough of the Ku Klux Klan of the British Empire, was this afternoon committed for trial on three charges of blackmail. He elected through this counsel, Joseph Wearing, who was not present at the hearing, to stand speedy trial before a judge.

Magistrate W. H. Floyd, of Cobourg, presided at the hearing, and Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, K.C., of Cobourg is conducting the prosecution.

The magistrate excluded the public from the hearing and the names of the complainants and witnesses are being kept secret.

LADY CONSERVATIVES HELD GOOD MEETING

Addresses Were Given By Miss Tompkins, Mrs. Cameron and Mrs. Fallis.

A well attended meeting of the Women's Liberal-Conservative Association was held yesterday afternoon in Victoria Hall. A most interesting talk was given by Miss Tompkins, dealing with the address from the throne in the Provincial Legislature, and outlining the outstanding points of legislation to be dealt with at the present session.

Mrs. G. S. Cameron, in an address on the Maritime Provinces, explained very clearly the question of Maritime rights, from the viewpoint of a native of New Brunswick. Mrs. Cameron gave a brief resume of conditions in the Maritimes previous to Confederation, the building of the Intercolonial Railway and the promses given then, and contrasted with this present day conditions.

Mrs. Fallis spoke briefly on the Stevens charges against the King Government in connection with the alleged smuggling operations at Montreal. In closing the meeting Mrs. Fallis announced that at the March meeting a discusion of current events would take place at which all the members of the executive would take part. Special attention will be given to the Locarno pact and the Stevens charges in the House of Commons.

King Neither Tinker Nor Tailor, Soldier Nor Sailor, Why Support Him, Asks A. J. Cook, British Labor Leader

LONDON, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—Addressing a Labor meeting at Deptford last night, A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, modestly exclaimed: "There is no better man in the country than I," and continued: "What is the King of England? He is neither tinker nor tailor soldier nor sailor, nor anything else. I am not against him, but what right have you to keep anybody else at your children's expense?"

Declaring that there is chaos everywhere owing to the failure of capitalism, he went on: "There is a crisis of world magnitude today, which creates the greatest opportunity ever presented to the Labor movement.

This year is going to be the most important in the history of Labor. We are at the cross roads. Either we are going to move towards a co-operative commonwealth or going back to a system of intensified capitalism.

MAN WANTED BY LOCAL POLICE IS GIVEN SENTENCE

With Companion, Also Known Here, Goes to Kingston For 15 Years.

SYSTEM BLAMED.

Chief Newhall Says Latest Crime Could Have Been Prevented.

Frederick Moore and William R. Davey were sentenced on February 16 in Toronto a term of 15 years in Kingston Penitentiary because of a brutal hold-up perpetrated upon a Queen City business man. Chief Newhall declared this morning that the offence need not have been committed if the police autnorities had collaborated with him as he requested in two letters. The Chief also held the parole system greatly responsible tor the state of affairs which exists to-day in the criminal world.

Moore and Davey were both originally Peterborough men, the former having passed through the hands of the local constabulary many times on charges of petty theft. In November, 1921, Moore, in conjunction with a man named Morrissey, broke into more than twelve houses and violently assaulted the landlord of one Ashburnham home. The two men effected their escape on a train, and the local police authorities were instrumental in their being caught in Toronto. As it transpired, the Brampton police wanted the men on similar charges, but previous to the offences committed in this city, so the pair was sent to Brampton, convicted and sentenced to 5 years in Kingston. At the time of the investigation, goods which had been stolen in Peterborough were found in the possession of the two men, and the articles were sent here and identified by the owners.

Escaped From Jail.

Moore made his escape from the Kingston bastille, was recaptured and sent to the Saskatchewan Penitentiary. On July 21 of last year Robert Creighton of the Dominion Parole Board wrote to Chief Newhall, requesting particulars of Moore and Morressey, and asked if they would be re-arrested if they were liberated.

The Chief, in reply, gave the desired information, and stated that he would certainly take steps to execute the warrants which he held. The letter which he sent drew a reply acknowledging its receipt, but vouchsafing no further word as to the disposition which would be made of the two men. Chief Newhall heard nothing further of the matter until he read in a Toronto paper that Moore and Davey, together with an unknown, and as yet unapprehended, man, had committed an assault and robbery in that city.

As regards Morrissey, whom the Chief believes was the unknown third man, a communication was received by him on December 15, 1925, from J. D. Clark, Chief of the Remission Board, stating that the man, Morrissey, was making an application for clemency, and asked if it was his, Chief Newhall's, intention to re-arrest the man. Information was also requested as to the nature of the charges held against him. On the sixteenth of the same month Chief Newhall replied, stating that he would re-arrest the man and that he had the necessary evidence to win a conviction. No word has been received since by the Chief to tell him whether the man is still in custody at the Kingston Penitentiary or has been liberated by the Parole Board. If he is at large, the OPPOSE AMENDMENT.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—At a meeting of the Gloucester Township Trustee and Ratepayers' Association at Hurdman's Bridge near here last night, disapproval was voiced of the proposed amendment in the rural school system now being considered in the Ontario Legislature. The meeting passed a resolution which suggests that the present and proposed systems be altered so that in school sections of 10 pupils or under two or three schools be amalgamated, and that the grant be levied on the population of the section and the average attendance.

"Bli' me, She's a Bit of All Right"

Queen Mary Visits Popular Section of London and Wins Workmen's Hearts And Cheers By Graciousness.

LONDON, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—Queen Mary heard the dialect of London town yesterday during her visit to Poplar, in the East end, the occasion being the Queen's inspection of the baby clinic at St. Katherine's College, the oldest philanthropic foundation in the kingdom.

Poplar is populated by workers and did not appear disposed at first to show enthusiasm about royalty, but when the Quee stepped from her automobile into the street with a friendly smile and began talking to the mothers and children, the chilliness soon disappeared.

As the Queen passed from one group of women to another, chatting with the mothers and chucking the babies under the chin, she heard such exclamations as "Ain't she lively!" "Bli'me, she's a bit of all right, wot," "Give 'er a hand, she's worth it." There were cheers as the Queen drove away.

GERMANY WOULD WITHDRAW HER APPLICATION, IF OTHER NATIONS ARE ADMITTED NOW TO LEAGUE

Vagueness of Chamberlain's Speech at Birmingham Perturbs Berlin Press.

CABINET'S ACTION.

Authorizes Luther and Stresemann To Attend League Meeting.

BERLIN, Feb. 25.— (Canadian Press).—The Cabinet today indicated yesterday that it considers the meetings of the League of Nations to be held next month at Geneva the logical sequel to the Locarno conference by designating Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann to represent Germany at the Geneva session, which will be largely concerned with Germany's admission to the League.

While some uneasiness is felt in official circles over the vagueness of the speech made at Birmingham on Monday by Sir Austen Chamberlain, in which the British foreign secretary referred to the possibilities of controversy over the question of enlarging the League Council, nevertheless the German representatives will go to Geneva with the assumption that the same spirit which characterized Locarno will be in evidence there.

Berlin Press Uneasy.

On the other hand, Sir Austen's speech created alarm in the Berlin newspapers, which published with headlines such as "Germany's entry in League doubtful", "Chamberlain's evasions," and "Chamberlain in tow of French."

The newspapers seem to take it for granted that the British foreign secretary at Geneva next month will support the French argument that the council should be enlarged by the granting of permanent seats to countries other than Germany, and they emphatically affirm that should Chancellor Luther and Dr. Stresemann be confronted with a "fait accompli" in the form of an extended League Council the German delegates should not hesitate to withdraw the application for admission to the League.

In such action, the papers declare, they would have the solid support of the German nation.

It is understood on good authority that the Government has no objection to discussion of enlarging the council after Germany is a member of that body as now constituted, but objects to taking a seat on a council which would have a totally different composition from the council which was in existence when Germany decided to apply for admission.

Old Time Flask No Good Liquor of To-day Too Strong

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.— (United Press.)—Present day liquor has had its reaction on the price of antique flasks. A 1780 pewter flask and a small platter as a companion piece went up for sale at the auction of the Lord Leverhulme art collection.

Experts looked it over and shook their heads.

"One filling of present day liquor would eat that flask right up," they announced.

And the flask and platter, despite their age and the rage for antiques, went for $10.

VERA MAY HAVE TO SPEND THREE DAYS AT ISLAND

If Her Counsel Insists on Habeas Corpus Writ Hearing.

A LEGAL TANGLE.

Contention That Adultery is Not Crime Under Federal Statutes.

NEW YORK Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—The Countess of Cathcart may spend three more days at Ellis Island, if Arthur Garfield Hays, her counsel, insists upon a hearing before Federal Judge Goddard on her writ of habeas corpus.

Although United States Attorney Buckner has indicated his intention of asking dismissal of the postponed habeas corpus hearing when it comes up in federal court next Tuesday. Mr. Hays indicated yesterday, he believed she was still entitled to a hearing.

The countess' ten-day temporary release from Ellis Island expires next Wednesday. Mr. Buckner said the hearing, if insisted upon, will be adjourned by agreement of attorneys until a week from Friday. Meanwhile, the countess may have to return to Ellis Island.

Mr. Hays' proposed argument on the writ will be that adultery, for the admission of which the countess was excluded, is not a crime in England, France or South Africa, and not a crime under the federal statutes of this country. Mr. Buckner has declared he will ask the federal court to dismiss the habeas corpus writ, contending it was voided when the countess accepted release from Ellis Island.

ST. PAULS TO HAVE NEW ORGAN AND REV. W. ALLAN REQUESTED TO STAY AS PERMANENT PASTOR

Congregational Meeting Unanimous on Two Important Church Matters.

BIG GATHERING.

New Instrument Will Cost $18,000 Says Committee Report.

At a largely attended congregational meeting of the members of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, held last evening, it was decided to instal a new organ in the church during the summer months, with the expectation that it will be ready for use in the early fall.

At the recent annual meeting of the congregation an organ committee was appointed to investigate the matter and report at another meeting to be held later. The report of this committee was presented by W. H. Hill and Dr. McCullough. The committee reported that tenders had been secured from two well known organ firms to instal organs at an approximately outside cost of $18,000. The committee recommended that an organ be purchased, and that the selection of make should be left with the committee, with the understanding that steps should be taken at an early date to place the order. This report was adopted unanimously. It is understood that the new purchase will be an echo organ with chimes.

The congregation decided, also unanimously, to extend a call as permanent pastor, to Rev. William Allan, formerly of New York, who has been occupying the pulpit during the past seven months. The salary will be $4250 a year, with free manse and six weeks holidays. A year ago, owing to the conditions then prevailing, it was not possible to extend a permanent call to Rev. Mr. Allan. He was therefore extended a call for one year. Rev. Mr. Allan's ministry has been so successful and so appreciated by the congregation that a largely signed petition was presented recently to the Session by members of the congregation, requesting that a congregational meeting be held with the object of extending a permanent call without further delay. It was reported at last evening's meeting that at a joint meeting of the session and Board of Managers, the matter had been discussed and heartily approved.

D. H. Moore and H. B. Cowan, members of the Session, and Sheriff Hall and W. J. Ferguson, members of the Board of Managers, were appointed to represent the congregation in laying the matter of Rev. Mr Allan's call before the Peterborough Presbytery which will meet in Peterborough March 9th. At the close of last evening's meeting members flocked to the front and signed the petition forms to Presbytery supportin gthe call.

New Elders Elected.

At last evening's meeting nine new elders were elected by a unanimous vote of the congregation. The new members of the session are: Coleman Blewett, Robert Thompson-Currie, Fred J. A. Hall, William Lyburn, George Lockington, George A. MacDonald, William Rae, John H. Sedgwick and James Savigny.

It was reported last night that owing to the large and somewhat widely scattered congregation of St. Paul's Church, it was desirable that the session should be enlarged The session as now constituted, will comprise approximately 28 elders.

Last evening's meeting was one of the largest congregational meetings ever held in the church.

First Immigrant Train Reach Winnipeg With 200

WINNIPEG, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—Heralding the beginning of a steady influx of settlers during the present year, the first immigrant through train of the season, bearing more than 200 newcomers, reached Winnipeg yesterday. The settlers will be distributed throughout the Western Provinces.

The majority of this first contingent are from the British Isles, while a number of families, including a group of Mennonites, are from Central Europe. The British immigrants came to Canada under the 3,000-family scheme of the British Government. With the party was Miss Madge Hawthorne who is the first single woman to reach the West under the new low passage rates.

END OF STRIKE HITS DEALERS

May Face Bankruptcy Because of Large Stocks of Substitutes.

MORE EXPECTED.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—The New York Times says that New York coal dealers have 700,000 tons of unsaleable hard coal substiutes in their yards and with the prices on substitutes broken by the anthracite strike settlement, many of them face bankruptcy. In the railroad yards of New Jersey, there are 12,000 cars containing 400,000 tons of soft coal and coke, with more shipments arriving every day. Several steamships loaded with Welsh, Scotch and Westphalia anthracite are due next week.

Half-and-Half Coal.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. United Press. — Coal dealers, with 700,000 tons of substitutes on hand, have been thrown into a panic with their customers demanding anthracite or nothing.

The situation is so serious that Col. J. J. Byrne, the state fuel commission chairman, issued a statement calling upon the public to buy "half and half" until the market should become adjusted.

The railroads will be hurt by the demand for anthracite, the dealers said, in revealing that 12,000 cars of bituminous coal and coke are in the New Jersey yards, with more arriving every day.

JUGO SLAVS AND ITALY MAY ALLY

Agreement To Act in Concert Against Germany is Rumored.

NO SECRET TREATIES.

ROME, Feb. 24. — (Canadian Press.)—The Jugo-Slavian foreign minister, Dr. Ninchitch, arrived here to-day. In the absence of official intimations as to the purpose of his visit, conflicting theories are advanced by the newspapers.

Some say he is seeking an agreement by which Italy and Jugo-Slavia would act in concert against the "German menace."

The Giornale D'Italia maintains that the two nations will agree to stand together and defend the status quo.

"There will be no secret treaties, no old style alliance," it says, "but practical and positive agreements about certain eventualities."

CONSERVATIVES ARE OPPOSED TO CHANGING TEMPERANCE ACT

Interviews With East Peterborough Supporters Show Firm Opinion.

UNITY THREATENED.

"Leave Things As They Are," Says James Graystock, of Warsaw.

TORONTO, Feb. 25 (Special to The Examiner)—Premier Ferguson and the members of his cabinet who are behind him in insisting on a Government Control policy for the Conservatives at the next election are seriously worried. The Tory members of the legislature themselves are sharply divided on the question.

The reason is not far to seek. Prominent Conservatives interviewed in Prince Edward, Dundas, East Elgin, East Peterborough, Simcoe South, and the new riding or Norfolk practically without exception, gave it as their opinion that Tory candidates would meet certain defeat in the event of taking a Government Control attitude.

All of these ridings are represented by Conservatives in the present Ontario house, and it is in a large measure pressure from these and similar dry Conservative ridings that have so far balked every attempt of the wets to tie the whole Conservative party to a Government Control policy, much as several members of the Cabinet would like to see the wet efforts succeed.

East Peterborough

The following opinions from East Peterborough Tories are typical of many other similar interviews received.

"The Government had better leave things as they are if it wants to stay in power," declared James Graystock, Conservative of Warsaw, East Peterborough riding. "It's the best temperance measure we have ever had. We wouldn't have government control in East Peterborough."

"The situation is quite all right the way it is," declared Robert Moore, Conservative, of the Township of Dummer, "A little more temperance would be better. If there were going to be any change it should be to make the Province drier."

"Government sale would not have much show here," declared Thomas Clements of Warsaw. "I am a Conservative, but if the Government puts in Government control, I will vote against the Government."

"I am strong for the O.T.A. and against Government sale," declared George Taylor of Warsaw, who voted Tory last election, "but I don't think the Government is enforcing the O.T.A. very well now."

STATE OWNERSHIP OF POWER UP AGAIN

Question of Development Along St. Lawrence and Niagara Considered.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—The question of State ownership and development of water power resources along the Niagara and St. Lawrence Rivers again leaped into the political limelight to-day with hearings scheduled before the State Water Power Commission on applications of private corporations for the right to develop the Hydro-Electric energy of these streams.

MAN WANTED BY LOCAL POLICE

Chief is positive that he is the other man implicated in the Toronto holdup.

Chief Newhall maintains that if the information which he had requested, as shown by copies of the letters in his possession, had been utilized, the notorious and dangerous criminals would not have been at large and a good useful merchant of Toronto would not have suffered the inconvenience of a great bodily injury and the loss of considerable revenue from his business. Had he been notified of the liberation of the criminals they would have been promptly re-arrested, he declared, and haled before a Peterboro court to answer the charges against them for the robberies committed here in 1921.

The Chief stated that even as a child Moore showed tendencies toward a life of crime. He had had occasion to warn him many times, and the latest development in his career comes as no surprise. Davey, who was a party to the Toronto assault, also spent some of his youth in this city.

D.F.A. SPONSORS TRIP.

Will Ask No Guarantee From Provinces For Football Tour.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21 (Canadian Press). — The Dominion Football Association will assume the entire financial responsibility for the forthcoming tour of the English Football Association team and will divide any profits accruing from the games with the various associations, it is stated here. No guarantees will be required and the division is to be made pro rata on the net gate basis so that the associations contributing the greater amount to the net receipts will share in a larger proportion of the profits if any.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

W. J. ROME,
435 Mark Street.

"Nothing has done more for Peterborough than the industrial Exhibition. A few years ago when I was on the farm I used to wonder why Peterborough did not have a good exhibition. The value of the exhibition, however, is not for the farming community alone. Manufacturers are given an opportunity to display their goods. It brings before the public new inventions and is a good education.

Mr. Denne and his directors deserve credit for the way they have worked to make the exhibition a success.

Just take a look at the buildings, grand stand, and sheds for stock. This goes to show there are real live men behind it.

TALENT TEA.

Treasure Seekers' Bible Class Gathered at Home of Mrs. Bannon.

The Treasure Seekers' Bible Class of St. James' church gathered and spent a very enjoyable evening on Tuesday of this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bannon, 271 Perry street. Seventy of the class and friends gathered to take part in a talent tea. The programme was as follows:

Mr. A. Kent, chirman, vocal solo; F. Pratt; address, J. O. Fife; piano solo, Eileen Rose; reading, Rev. Mr. Richardson; address, Mr. Merrill; piano solo, Miss Josephne Arthurs; address, Mr. Spence; piano solo, Miss Mary Wood; address, A. E. Prest; vocal solo, Miss Geneva Sedgwick; reading, Rev. Mr. Richardson; piano solo, Miss F. Saunders.

After the programme, dainty refreshments were served by the ladies.

"High View Farm" For Sale

Special Farm of 236 acres, clay loam, 10 miles from city of Peterboro, on good gravel road, 1 mile from Cavan C.P.R. Station, 60 miles from Toronto, with A1 buildings, new; house of red pressed brick, 11 rooms, bath, furnace, running water. Barns fully equipped, with stone wall, cement floor and steel stanchions for 45 head, also steel calf and bull pens, hay fork and slings. Horse stable holds 10 head, all have litter and feed carriers. 14 by 45 hollow clay tile silo.

This is an excellent grain and dairy farm, with two maple sugar bushes, and could handle from 40 to 50 head of dairy cows easily. It has grown 50 bushels of wheat per acre. The farm is well watered with a flowing creek in pasture and a flowing spring for the buildings and which has head enough to go over the buildings.

This farm can be bought as a going concern, with stock, feed and implements.

BUSINESS SOLD TO LOCAL MAN

H. M. Fowlds and Sons Sell Their Campbell-ford Branch

TO A. J. JENKINS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 25.—H. M. Fowlds and Sons have dis-posed of their branch business here to A. J. Jenkins, who will take pos-session on April 1. This is the largest property transfer that has been recorded in Campbellford since the Windsor Hotel changed hands about two years ago.

H. M. Fowlds and Sons, who have branch establishments in Hastings and Os[h]awa, have carried on a coal and wood business here for nearly 40 years the founder and head of the firm being H. M. Fowlds who died some 20 years ago, but the name of the firm has not been changed. They also sold cement, lime and plaster and for some time operated an elevator, but this build-ing was sold a few years ago to the Peterborough Cereal Company. The present members of the firm are Walter M. Fowlds of Hastings, manager of the branch in that vil-lage and James, his brother, who is located in Oshawa. James E. Johns-ton, who has been with the firm for 19 years, has been the resident man-ager for several years and has al-ways been popular with the cus-tomers.

Mr. Jenkins, the new proprietor, is an old resident of the town and for nearly a quarter of a century was chief accountant for the Campbell-ford Cloth Company, retiring from that position last Fall. He is prom-inent in social and church, as well as in business circles and at the last municipal election was nominated for the mayoralty ad as a member of the Board of Education but de-clined to stand for either position.

HEAR CHURCH CASES.

Property Commissioners in Belleville Friday.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 25. — Can-adian Press. — The church proper-ty commissioners come to Belleville on Friday for what is expected to be a sitting of several days.

Nine cases are to be heard, sev-eral from Kingston Presbytery and two from Peterboro.

The famous St. John's church, Pittsburgh case, will it is said, like-ly re-appear, while cases will be ad-judicated in connection with such places as Brighton, Camden East and Plainfield.

Sessions will be held in the court house, and the first case will start at 9.30 o'clock on Friday morning.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM JACKMAN

STIRLING, Feb. 24.—Another of Stirling's older residents in the per-son of William Jackman, who suf-fered from a stroke on Thursday last, passed away on Sunday morn-ing, in his 77th year. He was born on a farm in the 6th Concession of Rawdon, near Wellman's Corners, where he resided until a few years ago when he came to the village to live, and enjoy a rest from the stren-uous life he had been used to on the farm. He is survived by his widow, one son, Elgin, on the home-stead; one daughter, Mrs. C. W. Dracup and several grandchildren, as well as great grand-children. The funeral was held in St. Paul's Church on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. C. W. Barrett, assisted by Rev. F. Joblin of Rawdon circuit, having charge of the service. The bearers were C. W. Thompson, Thos. Mont-gomery Sr., Allen Bailey, Urbane Heath, W. H. Patterson and Hamil-ton Johnson, all members of the I.O.O.F. of which the deceased had been a member for nearly thirty years. Interment took place at Wellman's Cemetery.

MRS. WILLIAM ANDERSON.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 25.—Relatives in town received word Wednesday of the death of Mrs. William Anderson of Wooler, one of the oldest residents of that vil-lage, who passed away in her eigh-tieth year after a long period of failing health.

The deceased was the relict of the late William Anderson, who died about 17 years ago, a man who for years had conducted a successful carriage business in the village, some of the vehicles which he first turned out being still in use in this district. The business is now car-ried on by one of the sons.

The late Mrs. Anderson is sur-vived by four sons, James, who is in the United States, Gordon at the family home in Wooler, George, who lives on the farm in the neigh-borhood that has been in the pos-session of the family for years, and Dr. Stewart Anderson, of Wooler.

John A. and James C. Anderson, of Campbellford, and William An-derson, of Seymour West, are neph-ews of the deceased and Mrs. J. R. Battisby of Campbellford, is a niece.

The deceased was a Presbyterian in religion and remained in that faith until the end. She was a de-voted church member and during her long life enjoyed the esteem of all who knew her. There was no one in the community more famil-iar with the history of what is one of the most prosperous sections of Northumberland county, a section which she saw emerge slowly from its primeval state.

The funeral will be held Friday to the cemetery at Stockdale, where the husband and son of the deceased were buried.

MRS. MARY TOTTON

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 25—After enjoying the best of health throughout her long life time of nearly 86 years, Mary Clancy, relict of the late John Totton, was sud-denly stricken Tuesday and passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles K. Stephens, with whom she had been living for some time. Her passing marks the death of one of the oldest pioneers in this district, one who reared a large family of sons and daughters, all of whom survive with one exception.

The late Mrs. Totton was born at Camden, Prince Edward County, in May, 1840, and resided there until her marriage when she was 22 years old. She and her husband, who died 25 years ago, lived on a farm in Rawdon Township for a number of years. The deceased had been a resident of Campbellford since last autumn.

The late Mrs. Totton had a family of thirteen children, six sons and seven daughters, and all of these are still living but one daughter, Mrs. Charles Stewart of town, who died in 1907, are still living. She is also survived by 24 grand and 15 great grandchildren. The daughters are: Mrs. Robert Sharpe, Toronto; Mrs. John Reid of Stirling; Mrs. (Rev.) W. E. Honey whose husband is pastor of the Sydney circuit; Mrs. W. J. Smith and Mrs. James H. Royce of Guelph and Mrs. Charles K. Stephens of town.

The sons are William of Donna, Tex., Malcolm of Rawden, Andrew of Dallas, Tex., Morley of London, Calvin of Clive, Alta., and Rev. John O., pastor of the United Church at Cavan.

The funeral will be held today. At 1 p.m. Rev. Wesley Elliott will hold a short service at the home after which the cortege will leave for the church at Wellman's Corners where the funeral sermon will be preached by the pastor, Rev. Fred Joblin. The remains will be interred beside those of the husband and daughter of the deceased.

The late Mrs. Totton is survived by three brothers, Andrew Clancy of Oregon, Israel and Urban of Rawdon, and by two sisters, Mrs. George Vandervoort of Toronto and Mrs. Irvin Frederick.

WEDDING BELLS.

LUNN—LITTLE.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 24. — A quiet wedding was solemnized by Rev. F. H. Howard, at the United Church parsonage, at 7.30 a.m., on Monday, February 22, when Amelia Ellen Little was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. David Lunn, of Cavan.

The bride, who looked charming, wore a dress of rosewood silk Can-ton crepe, and carried a bouquet of rosebuds to match. Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Rowland witnessed the sign-ing of the register.

Mr. and Mrs. Lunn left, amid a shower of rice and confetti on their honeymoon trip to Orillia where they are visiting friends of the groom.

The bride wore for her travelling wrap a beautiful new fur coat with tangerine silk hat, and on their re-turn on Thursday evening, a recep-tion will be held in their large and comfortable home, Fourth Line, Cavan.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomul-sion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing ag-encies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stom-ach, attacks the seat of the trou-ble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Cremulsion is guaranteed satis-factory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory dis-eases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking ac-cording to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SMALL INCREASE IN FARM VALUES

Average During 1925 Was $38 and $37 in 1924.

WAGES UP ALSO.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25. — Canadian Press. — The annual report on farm values was issued yesterday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. It deals wth estimated values during 1925 of farm lands, farm help and farm live stock.

Changes in the average wages of farm help for 1925 as compared with 1924, are not very marked; as a rule they show a slight increase.

For the whole of Canada the av-erage wages given to farm helpers during the summer season of 1925, was $40 for men and $22 for women. (in 1924 the average wage for wo-men was $23.) The value of board was $23 for men in 1925 as against $22 in 1924, and for women it was $19 in both years. The total for wages and board in 1925 was thus $63 for men and $41 for women helpers per month.

The average value of occupied farm lands for Canada as a whole, including both improved and unim-proved land as well as dwelling houses, barns, stables and other farm buildings, was $38 per acre, as compared with $37 in each of the two preceding years.

By provinces the averages are as follows, with the preceding year's values given in the brackets:

Prince Edward Island $45, (40); Nova Scotia $37, $(37); New Bruns-wick $34, (37); Quebec $54, ($53); Ontario $67, ($65); Manitoba $29, (28); Saskatchewan $24, (24); Al-berta $26 ($25); British Columbia $88, ($96.)

There was some increase in aver-age land values in nearly every province The average values in 1925 of orchard and fruit lands were Nova Scotia $108, ($120); Ontario $163 ($122); British Columbia $301, ($340.)

HOTEL FIRE TOLL REACHES ELEVEN

Two More Deaths Result From Blaze.

MIDDLETOWN, N.Y., Feb. 25. —Harry Miller, 26 of 522 West 185th Street, New York, fatally burned in the disastrous Prairie House fire at Hurleyville, died at 10 o'clock Tuesday evening in a Monti-cello Hospital. The toll was in-creased to ten by his death, nine others having died in the structure.

Julius Jacobson, of Hurleyville, was so badly burned that authorities at the hospital declared he could not live through the day.

Twenty-two persons, mostly from New York City, are now patients in the Monticello hospital.

The Prairie House fire tragedy at Hurleyville claimed another life this morning, when Mrs. Ray Friendman, of 1836 West Twelfth Street, Brook-lyn, died in Monticello Hospital of burns and shock, bringing the total list of dead to 11.

The announcement of the death of Mrs. Friendman came as a surprise. It was believed she had every chance of recovering. Her death brings the total number of women claimed by the fire to two.

The richest girl in the world is said to be the twelve-year-old daugh-ter of the late J. B. Duke, the American tobacco "king", who left her about $150,000,000. Mr. Duke was the inventor of the popular "cigarette card."

FOOTPATHS NEEDED.

Extremely Dangerous For Pedestrians on Highways Says Speaker.

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The need of foothpaths for pedestrians on Ontario highways was urged by Major R. J. Hannah, president, in his address at the open-ing of the convention of the On-tario Good Roads Association here yesterday.

"It is extremely dangerous for pedestrians walking along the high-ways, especially at night," Major Hannah said. "Many accidents have occurred and many lives have been lost and dazzling headlights have been partially responsible."

FEDERAL WARRANT TO ARREST PONZI

"Financial Wizard" Out on State Bond.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 25.—Canadian Press. — A Federal war-rant for the arrest of Charles Ponzi, "financial wizard," on charges alleg-ing use of the mails to defraud, was issued here last night at the re-quest of post office inspectors.

The federal warrant was issued in connection with Ponzi's real estate dealings by which he sought to sell lots for ten dollars each with the purpose he declared of paying ba[ck] creditors who lost in his interna-tional reply coupon activities in Bos-ton.

Ponzi is under $5,000 bond on state charges alleging violation of state laws in connection with his real es-tate dealings, which he conducted under declaration of trust.

CASHING OF ALL CHEQUES AT PAR AIM OF FARMERS

With Elimination of Ex-change Would Help Ec-onomic Stability.

REGINA MEETING.

Annual Session of Canadian Council of Agri-culture.

REGINA, Sask., Feb. 25 (Cana-dian Press) — Elimination of ex-change and the cashing of all cheques at par is asked in a resolu-tion adopted yesterday at the second session of the annual meeting of the Canadian Council of Agriculture here. The council decided to sub-mit the resolution to the govern-ment and such other bodies as may be deemed advisable later. The cashing of cheques at par, it was felt by the membership would mean much to stabilize a better economic condition throughout the country.

Discussion took place on the ques-tion of banking and currency and a committee was appointed to draft a policy with regard to the issue of currency and submit it to the ex-ecutives of the constituent bodies of the council. The question will be brought before the next meeting of the council.

Amendment of hog grading regu-lations was brought before the coun-cil by representatives of the United Farmers of Ontario. The amend-ments aimed to ensure the producer being paid on the basis of grade, even though selling his hogs to a buyer at a country point. The mat-ter was referred to Rice-Jones of Winnipeg to take up with the Wes-tern Swine committee and to the executive of the United Farmers of Ontario to take up with the Eas-tern Swine Breeders.

The council passed a resolution favoring the conscription of wealth in war time.

A resolution from Ontario propos-ing that to prevent the spread of veneral disease all persons handling foodstuffs in hotels, restaurants, bake shops and other public places be required to submit to medical examination, was discussed. It was finally tabled with the understanding that another resolution on the same subject would be introduced later.

THE NEW LOAN.

It is anticipated that the new bond issue of $105,000,000 by the Dominion of Canada for the refunding of maturing loans will be quickly snapped up.

The Minister of Finance, Hon. J. A. Robb, has chosen, it is felt, a most opportune time for offering this issue, inasmuch as the bond market reports a shortage of high-grade bonds as having prevailed for some weeks, owing to Provincial and municipal issues being few in number and small in volume.

$65,000,000 of the new bond issue will be offered in Canada and the balance in New York.

The particulars of these bonds are the same as in the case of other Dominion loans, the principal being payable at the offices of the Receiver-General at Ottawa or at that of the Assistant Receiver-General in the various centres, while the interest will be payable at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank.

All the new bonds will bear interest at 4 1-2 per cent., and financial men seem agreed that the issue will be speedily taken up both in this country and in the United States.

THE HUMANE SOCIETY.

It is evident from the report presented by Inspector Smith to the Peterboro Humane Society that there is every need for the operations of such an organization in this city and district.

The Inspector has been able to corrct a number of abuses and to successfully intervene when animals have been mistreated or neglected, and work of this kind should be encouraged.

In this connection the fact that the Peterboro branch of the society has already secured a membership of 110 is particularly gratifying, inasmuch as a large membership means a strong pressure of public opinion behind the activities of the Inspector.

It is not surprising to find that already a number of instances of ill-treatment of horses has been dealt with.

This condition has been allowed to continue because there has been no particular machinery by which action could be taken.

The fact that an Inspector is now actively in the field will lead, it is hoped, to a speedy improvement, not only in the case of horses, but of animals generally, and all humane citizens will be glad to know that this is the case.

APPOINTING RETURNED MEN.

The charge made by Karl Homuth, Labour member in the Legislature that the Ontario Government has passed over qualified returned soldiers in making appointments is one that, unfortunately, can be laid at the doors of many Governments, municipal and otherwise.

In public appointments generally there is not that keen anxiety to select men who have fought as such men, in the light of what was promised, have a right to expect.

Everybody remembers the recruiting speeches during the war years; the promises that nothing would be too good for the men who went overseas when they returned.

Some attempt has been made to live up to these offers, of course, and many public positions are rightly held by ex-service men.

But it does seem that in many other appointments where veterans quite capable of filling the positions could be located there has not been the care taken to choose such men as should have been.

In most municipalities, perhaps, cases of this kind are to be found—and they stand in a disagreeable contrast to the lavish promises hurled at young Canadians from every recruiting platform in the years when the world was in the grip of war.

CANADA DOING WELL.

There are many reasons why Canadians should look forward to the future with a great deal of assurance, and a number of good reasons why they should look back over last year with an equal amount of satisfaction.

The Examiner mentions a few of these reasons merely to indicate that an optimistic view is justified.

For instance, the harvests added $300,000,000 to our agricultural income, as compared with 1924.

The farm land boom in Western Canada resulted in the sale of more land in five months than in the previous five years, according to a trust company's report.

Tourists left between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 in the country last year, representing cash returns for services or manufactured goods.

In our own Province our mineral production is running on a basis of $83,000,000 a year, as compared with $74,000,000 in 1921, gold production alone being at a rate of $4,000,000 over 1924 and $9,000,000 above the 1923 out-turn.

Increased production in Canada's pulp and paper mills has enabled them to exceed the monthly output of the United States three times during the past year, and for the first seven months of the year Canadian production increased 9 per cent., while that of the United States increased less than 2 per cent.

No wonder such a well-informed financial journal as Barron's is moved to say that "prosperity in Canada has a somewhat florid complexion these days."

IMPERIAL JEREMIAHS.

One of the plagues of our times are gentlemen who visit strange countries, view them from parlor car windows, and return home to discuss their people and problems with an air of pontifical authority. In this category must be placed Mr. Percy Hurd, a gentleman whose place in British politics and journalism is somewhat obscure, but who, for some reason more obscure still, is selected to write on Canada in the Daily Mail Year Book. Taking for his text "Canada's Drift," Mr. Hurd asks: "Is Canada drifting away from her Empire moorings?" and goes on to say:

"The question has come under acute discussion of late because of two authoritative British utterances. Sir Auckland Geddes, fresh from the British Ambassadorship in the United States, has warned Englishmen that Canadians look for and receive more sympathetic and understanding consideration in Washington than in London; and Dean Inge, moralizing after a trans-Atlantic visit, 'finds that probably Canada and possibly Australia may feel themselves in some ways rather more drawn towards the United States than to ourselves.'"

* * * *

And Mr. Hurd, evidently satisfied that his evidence is formidable, proceeds:

"Are political and economic forces now to do what was beyond the power of the German sword? . . . . Manifestly, then, the moorings of Canada are changing. It is for Canadian and British statesmen to reflect upon the change and consider its bearing upon inter-Imperial policy."

* * * *

Here we have an example of the sort of slovenly reasoning, the sloppy thinking, and the long-distance judgments which do infinite harm among peoples. For what are this man's processes in reaching his conclusion? He takes a vagrant remark of Sir Auckland Geddes, tears it from its context, adds a few generalizations of a cleric notorious for his pessimism, and whose recent statements about French domination of Canada revealed him as absurd, stirs the two with feeble imaginings probably born of superficial utterances of a few inconsequential Canadians, and produces—an Imperial crisis.

* * * *

For half a century Canada has based her whole economic policy upon determination to stay within the Empire. Her costly transcontinentals; the millions she has put into her harbors; the preferences that she has extended to British trade—all these have rested upon passionate resolve to keep her trade East and West rather than North and South, to resist temptations of commercial and perhaps of political union with the great Republic to the South. Even when the project of the C.P.R. was launched, the highest justification which Canadian statesmen of that time found for it was that it would prove to be a great Imperial asset.

* * * *

Nor is that all. Those who, like Mr. Percy Hurd, see Canada drifting from her Imperial moorings, surely forget the history of the past 25 years. They forget the Canadian sentiment that drove a reluctant Government into Canadian participation in the South African war. They forget the burden of debt and death—two billions of dollars and sixty thousand graves in France—with which Canada emerged from 1914-18. Surely these things, if nothing else, prohibit the loose talk of certain long distance Cassandras in England!

* * * *

Mr. Hurd's opinions, it may be said, are of no consequence; and that is true. But the circulation of a reputable publication like the Daily Mail Year Book is of consequence. It gives to the words of any writer, no matter how obscure, an authority which they do not deserve; and it has a harmful and misleading effect wherever it may circulate. One has but to talk with the leaders of opinion in other portions of the Empire to realize the mischief that is being done. There are those in Australia and New Zealand, for example, who look upon Canada more as the ally of the United States than as a branch of the British Commonwealth.

* * * *

Perhaps we here in Canada are somewhat to blame. We permit the seemingly inconsequential talk of a puny minority among us to go out to the world unchallenged. We permit certain Governments to play to the gallery of a tiny anti-Imperial element among us without sufficient chastisement. The overwhelming mass of our people, passionately devoted to British connection upon a just basis, are mostly inarticulate. As a direct consequence, the Percy Hurds of Britain, the loquacious and sloppy-minded everywhere, the enemies of Britain in all lands, profoundly misjudge us.

* * * *

But let there be no mistake about it. Canada today, perhaps more than ever in her history, is determinedly and whole-heartedly British. Not, thank Heaven, that she is antagonistic to the United States. America has been a good neighbor to us. We have tried to be, and we shall continue to try to be, a good neighbor to her. We shall welcome her capital. We shall value her friendship. We shall try to interpret her to England, try to be the medium of Anglo-Saxon-Celtic harmony. But that is all. Great though the Republic is, vast though its destiny is bound to be, tremendous as may be the possibilities of Canadian-American coalition, there is not one Canadian in a thousand who would prefer to see Canada a State of the American Union rather than as a free member of the British Commonwealth.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Ontario Temperance Act question, like Banquo's ghost, will not down.

Mr. Ferguson forgot to mention whether he classified Mr. Raney as a flea or as a mosquito.

Politics in China seem to be almost as badly mixed up as in Canada.

Mr. Dunning's advent into the Federal arena has been accompanied by press tributes which will keep the former Premier of Saskatchewan busy if he hopes to live up to them all.

The Minister of Highways says Ontario is not going to have a 35 miles per hour speed limit for the present. That won't bother a lot of drivers who regard 40 miles as crawling.

The writer of "The Prisoner's Song" is dead, but the sad ballad still remains. Another case of "The evil that men do lives after them; the good is often interred with their bones."

Premier Dunning can scarcely hope to catch up to Mr. Graham's reputation as a humourist.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—Sales of any but the choicest killers, except in cows, are being made today at 25 to 50 cents a cwt. below last week.

One buyer said he had looked over everything on the market on Tuesday afternoon and could not find a dozen real good butchers' cattle. The farmers, he said, were trying to skimp on the grain feed. Just an odd handyweight sold today at $7.50 a cwt. A bunch of 11 fair killers made $6.70 a cwt. Rogers & Maybee picked up a few export steers from $7.25 to $7.75, heifers at $7.25 and bulls at $5.25 to $5.50 a cwt. Buyers were in the market for cows again today and the supply was quickly cleaned up at firm prices. Choice cows were $6 to $6.50, good cows $5 to $5.75 and mediums $4.25 to $4.75 a cwt. Trade generally was more active in the late morning.

Smaller shipments of calves are leaving here for Buffalo this week, but there is no excess of supplies and prices stay firm and tops were up 50 cents a cwt. to 14½ cents today. Good mediums calves are selling as high as 12½ cents a pound.

Tuesday's rally in lambs at 25 cents a cwt. is being held today and in cases there was a further advance of 25 cents to 14 cents for choice ewes and wethers. Heavy lambs sold at 12¼ cents and bucks and culls at 10¾ to 11 cents a pound.

Nearly 2,500 hogs are on the market this morning and packers figure the market favors their side. Monday and Tuesday sales were made generally at $13 a cwt. f.o.b., but the buyers are looking to get hogs at $12.75 a cwt., their bid price.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—Downturns in wheat values at Minneapolis and Winnipeg had a good deal to do with a sharp break which the wheat market here underwent today just before the finish. It was reported that the Canadian growers' wheat pool was selling at Winnipeg. Chicago closing prices on wheat were: heavy, 1 3-4 to 2 1-4c net lower, May (new) $1.67 1-2 to $1.67 5-8, and July $1.45 to $1.45 1-4; with corn unchanged to 3-8c higher; oats unchanged to 1-4c off, and provisions showing five cents to 22c decline.

What chiefly dampened the ardor of friends of higher prices was the fact that the Minneapolis wheat market, influenced by the action of Winnipeg, fell to nearly eight cents under Chicago, enough to allow profitable shipments to Chicago from Minneapolis. Announcement that the world's available supply showed 2,415,000 bushels increase for the week tended also to promote liberal selling.

EGG PRICES

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 24 (Canadian Press) — The egg market is generally unchanged with receipts in the east still light.

Montreal egg market is active under present consumptive demand and unchanged in price.

Edmonton egg market steady, receipts light. Dealers quoting country shippers delivered extras 28, firsts 25, seconds 19. Poultry market unchanged. Calgary wholesale fresh extras $11.00 per case, firsts $10.00 per case, seconds $9.00 per case.

Winnipeg wholesale fresh extras 42 to 44, firsts 40, seconds 34, storage extras 28, firsts 25, seconds 18.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 24 (Canadian Press)—The export and local trade in cash in the Montreal market today showed no improvement and the market was dull, but the undertone was about steady and prices were unchanged.

An easy feeling prevailed in the local market for spring wheat grades of flour, but there was no further change in prices announced.

There was no change in the potatoe market and prices were fully maintained with sales of Quebec varieties at $2.75 per 90 pound bag ex-track.

An Easter feeling developed in the butter market and prices for No. 1 pasteurized creamery were quoted at 43 to 43 1-4 for round lots of 100 packages while smaller lots could be bought for 43 1-2 to 44c per pound. Receipts were 21 packages.

The market for cheese remains unchanged, the undertone being firm with current receipts quoted at 10c to 19 1-4c per pound. Receipts were 46 boxes.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

BAD LUCK

Bad luck is tthe kick which hits a man when he gets behind time. When one is dashing frantically around so far behind that he can merely snatch at the tails of his work, something is pretty sure to happen and when he comes to, his first exclamation usually is, "Bad luck!" Being late makes hurry, and hurry almost invariably causes one to overlook some detail that will lose him more in the future. In the rush the gate is left open, the books unbalanced, the letter unread, the contract unexamined, and it is these unswept corners of a man's affairs in which the germs of bad luck breed. If a man finds himself habitually or even frequently behind with his work, one of two things is the matter; either he does not know how to work, or he has too much work to do; and whichever it is, he will save time, nerve force, and money by adjusting himself to his work or his work to himself. Most frequently hurry is the result of misapplied energy rather than too much work. We rush frantically around from one task to another doing a little here and a little there, tangling up the skeins of our duties and mislaying our tools until we are hopelessly behind and nervously wrecked. It is seeing that the belts are on, the machinery oiled, that one things is finished before being laid aside and that in our rush we do not put one thing where something else ought to be merely to get it out of the way, which saves time and nerve force and avoids bad luck. The elements of swiftness do not include hurry. The greatest accomplishments are wrought by deliberate precision, and by the careful and apparently easy doing of each thing as it comes along.

The Living Water

Read Jn. 4:7-15. Text: 4:14.

The water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up into eternal life.

Meditation—This woman thought to get enough life by satisfying physical appetites, by escape from work and by winning admiration. We think greater prominence, wealth, better clothes and more conspicuous friends would give it to us. We are consumed with worry about all these things. When Christ becomes the real center of a man's life the soul finds within a fountain of thought, of affection and of actions which automatically overflows to others, quite independently of petty human competitions. When we live the overflowing life, others are blessed and so are we.

Prayer—Gracious Giver of the Water of life, guve us the living water. Grant that we be not like cisterns but rather like fountains which receive but to give out. Grant us to be generous in soul, always seeking to make our words and deeds bear testimony that Thou art the source of whatever goodness we may attain.

SIR HENRY THORNTON EXPLAINS FINANCING OF ROUYN RAILWAY

Constructed By Private Capital, With C.N.R. Controlling the Position—Arranged For $5,000,000 Bond Issue —None of Money Yet Drawn.

CONTRACT LET ON LOWEST TENDER.

MONTREAL, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press)—The speeches made in the House of Commons during the past few days on the subject of the Rouyn railway, were such as to create in the public mind a misunderstanding of the actual facts of the case, was the opinion expressed by Sir Henry W. Thornton, K.B.E., chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, interviewed yesterday.

"The administration of the National system" said Sir Henry, "had been watching developments in the Rouyn mining area for two years and became convinced that the establishments of important mining enterprises with resultant railway traffic was assured. The territory, as is well known, is contiguous to the main line of the transcontinental section of the National system. It became apparent that speedy and definite action was necessary if the interests of the Canadian National Railways were to be protected. Accordingly the decision was made to build a branch line running from the transcontinental for about forty-five miles into this mining field.

It was considered advisable in the interests of the railway for this branch line opening up the new mining area to be constructed by private capital, but under such arrangements as would leave the Canadian National Railways in control of the position. By adopting this plan it was found possible to obtain financial grants from the Quebec Provincial government and from Noranda Mines Company. Secondly, much more speedy action could be taken in the necessary negotiations relating to the construction of the road and prompt action was absolutely essential.

"The legal department of the National system, later supported by outside counsel, informed the administration of the National Railways that this course was entirely within the law, and assailable from a legal standpoint. With this assurance, and for the reasons already given, the administration proceeded to interest private capital in the enterprise.

C.N.R. Took Charge

"In order that no time should be lost the engineering department of the National Railways made the location surveys, and the National system itself took charge of the project until such time as the final financial arrangements could be made. An arrangement was finally consummated with bankers who agreed to open a credit of approximately $3,000,000 for the Rouyn railway. The money necessary for the construction of the road was to be drawn down $500,000 at a time as the work proceeded; interest to be charged at 4 1-2 per cent. As and when the money was so drawn, that is to say, no interest on any part of the total sum was to be charged until funds were actually required. When construction was complete, and the engineers' certificates of cost filed, bonds would be issued for the actual cost of construction and these bonds would then be sold and the proceeds used to replace the money previously drawn down."

Sir Henry said he had heard the statement made that no tenders were asked for the work of constructing the Rouyn line, but this was incorrect. Several well-known contracting firms submitted tenders for the work and the contract was awarded to the lowest bidder.

Further Financing

"When the original credit of approximately $3,000,000 was placed at the disposal of the Rouyn railway," continued Sir Henry, "the development of the new mining district appeared so promising that it was thought probable that within the next five years or so further transportation facilities might be required. To protect this situation, and to avoid the delay incident to a reopening of the negotiations with respect to financing should extensions of the line be agreed upon in the future the administration of the Canadian National railways decided that it would be the part of wisdom to arrange for a total bond issue of $5,000,000. The difference between the actual cost of construction and this $5,000,000 was for the purpose of providing for future contingencies, a procedure which is not unusual in business enterprises. No bonds beyond the cost of construction will, however, be issued unless a future necessity develops such as the building of spurs, etc., to new mines, and the securities will be held in the treasury of the company."

Sir Henry affirmed that while the financial arrangements had been made, thus far no money whatever had been drawn down under the banking credit provided. The question of the utilization of any portion of this credit for campaign fund purposes could, therefore, be at once dismissed as impossible for this reason alone.

Legal Precautions

"In the conception and execution of the project," Sir Henry concluded, "the administration of the Canadian National Railways has been guided by competent legal advice, and has surrounded it with every precaution. The engineers and auditors of the National system have kept a vigilant eye upon the whole transaction, and the administration assumes entire responsibility. In acting as they did, those responsible for the administration of the system took such action as seemed necessary to protect the interests of the National system, and to perform what they considered was their duty to the people of the Dominion."

LUMBER COMPANIES PLANNING MERGER

25 U. S. Companies in $40,000,000 Combine.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—The wave of consolidations which has swept through many lines of industry has touched the lumber business. Twenty-five lumber firms, with a capitalization of approximately $40,000,000 have agreed upon plans to join forces, it was announced yesterday.

Peter C. Warwick, Jr., of Richmond, Va., is chairman of the committee arranging details of the consolidation, which is expected to lessen costs of production and transportation. The names of the firms involved were not made known. They include mills, retail firms and producers.

This proposed consolidation, it was announced, would be entirely distinct from a reported combination of companies on the Pacific coast.

C.N.E. MAY BE LONGER.

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—(Canadian Press).—At the annual meeting of the Canadian National Exhibition Board, the report of the executive suggested that owing to the demand for space from many parts of the Empire, consideration would be given to the question of lengthening the fair from two weeks to three weeks. This change, said the report, would

QUEEN VICTORIA HOPED WILHELM WOULD NOT BECOME A 'CONCEITED PRUSSIAN' WHEN HE GREW OLDER

New Volumes of Letter Reveal Mother's Anxiety For King Edward.

TO SET EXAMPLE.

Urged Son To Associate With the "Really Good People."

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Queen Victoria's anxieties concerning the effect on public opinion of the fondness for horse racing and travel which King Edward VII, then the Prince of Wales, displayed, are revealed in new letters and diaries covering the period from 1862 to 1878, now published.

These are two volumes packed with matters of the greatest interest Gladstone and Disraeli, figuring prominently. There are also glimpses of Wilhelm 2nd, the German emperor, now in exile in Holland, as a boy, and the difficulties experienced by the court because of so many German relatives.

In 1870 Queen Victoria wrote to her son: "Dearest Bertie: Now that Ascot is approaching I wish to repeat earnestly and seriously ..... that you confine your visits to the races to Tuesday and Thursday and that you do not go Wednesday or Friday, to which Uncle William IV never went, nor did we.

Attract Good People.

"If you are anxious to go on these days (though I should prefer your not going every year to both) there is no real objection to that; but to the other days there is. Your example can do much good, and may do an immense deal for evil in the present day.

"I hear every true attached friend of ours expressing such anxiety that you should gather round you the really good, steady, distinguished people."

The burdens of state and family are detailed in the books, which are authorized by the king, the publication covering Victoria's widowhood after the death of the prince consort, December 14, 1861.

To the queen's letter on racing, the Prince of Wales's reply is full of spirit. After arguing that he is helping to elevate racing as "a great national sport," he concludes: "If I went to most of the small races the people might have a right to complain, but as I do not, going only to Epsom, Ascot and Goodwood, I do not think my example in that respect could be disapproved.

"I am always most anxious to meet your wishes, dear mama, in every respect and always regret if we are not quite 'd' accord.' But as I am past twenty-eight and have considerable knowledge of the world, you will, I trust, allow me to use my own discretion in matters of this kind."

Conceited Prussian.

Sidelights on the former German emperor as a boy are given in the diaries: "Osborne, January 27, 1866—Dear little William's birthday. May God preserve him and may he grow up good, clever, liberal minded, worthy of his beloved grandpa, who was so anxious about him that he should not grow into a conceited Prussian."

Here is another quotation, also dated "Osborne," January 27, 1877—"Dear Willie of Prussia's eighteenth birthday! Received most delightful and astonishing telegram about my intention of giving him the Garter. It is a rare thing that three members of the same family and three generations should have it at the same time. May God bless, protect and guide dear Willie."

BRITISH POLICY NOT SETTLED ON LEAGUE PROBLEM

Viscount Cecil Suggests That Representatives Have Some Latitude.

ASSEMBLY MARCH 6.

British Cabinet To Outline Course For Sir Austen Chamberlain.

LONDON, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—It was announced in the House of Lords yesterday that the Cabinent had not decided its policy relative to the proposed extension of the League of Nations Council, but would do so prioir to the departure of Sir Austen Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, for Geneva next week.

Viscount Cecil asserted with regard to any proposals for the admission of other nations to the League Council that the representatives of Great Britain must be left with a reasonably free hand to deal with the question. It was an essential part of the good working of the League that Great Britain's representatives should not go there tied hand and foot and that they should be in a position to debate the matter fully and fairly. The Government would consider the situation most carefully and make up its mind before the Geneva assembly, March 6.

The question arose on a motion by Lord Parmoor, lord president of the council in the late Labor Government, which was afterwards withdrawn, that it was not desirable on the admission of Germany to raise the question of a general reconstitution of the Council or an increase in its membership.

In the course of his speech Lord Cecil declared that no action of the British Government would be dictated by mistrust of Germany.

POLICE RISK LIVES TO SAVE TWO DOGS

Both Rescued From River—One Animal Died.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press). — Before an applauding crowd several members of the St. Boniface police force, risked their lives on the treacherous ice of the Red River today in an effort to save the lives of two dogs who had broken through. With the aid of some of the spectators, a human chain was formed and the animals rescued. One of the canines, however, died a few minutes later.

TO FORESTALL FLOODS

WINNIPEG, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—To forestall recurrence of Spring floods which during past years have caused extensive damage in low-lying sections near the Red and Assiniboine Rivers, special precautionary measures have already been taken. Dykes are being prepared and dynamite shipped to stragetic points.

"When the Heart is Young"

Youth is a wonderful thing. And the most wonderful thing about it is that it has nothing whatever to do with your so-called "age."

Youth is an affair of the heart, which need never grow old at all. Indeed, it frequently happens that the longer a man lives the younger his heart grows. And so at sixty you will find him game for anything, because he has learned the secret of abiding youth.

That secret is to be found in the blood that streams through the body. Keep your blood pure and virile, and you'll keep the spirit and the boundless energy of the heyday of life. And the way to do that is the simple way of the "little daily dimeful."

Not one Salt but Six

"Little daily dose," you may say! "I've already tried out Epsom and Glauber, and never yet collected enough of that 'Kruschen feeling' to cover a dime. So what's the good of talking to me about Kruschen?" The error of arguing in this fashion lies in assuming that Kruschen is just a single salt, like the others, and that therefore it's just an aperient, like the others. Kruschen is not a single salt, but a blend of six different salts, each of which has a different duty to do.

If you lived under ideal condition, your system would do for itself, exactly what the "little daily dimeful" does for it; but, because of your artificial mode of life, your inside shirks its duty, you don't get your supply of the six vital salts for which every day your system cries out, and you suffer in consequence.

It's the little daily dimeful that does it

Kruschen comes in to help where Nature fails. Not only does it rid your body of all clogging poisonous waste matter, but it acts directly on your blood, purifying and invigorating it and filling every vein in your system with tingling vitality.

Remember—it's the little daily dimeful that does it. So make up your mind to buy a bottle to-day. A bottle costs 75c and contains 160 pinches, nearly a six months' supply of that "Kruschen" feeling. Take the first pinch and begin growing younger to-morrow.

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea
Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dimeful that does it.

FORD TO BUILD A CLOTH PLANT

Dam on Huron River To Give Power To $3,000,000 Unit.

1,705 ACRES BOUGHT.

DETROIT, Feb. 25.—The Ford Motor Co. will begin work April 15 on a huge power dam in the Huron River south of Ypsilanti that will create a five-mile lake and change the landscape of Ypsilanti Township between Ypsilanti and Rawsonville, a Ford representative said today.

At the dam a hydro-electric power plant and auxiliary steam power plant will be erected to operate a $3,000,000 factory for the manufacture of all the upholstery cloth and head lining used in the manufacture of Ford cars, which last year amounted to a total of 3,947,855 square yards of both materials. Of that amount, 2,225 509 yards were upholstering.

Last year's cloth required the wool of 2,500,000 sheep, the company estimated. There are about 1,200,000 sheep in Michigan, the twelfth wool-growing state in the country. Ypsilanti, moreover, is in the centre of the wool map of Michigan, with Washtenaw County leading other counties with about 70,000 sheep. The upholstering cloth and linings will be made directly from the raw wool at the new factory. The Ford Motor Co. now buys most of its cloth from the New England States.

Two Units Proposed.

The factory will probably be in two units each measuring 350 by 1,000 feet, and is to be completed in about two years. For this project the company bought 1 705 acres of land for $600,000.

In preparation for the creation of the five-mile lake, in which water will be backed up nearly to the southern limits of Ypsilanti, 1,000,000 feet of lumber has been cut from the Huron River valley, including 150,000 feet of black walnut. The dam and hydro-electric power plant, costing $1,200,000, will create 4,500 horse power for eight hours a day. The dam, 34 feet high, will be the largest in the Huron River. The lake will be from a half to three-fourths of a mile wide.

About $60 000 has already been spent in grading a 100-foot right of way for a siding to extend three miles from the Michigan Central Railroad south to the factory and power plant. The lake will not only give a 34-foot head for water power, but will overcome a variation in flow in the river that ranges from 47 cubic feet a second in August to about 6,000 feet in March and April.

BELLEVILLE GETS CAR OF HARD COAL

Crossed on Cobourg Ferry—Sold at $16.50.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 25. Canadian Press. — The first car of hard coal to reach Belleville since the resumption of mining arrived yesterday. It was No 6563 D. and H., with about 50 tons of the precious black diamonds aboard. The car crossed on the Cobourg ferry and is perhaps among the first, if not the first car, to reach Ontario. The car was all sold before noon at $16.50 a ton.

QUEBEC SALES INCREASE

QUEBEC, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—Since the advent of Dr. L. J. Lemieux to London as agent general of the Province of Quebec, and the appointment of a commercial attache to the office, the sale of Quebec farm products has greatly increased, declared Premier Taschereau in the Legislature yesterday when asked by Arthur Sauve, Opposition leader, as to the plans for the London office.

Why your child needs oats and milk

Active, growing bodies must have food for energy and for bone and brawn.

More than any other cereal, oats store up energy for the day's work and play. Your children, "always on the go," require as much energy food as grown-ups. Lengthening limbs and expanding muscles demand plenty of bone and tissue-building food.

A warm, appetizing dish of Quaker Oats with whole milk supplies all the required food elements in balanced proportion. It satisfies. Its "bulk" stimulates the intestine to regular, normal action.

Two kinds—Quaker Oats, the plump flake—and Quick Quaker, the thin flake partly cooked, which makes porridge in 3 to 5 minutes. Ask for Quaker, and look for the familiar Quaker figure on the package. Do not expect a substitute to please you.

Two Kinds Now—

Quaker Oats—you have always used

Quick Quaker—cooks in 3 to 5 minutes

CHAPTER XXV.

Jimmy Rand and Lieutenant O'Day bounded from their chairs to look over Olga's shoulder.

"That's the man, all right," cried Jimmy. "That's the man I had the fight with."

"It's the man I went out with that evening," declared Olga. "I'm positive. I wouldn't mistake him in a hundred years."

O'Day studied the picture. It showed the head and waist of a bullet-headed individual with closely-cropped hair, brushed up in front in a pompadour.

"Look at that heavy jaw," said Jimmy. "I cracked him on it with all my might, Lieutenant, and it didn't feaze him."

"A tough baby," assented O'Day. "Ike Jensen's his name. See?" He indicated the printed information beneath the picture. "He's been convicted of auto-stealing and tried and acquitted of robbery. A gangster."

He turned to Olga. "So that's the man you went out with that night. Didn't it occur to you he was a pretty tough character?"

She colored. "I have learned," she answered, "not to judge a man by appearances. Some of the rottenest men I ever met were regular sheiks. Besides, he was dressed neatly enough and was quite decent about asking me to dance with him."

"It seems to me," put in Jimmy, "that that's beside the question."

O'Day shot him a swift, inquiring glance. "Oho!" said he, with a significant look at Olga and back to Rand.

Jimmy colored. "The point is," he went on, "this man is connected with my father's murder. As a matter of fact, he probably did it. His description answers that of the one given by the hotel clerk of H. A. Jones."

"Detective Mooney," said O'Day, told me Jones was seen in Grafton recently."

"I don't care what Mooney says. The trains are still running between here and Grafton, aren't they? This man Jenson evidently is the murderer of my father. Now, why did he do it?"

"How do you know he did it?" pursued O'Day.

"I don't know. I do know, however, that he followed me home—he and another man. And I know that the scrap I had with him followed close on the heels of those mysterious warnings I received to leave town. Sure, he did it. But why? The incomprehensible thing about this whole affair is the apparent lack of motive. My father probably never saw this man in his life."

"You don't know that either, Rand."

"All right, I don't know it. But I'd gamble on it. You say he's an auto thief and a robber and a gangster. That means he's capable of murder."

"Maybe it was revenge, Rand."

"Maybe, put in Olga, "someone hired him to commit this murder."

"You didn't get a look at the other man in the car, did you?" asked O'Day.

"No. He was driving. All we got was a glimpse of this fellow's face at the window. We weren't more than five feet away from him."

"Any idea who it might have been?"

"It might have been the man who was with him the night he followed me home—the fellow who pulled the gun on me."

"Know him if you saw him again?"

"I think I would. He was a little fellow. Looked like a fighter. He evidently had a broken nose."

"Here, let's look through our files and see if we can spot him."

They did, consuming nearly an hour examining pictures, but at the end of that time Jimmy gave it up.

"You haven't got him, lieutenant. If he's a crook he's been too clever to get caught at it."

"All right." O'Day moved toward the door. "Come on down to my desk." Downstairs he gave directions that a search be started for the man known as Ike Jensen. A patrolman came in with a report in his hand.

"The license of that car, Lieutenant, is listed in the name of P. J. Kennedy. It was reported stolen three days ago."

"Sure," said O'Day. "I didn't expect anything else. "Did you call up Kennedy."

"Yes, he's coming down to claim the car."

"Have him come in to see me when he arrives. I want to show him Ike Jensen's picture."

"Yes, sir." The patrolman departed.

"Rand," O'Day turned to Jimmy, "unless I miss my guess, this man Jensen's going to duck out of town. I'm having the railroad stations watched, and I'm wiring Mooney to keep on the lookout for him in Grafton. If he and this man Jones are the same guy, it will be worth while tipping money off to see if he turns up again in Grafton.

"And now, young lady," he said to Olga, "I want to ask you a few questions. You said a moment ago that this man might have been hired to commit that murder. What makes you think that?"

"Why, what—what else is there to think?" she faltered. "Nobody seems to have the faintest idea what the motive could be."

"How long have you known this man Jensen?"

"I told you I had only met him that one time." She paled at the antagonism in his tone.

"Don't, lieutenant," cut in Jimmy. "I don't think that's necessary. I wish you'd stop this—this persecution of Miss Mavnard. She hasn't done anything. She's told you all she knows."

O'Day stared at him, a heavy frown creasing his brow. "Wait a minute, Rand." He turned back to Olga. "All right, you never saw him before that night. Now tell me how long you've known Tom Fogarty."

"I've known him for some little time. Why?"

"Ever go out with him?"

"He's given a few parties and had me there to sing. Yes, I've been out with him a couple of times."

"Um—hum. What kind of parties were they?"

"Please, lieutenant," Jimmy begged. This ceaseless suspicion of Olga hurt him.

"Oh, just parties," she answered.

"Lots of liquor, eh?"

"Yes, there was liquor."

"And women, too, eh?"

"Yes there were women there."

"Pretty wild parties, weren't they?"

"Yes," she admitted. "I suppose you'd call them wild parties. I was not present as a guest—just as a professional entertainer."

"Know anything about this man Fogarty?" O'Day persisted.

"No. He was introduced to me at a cabaret where I was singing. He said he could make use of entertainers once in a while."

"You didn't know he was a professional bondsman and a bootlegger, did you?"

"No."

"Didn't know he's been at the bottom of a couple of shootings?"

"No."

"All right. Now listen, young lady. I'm not trying to hurt your feelings or anything like that. I want to get at the bottom of this thing. But I want to tell you you've been traveling in mighty bad company. Take my advice and cut it out. You're not clear of this thing yet, though I'm inclined to give you a clean bill of health, but you watch your step or you're going to get into some real trouble."

"She has cut it all out, lieutenant," Jimmy put in.

"That so? I'm glad to hear it. And how do you know?"

"She told me so."

O'Day laughed, and two spots of crimson flamed in Olga's cheeks. Jimmy flushed hotly himself, realizing the attitude he had struck in making such a declaration of faith.

"You've no idea what a change has come over her in the last few weeks, lieutenant," he said lamely. "I remarked on it to her tonight."

"Git out of here, the both of you," laughed O'Day. "Here—" he pressed a buzzer—"I'll send you home in a police automobile." He winked, "No. not a patrol—a touring car."

* * *

"Good night, Jim." He was standing with her at her door, the police automobile waiting at the curb. "I guess it isn't necessary for us to see each other any more now. You've seen the man I told you about. You won't need me any more."

The pathos of her sentences hurt him. "Sure, we'll see each other some more, Olga. Why shouldn't we?"

"You're saying that out of pity for me, aren't you?"

"Of course not," he insisted. "I'm saying it because I want to see you some more. We're both pretty lonesome, aren't we?" he said with a wry smile.

"You mean it? You'll come?"

"You know I will, Olga. Good night."

. . . On his way home in the car he cursed himself for the promise. "You're a damn fool, Rand," he said. "Just a plain damn fool."

* * *

He thanked the driver. "Be sure to thank Lieutenant O'Day for me, too."

He stepped out and noticed a policeman pacing the street in front of his rooming house. He called a greeting and went in.

In his room he glanced at his watch. "Great Scott! Two o'clock, and I've got to get up at six-thirty." His glance, roving about the room, fell on the telephone. Beside it lay an envelope. He picked it up, but he knew what was in it before he ripped it open. It was another unsigned letter, warning him to leave Chicago.

BACKACHE GIVEN QUICK RELIEF

Tried simple home treatment and pain stops

An aching back is often the result of tired, over-strained muscles, and can be given quick and complete relief with a very simple home treatment.

"I had such a backache I didn't know what to do," writes a New York woman. "I looked through my medicine cabinet to see if I could find something to help me—and there was a bottle of Sloan's Liniment. I used it, and in half an hour I was better. The next day I went to a big engagement party. Now, when anyone has a pain, I say 'use Sloan's.'"

The marvelous effectiveness of Sloan's is due to the stimulating effect that it has upon the circulation. Straight to the sick, aching tissues, it sends a healing tide of fresh new blood—clears out the trouble—kills the pain.

So pleasant and clean to use, too. You don't even have to rub. Just pat it on gently and you will get immediate results. All druggists—35 cents

SUCCESSFUL SOCIAL AT CAMPBELLFORD

Ladies of St. Andrew's Put on Splendid Entertainment.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 25—Another of those alphabetical socials for which the ladies of St. Andrew's church are becoming famous was held in the school room on Tuesday evening, the hostesses on this occasion being the members of the congregation the initials of whose names are formed by the letters from D to L inclusive. The programme was long and varied and a members of other denominations in members of other edonominations in town. What proved to be one of the most popular features was a monologue by J. R. Battisby who made his first appearance since taking up residence in town, as a public entertainer and who surprised his friends by his aptitude to play the role of an Irish comedian for which part he was in regulational stage regalia. Mr. Battisby represented himself as a recent arrival from the Emerald Isle, the emissary of 125 eligible Irish bachelors who were anxious to get into correspondence with Canadian maidens of marriageable age, a statement which if true would have marked the opening of an unexpected boom in the postal business of the Dominion. His definition of a typical son of Erin was all that the most patriotic of that race could reasonably asked for. Mr. Battisby may rest assured that he will be invited to repeat his performance at the next entertainment in Campbellford and that when he opens his eyes on a new day it will be to realize that he has become famous over night.

Miss Hilda Bonnycastle, a member of Christ church and one of Campbellford's leading vocalists, was one of the outsiders who volunteered to lend their aid, her selection being Tom Moore's ever popular lyric, Kathleen Mavourneen, which she rendered with true artistic taste and feeling.

Mr. Battisby was not the only person to make his debut in a new capacity last night. The congregation of tS. Andrew's have from his first coming here recognized their pastor, Rev. James Grier, as an accomplished preacher but it was not until last night that they discovered that he is a rtained vocalist as well that secret being disclosed when he sang a duet with Mr. Payne, a member of the choir. Mr. Grier was chairman of the gathering but he called Dr. O. C. Watson to take his place while he appeared in his new role

The programme in full was as follows:

Intruumental solo, Mrs. Glen Thompon.
Reading—Mrs. Joseph Bennett
Cornet Solo—Walter J. Lowe.
Solo—Miss Josephine Locke
Monolgue—J. R. Battisby.
Solo—Mrs. F. de F. Free.
Piano duet — Miss Lillian Smith and Miss Gertrude Maynard.
Solo—Ivan Groh
Duet—Rev. James Grier and Mr. Payne.
Solo—Miss Hilda Bonnycastle
Duet—Misses Emma Meiklejohn and K. Connor.
Solo—Mrs. Frank De Carroll.

On motion of Dr. O. C. Watson a vote of thanks was tendered all those who took part in the programme after which refreshments were served. The receipts of the evening amounted to $65.00, an increase of $18.00 over the amount taken in at the first of these entertainments which was held two weeks ago, the best evidence that they are meeting with public favor.

RIFFS ARE USING FRENCH CANNON

Shelling Spanish With Guns Captured From Frnch Troops.

REPLY PLANNED.

TANGIER, Spanish Morocco, Feb. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The guns with which the Riffians have been bombarding the Spanish in Tetuan recently are said to be of 102 milimetres calibre, captured from the French. The shells have caused several casualties. A strong Spanish assault column is now being formed in Tetuan to attack the Riffians.

PLAY PRESENTED

Hoard's Dramatic Club Put on Good Comedy at St-Stephens' Church.

BURNBRAE, Feb. 25—On Thursday and Friday evenings the Hoards Draamtic Club staged an interesting and entertaining play at St. Stephens Church. The production was entitled "The Bashful Mr. Bobbs," and the title role, that of Major Robert Bobbs was splendidly handled by Mr. Frank Heagle, who impersonated the girl-shy and extremely modest major in a very realistic manner.

In the first act Mr. and Mrs. Fred Henderson (Mr. Aaron Anderson and Mrs. Chas. Hoard) are worried over the non-arrival of Marston Bobbs, the accepted suitor of Mrs. Henderson's sister, Miss Jean Graham (Miss Irene Thompson). Major Robert Bobbs arrives on the scene after a motor car accident in the creek, where he was assisted by Obahdiah Stump (Chas. Hoard). The sudden appearance of ladies startles Major Bobbs so that after a mad scramble for a hiding place he finally lands under the table. Among the boarders at the hotel are Miss Frances Whittaker (Miss N. Williams) and Miss Rosalie Otis (Mrs. F. Heagle) both presumably being on the hunt for a man, and they are started by Major Bobbs appearance. Mrs. Wiggins, the land lady of ample proportions (Miss Annie Haig) and O. Stump, rout the supposed burglar out from under the table and take him to the police station.

In the second act Major Bobbs, now cleared of his burglary charge and his identity proved tries to explain the absence of his cousin, Marston Bobbs and gives Jean a letter which unfortunately is the wrong one and gives way the fact Marston is deeply attached to another girl. Marston (Reg. Parks) arrives and explains his actions to Jean by putting the blame on his cousin Robert. Celeste Vanderpool (Mrs. C. Gunning) the actress with whom Marston is also in love comes to the hotel with her maid Julia (Mrs. A. Anderson). Marston bribes O. Stump to take Miss Vanderpool to the show so that he can gain possession of some letters which she has in her trunk.

Act three opens with the Bobbs cousins about to open the trunk although Robert's conscience is troubling him. Celeste comes in unexpectedly, her maid Julia having gone to the show with Obahdiah. Marston tries to lie his way out of marrying her and the actress pretends to drink poison as a means of working on his feelings. Jean finding them together returns the ring; Marston is left free to go back to his "Fluffie" as he calls Celeste. The closing scene shows Jean undertaking to reform the bashful Mr. Bobbs as they start on a moonlight drive.

The play was well presented and the characters were all ably portrayed, the comic acting of Obahdiah being exceptionally funny.

Rev. C. Daniel acted as chairman on Thursday evening but bad roads kept him away on Friday. A number from outside points attended but the storm undoubtedly made the attendance small. The Godden string orchestra supplied music before the play and during the intervals and was in its usual good form. The total proceeds were $70.00.

For serving seventy-two years on the same farm, although under two masters, a Norfolk farmhand received a prize recently.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TURN BOLSHEVIST

Publish Own Communist Paper in England.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The spread of Communist teaching among children is causing much discussion here. It is revealed that school children in the Castleford and Pontefract mining arears of Yorkshire are bringing out a Communist newspaper The Young Pioneer.

In the high school group, says an editorial in that paper, a hundred school children recently journeyed to the woods and played a game of reds v. whites. A number of children write to this paper describing their own grievances, referring to the brutality of the teachers, and one youngster, aged 10, asks why it is that the teachers can go for a holiday to foreign countries, "while we have to play in the back yards because our fathers don't get enough wages." The young Communists recently held a national convention at Manchester.

WOMEN PRAY.

Three Congregations Contribute Intercessions in Millbrook.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 25.—The annual Women's Day of Prayer for Missions was observed in the Anglican Sunday school hall on Friday at 3.30 p.m. forty-five women, representative of the three congregations of the village, being present.

Owing to illness Mrs. (Canon) Allen, who was to have occupied the chair, was prevented from atteding, Mrs. E Whyte taking her place and presiding over the service.

This year a new departure was made in the programme, the address being given and the entire hour devoted to intercession, punctuated by suitable hymns. Miss Mamie Collins presided at the piano.

Miss Annie Armstrong and Mrs. W. Witten took charge of the Scripture lessons, the former reading Psalm 95: 1-7, and the latter John 14: 12-17.

The prayer of confession by the leader fittingly opened the service and was followed by the general thanksgiving in unison. The work of the church in Canada and abroad, the League of Nations, the Peace of Locarno, China in her unrest, the home and youth of all nations were among the subjects for which intercession was made.

Those taking part from the Anglican church were Miss A. Armstrong and Mrs. H. J. Grassett; from the Presbyterian church Mrs. J. E. Eakins, Mrs. W. T. A. Deyell, Mrs. R. J. Doak, and Mrs. S. E. Eakins; from the United church Mrs. (Rev.) F. H .Howard, Mrs. (Dr.) Rea, Mrs. J. H. George, and Miss Estelle Hetherington.

The meeting, which was of a marked spiritual character, closed with the doxology, the Lord's Prayer, and the Blessing in unison.

According to turn, next year the gathering will be held in the United church.

Good Health for All the Family

Mrs. Mary Fourgere, Larry's River, N.S. writes:—"I was troubled with constipation for years." At last a friend suggested that I try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I did so and must say that they have given me more relief than all the medicine I have taken during the last ten years."

The newest idea in medicine is to prevent serious disease by looking after the "minor ills."

Since about ninety percent of serious diseases develop from constipation and torpid action of the liver and kidneys the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to arouse the action of these organs is the most effective of preventives.

Backaches, headaches, indigestion, constipation, etc., soon disappear when this great regulating medicine is used.

WEEKLY EUCHRE.

OMEMEE, Feb. 25.— A special meeting of the Omemee Tannery Club was held on Monday evening in the club room for the purpose of discussing the football question. The organization of a club, known as the "E and E" Football Club was the main feature of the evening, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Honorary Presidents—Messrs. W. S. Edwards, Lucas, W. S. Bennett and H. Lamb.

President—A. Leiper.

Vice-President—E. H. Mitchell.

Secretary—A. Leiper.

Executive—E. Stafford, T. Duguid, S. Ruddick, C. Ryan.

It is the intention of the club to throw in their lot with the best league in Peterborough. Already, Mr. Leiper, who is familiar with football activities, has several good men lined up and is looking forward to a very successful season.

The weekly euchre of the Tannery Club was held on Friday evening, when the members and their wives and numerous visitors were in attendance. Mrs. C. Ryan was successful in winning the first prize for the ladies, while Mr. E. Stafford was the winner of the gentlemen's prize. Consolation prizes were awarded to Miss Daisy Du-

JUDGMENT IN HAYES V. LUMSDEN.

In the County Court of the county of Peterboro, Hayes vs. Lumsden. Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., for the plaintiff, and Mr. F. D. Kerr, K.C., for the defendant.

This is an action for damages to a motor car, negligence being alleged as against the defendants, their servants and agents.

The accident took place a very short distance east of the town of Whitby on the Provincial highway, and it was near the foot of a grade or hill. The plaintiff's car was coming from Toronto, his wife driving it. As they came to the top of this grade and down the incline a large truck, belonging to the defendant, was standing stationary on the north side of the pavement facing west. The evidence disclosed the fact that it had been there for "twenty minutes anyway" and probably a longer time than that. Another similar huge truck, also belonging to the defendant, was backing from a side road or lane on the south into the highway; the result was that the plaintiff's car coming down the incline came between these two cars, one stationary and the other backing up, and was crushed by the impact between them and somewhat seriously injured. The day was misty or rainy and the pavement wet. The evidence showed that for some considerable distance before the collision the brakes on the plaintiff's car were all applied, the proper efforts made to stop it before reaching the other cars, but on account of the wet payment these efforts were not so effective as they would ordinarily have been.

It was sworn that before the plaintiff's car came down, one of the defendant's employees was waiving his arm and hand below as a signal to stop. The plaintiff's wife says she did not see this, but I am inclined to think she did, and through excitement and confusion has forgotten it. To my mind this makes little or no difference; it is quite conceivable that the driver of the car, even seeing such movements, might not understand their purpose, and apart altogether from that I think she used every effort, within a reasonable time, to stop her car before it got down to the place of danger.

The ultimate negligence and the proximate cause of the injury was that of the defendants by leaving these trucks in such a position so that any reasonable person would, I think, deem it very dangerous. If they had kept both trucks on one side or the other of the pavement, the other side would have been open and free for cars to come and go; but they had one truck stationary on one side and the other moving on the other, leaving no room for a third, and the plaintiff's car coming down could not go off the pavement either on one side or the other, and could not and did not get stopped in time; the result, therefore, was that it was crushed in between the two cars, wrongfully there in such position, and the damage occurred.

The two drivers of these trucks, immediately after the collision, said they would pay the damages, but whether they meant themselves or their employees does not clearly appear. The master mechanic or foreman of the work going on there afterwards told the taxi man in Whitby to take the passengers home and the defendants would pay for the expenses. I mention this not as any evidence of a contract on their part on behalf of the defendants, but simply as significant to show whose fault these men then thought it was, although their minds seem to have been changed since.

I, therefore, find in favor of the plaintiff, holding that it was the negligence of the defendant's agents and servants that caused all the trouble. The plaintiff's claim is for $310.15 repair bill, $24.00 storage and $100.00 depreciation.

The repair bill includes $36.00 for two cars to take the plaintiff's passengers home from Whitby to Peterboro. It is argued that this is not repairs, and that is I think quite correct, but the fact remains that these people had to get home to Peterboro some way; they were too late for the train to reach home that night. If they stayed over there would naturally have been the additional expenses of hotels; but I think the expenses of taking them home, apart altogether from Stundon's agreement, was part and parcel of the damages resulting to the plaintiff on account of the accident, and that, therefore, this item, no matter how considered, is properly an element of damage.

The item of storage must be disallowed. The car has been held by the garage man until the bill was paid. He was told by some of the defendant's people that they would pay the bill, but afterwards they repudiated it. The claim for depreciation on account of the accident is a proper one in accordance with the evidence, and I think in fact the only question is how much should be allowed. A car once in an accident and undergoing extensive repairs is not as saleable as one that has been kept out of trouble, and I think there is some depreciation.

Judgment will be entered for the plaintiff for $375.00, with costs of action.

Dated at Peterboro this 20th day of February, 1926.

E. C. S. HUYCKE, Judge.

EDITOR'S TRIAL FOR BLASPHEMY UNDER OLD LAW

Atheistic and Socialistic Utterances To Lithuanians of Brockton, Mass.

"MAN MADE GOD."

BROCKTON, Mass., Feb. 25.—Anthony Bimba, the boyish-looking editor from Brooklyn, who believes man made God, went on trial here yesterday, charged with violation of the Massachusett's 229-year-old blasphemy law.

Only once before, in the last two centuries, has the old "blue statute" served as the basis for a court case in this commonwealth.

The public has been barred, but the little court room was crowded with witnesses, newspapermen and others directly connected with the case.

Attorney Harry Hoffman, chief defense counsel, immediately moved that both the blasphemy charge and the sedition charge, which also stands against Bimba, be quashed. Judge C. Carroll King denied the motion.

Hoffman then moved that at least the blasphemy charge be quashed on the ground that the ancient "blue law" was in collision with the state constitution. Judge King also denied this motion.

Opinions Changed.

In arguing his motions, Attorney Hoffman made frequent references to the case of Abner Kneeland, who, in the early 19th century, was convicted of infraction of the blasphemy law.

"When the blasphemy law was passed," Hoffman said, "conditions were entirely different from what they are to-day. At that time, everybody believed in religion. Everybody believed in God. Because of this it was a crime to blaspheme.

"Things are different to-day. People have more liberal views."

Impaired Reverence.

City Prosecutor I. Manuel Rubin took exception to Hoffman's statements, and urged that both defense motions be quashed.

"The defendant not only expressed a disbelief in God," said Rubin, "but did so maliciously, and impaired the reverence of his listeners in God. This law is not an old blue law, as some people will tell you. It has survived 229 years and has passed through many revisions during that period."

In quashing the deefnse motions, Judge King said he wished it were possible for him to grant them, because he considered it a misfortune to have a case that had attracted such wide interest tried in district court.

"I am familiar with the situation in Brockton's Lithuanian colony," Judge King said, "and I do not consider this court the proper place for the settling of their religious difficulties. I would like to take the case out of this court, if it could be done with dignity."

Repeats Assertions

Brockton, Mass., Feb. 24—"It was not God that made man, but man that made God," Anthony Bimba, Brooklyn editor, told his supporters at a mass meeting here on the eve of his trial for alleged violation of the state's 229-year-old blasphemy law.

"Read the history of religions," he said, "and you will find that there were many gods and every one of them was worshiped by the faithful ones; every one of them was declared to be a real and mighty god, and all of them have been overthrown by science and experience, and in their place new gods have been established and to-day there are as many gods as there are religions."

Bimba had been expected to avoid the issues which brought about his arrest, and his remarks, made in English, instead of his native Lithuanian, came as a tremendous surprise.

Bimba then assailed the "blue law" under which he must stand trial.

"If these blue laws of Puritan times are re-enforced and made valid, then nobody is safe in this state. If the shoe manufacturers of Brockton and the agents of Cardinal O'Connell succeed in convicting a person for denying the existence of a certain God, then tomorrow they will convict you for eating mince pie or kissing your wife on Sundays."

Test Case.

The trial is a test case, paralleling in many respects Dayton's famous evolution trial, with a strong likelihood it would be carried to the U.S. Supreme Court in an effort to prove Massachusetts' 229-year-old blasphemy law unconstitutional.

Both the American Civil Liberties Union and the International Labor Defence Council have been active in the Brooklyn editor's behalf, and any move to carry the case to the nation's highest court will have their support.

Feeling has run high here since Bimba's arrest. Brockton is split in two sections, one group aiding the editor in his battle against the almost-forgotten "blue law," and the other group demanding he be jailed for his alleged blasphemy.

Conviction in 1921.

City Prosectuor I. Manuel Rublin, who will prosecute the case, recently discovered that as recently as 1921 one Michael X. Mockus was convicted under a similar law in Maine. In affirming the conviction, the Maine Supreme Court referred to the fact that Massachusetts still had a blasphemy law and that the old-time statute had been ruled constitutional by the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

Early Show of Strength Soon Turned To Setback

CHICAGO Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—Despite an early show of strength, the wheat market today soon underwent a decided setback. New crop deliveries displayed the most weakness, the plentiful moisture for domestic winter wheat being the bearish factor. The opening, 5-8c lower to 1-8c higher, May $1.67 1-4 to $1.67 1-2, and July $1.44 3-4 to $1.45 3-8, was followed by a moderate general advance and then by a drop to well below yesterday's finish. Damp weather and the scantiness of corn receipts led to higher prices for corn. After opening unchanged to 5-8 up, May 79c to 79 1-2, the corn market scored material gains.

Oats sympathized with corn. Starting unchanged to 1-4 higher, May 41 5-8 to 41 3-4, oats prices continued to harden.

Influenced by lower quotations on hogs, the provision market was weak.

Firmer Tone Displayed On New York Market

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—A sustained demand for high-grade industrial shares imparted a firmer tone to to-day stock market. MINISTERIAL ACTION NOT ALWAYS BEST

R. P. Sparks Says, However, That They Never Acted Illegally.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25. — (Canadian Press).—The Ministers who have been at the head of the Customs Department during the last few years have not always taken "action most in public interest," though they have not done anything they had no legal right to do, in the opinion of R. P. Sparks, of the Commercial Protective Association, who was again the chief witness at the Customs probe to-day. Ministers referred to were Senator Jacques Bureau and Hon. P. J. A. Cardin.

Discussing the port of Rock Island, Que., Mr. Sparks said that the officers there knew that smuggling was going on and that some of them had winked at it in the past.

Luncheon—Baked oysters, lettuce sand wiches, canned peaches, hermits, milk, tea.

Dinner—Baked haddock, egg sauce, shoe string potatoes, hot French slaw, button radishes, orange cream pudding, graham bread, milk, coffee.

Children under ten years of age may be served the fish, bread, milk and dessert of the dinner menu. If it's at all practicable for small children to have their hearty meal at noon time it should be done and the hearty, unhurried breakfast must be accomplished. This makes it possible to serve little people a simple easy-to-sleep-on supper of bread and milk, cereals, light vegetables and plain desserts.

Health Muffins.

One cup whole wheat flour, 2 cups bran, 1 cup buttermilk or sour milk, 1-2 cup molasses, 1 cup seeded and chopped raisins, 3-4 teaspoon soda, 1-2 teaspoon salt.

Combine flour, bran, salt and raisins. Add molasses and half the milk and mix well. Dissolve in remaining milk and add to first mixture. Beat well and drop from tip of spoon into buttered and floured muffin pans. Bake thirty minutes in a hot oven.

SECRETS OF CHARM

By Lucrezia Bori

There is no fruit in ordinary use that possesses so many beauty giving attributes as the lemon.

In many households we have lemons left over after meals, after tea parties and after cooking delicacies that call for lemon in some form. I hope the average housewife makes a practice of saving these bits of lemon, instead of throwing them away because she fears they will grow old in the ice box before she has a chance to use them again. Odd bits of lemon have so many beauty uses! Here are some of them:

Lemon, a slice of it, or the half of a lemon from which most of the juice has been extracted makes an excellent cleanser for the fingernails. Just rub your nails into it, dig them in and rub the lemon all over your nails. It will leave them white and soft.

After you have had your hands in hot water, or in any odorous substance that leaves its unpleasant scent, a thorough rubbing with your lemon will bring back the delicacy of the skin and take away all traces of objectionable odor.

When you come in, tired from a long walk or a shopping tour, or simply from wearing shoes that pinch, and find your feet tired and swollen, there is nothing better than bathing your feet with warm water and soap, rinsing and drying them, and then rubbing them with lemon juice and alcohol in equal parts.

A slice of lemon rubbed over your face makes the skin soft and smooth. This simple treatment is very refreshing after contact with dust and dirt, or after you have been out mingling with the crowd and feel especially in need of bracing up.

Remember these varied uses. When you have bits of lemon left over from the table, put the pieces where you can easily place your hands on them, either near the kitchen sink or in your bathroom. Then they will be ready to rub your hands with, to remove stains from your hands or from linen, or to mix with salt and polish brasses.

Shining brasses in their proper place are as restful to look upon as a pretty bath in lemon juice.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster; does the work without blister.

Rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

Plaits Assume Importance

The latest reflections concerning the approved silhouette, admit plaits to a place of importance in bringing about the desired full skirt. In this graceful one-piece frock, narrow box-plaits are placed either side of the front, extending from the belt to lower edge, and provide the desired flare. The plain back is in one-piece, extending over the shoulders in yoke effect. There are a group of small tucks at each shoulder, and the long plain sleeves are finished with narrow cuffs. The diagram pictures the simple design of No. 1285, which is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years (or 34, 36 and 38 inches bust only). Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 3⅝ yards 39-inch, or 2⅞ yards 54-inch material. Price 20 cents.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26.

Intrigue and peculiar perplexities are presaged from the prominent position of malefic planets in the day's forecast. Neptune, Saturn and Mars are hostile, consequently it might be well to be on guard against all manner of deception and subtle as well as open attack. Care should be taken not to precipitate this baneful condition by strife or rashness or acts inviting misconstruction on one's own part. Take every precaution, and unexpected good may arise. Be discreet in social correspondence.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of peculiar experiences, with intrigue and subtlety menacing. Avoid quarrels, rashness and all manner of complicating or involving circumstances and appearances and be careful with social or affectional correspondence. A child born on this day may be given to, as well as a victim of, subtleties and intrigues, probably in business as well as personal relations. A career of singular experiences is predicted.

DOUBLE CROSSING CUPID

By Juanita Hamel

"Two's company; three's a crowd!" Is there any one in the world who doesn't know this saying? The only time that the trio is perfectly happy is when the third angle in the triangle is Dan Cupid himself. Then everything's lovely! But isn't it the most terrible situation that can be imagined, when two who earnestly desire to be all alone and whisper to each other the sweet nothings and everythings which Love prompts, are forced to endure the presence of a rank outsider?

Even Cupid, who is acting as chaperone, boredly pores over his book of rules and tries to find a remedy. And he does. For Love always finds a way and the favored one of the rivals, though separated from the one of his choice, grasps her dainty hand, and implants thereon the kisses which he's hoping soon to be able to use to seal his troth.

And Cupid laughs! For he's happy when two whom he favors finds a way. Even though they think they're double crossing him, he in reality ha engineered the whole thing. And there you are!

MY "TWO CENTS' WORTH."

If babies were taught at their mother's knee how to play poker with true finesse, they would have no yen in late years to play the game where the lights are bright and companions dubious. So affirms one President Ramsey B. Ogilby of Trinity College, speaking before a mothers' Club.

The speaker recalled that his mother taught him the high art of poker when he was but a toddler. When he went to college and was secretly invited to poker parties, he pooh-poohed such childish pastimes, says he.

Some wise card and poker chip company now will put out decks in pale pink and blue shades, pink for a boy, blue for a girl—or vice versa!

CURRENT EVENTS.

Having entered the World Court they are all talking what the United States are going to do after they're seated. "The irreconcilables" are still talking about "foreign entanglements" and how the country is going to the demnition bow-wows.

Colonel Nobili will pilot the dirigible on the Ellsworth-Amundsen flight to the North Pole which hops off late in March.

Judge Florence Allen of the Ohio Supreme Court bench, the first woman in the world to hold such a position, practically admits her candidacy for the U.S. Senate. The Senate can't lose if she wins!

Carrie Chapman Catt, aged woman-suffrage pioneer and a crusader for world peace, has re-entered public life after a seven years' absence. She is making a lecture tour of the country, speaking on the subject of peace.

MAKING PIN MONEY AT HOME

Be cautious about the many advertised knitting machines. One or two are all right, the rest are not. The trick is to demand "perfectly knitted hose," and no matter how much yarn a woman buys or how many hours a day she runs the machine, the company never deems her product "perfect." When in doubt about anything like this, consult your Chamber of Commerce.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT.

Chaliapin, the giant in stature and voice of the operatic world, the Russian singer who was once a Volga boatman, visits Hollywood but denies that he will enter the movies. "Too old to start a new game," he says sagely.

She's no more afraid of sharks than of kittens. "Man-eating sharks are not recognized by scientists," says Miss Ruth.

TO PLAY AT HOME.

Get a box of anagrams from any book supply store. Or, they could be made at home if someone is ambitious enough to cut the letters of the alphabet from papers and mount them on cardboard. Anagrams are nothing but cardboard letters. A hundred different games may be played with a box of anagrams.

Before the game begins it is decided what is to be played—fruits, vegetables, flowers, states, mountains, rivers, famous people, foods, anything.

The anagrams are placed before the dealer, face side down. The dealer turns them over, and the players must say "a fruit," or whatever is being played, beginning with the letter turned up. The one who has the largest pile when the game is over has won. Children love this game and I have heard even adults shriek "parsnup" quite boisterously. Hostesses have arranged progressive anagram tables for those who do not play bridge.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

STARTED.

When I said I was going to Toronto it was this time that Chuck laughed.

"You would rather go up against a wicked city than me, wouldn't you, Judy? When are you going? May I ask?"

"Tomorrow morning, Chuck."

"Well, if you're not home in a month or two I'll probably drop down to see if you haven't changed your mind."

"Don't put yourself out, Chuck," I answered casually, "and you'll have to excuse me now because I'm going home to pack up."

I had all my packing done when Dad came home that night with a return ticket to Toronto.

"Thank you, Dad," I said, "I'm all ready for the morning train. But why did you spend your money so foolishly?" I admonished as I held the return ticket up to him.

"Because I expect you back within a month," he answered seriously.

Poor old Dad and Mother! They hated to see me go and to tell the truth I was a bit shaky, but I was determined to keep up my bluff and I knew if I stayed at home they would not let me out of their sight.

At the last Mother clung to me saying:

"Don't forget, child, to wear your heavy boots if it rains and wrap up warm if you go out at night. The evenings in Toronto are very cold."

Mother was heartbroken but she had lived under Father's will for so long that she had no idea of what getting out on my own would mean to me. She had nothing to advise me about or even tell me except a few foolish details of physical care for my health.

I thought there was a tear in Dad's eye as I raised my face to kiss him good-bye, but his mouth was stern even when he spoke his last words to me, which were:

"Don't lose your return ticket."

As I watched them from the window before the train started, I had a little qualm. I wondered if it wouldn't be better to stay at home with them even if I did have to give up my ideas about my own way or any liberty whatever.

"When I have children," I said to myself, "I will never expect them to go back to my ways which are dead and gone, but I'll try to travel on to the new ways with them."

This Filmy Pink Chiffon Is Ideal for a Young Girl's Dance Frock.

While various fabrics have come and gone in fashion popularity, we have another Spring in which nothing promises to be so much used for evening as the simple frock of sheer chiffon.

The material is not new, it is true, but it is used in various alluring ways. The frill at the side and the wide lace used in the bodice are both smart touches on the frock above.

The color of this one is pink, a very pale pink. The silver lace is inserted in the foundation bodice and veiled with a layer of chiffon. The roses are deeper pink velvet and the cascades at the sides are picotted.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am in love with a young girl and I think she is in love with me. She persists in going out with other fellows but she does not want me to go out with other girls. Is this the proper answer for me or not?

A quick reply would be much appreciated. P. K.

P. K.—This young girl is rather contrary, it seems. Why don't you put the matter clearly before her. Tell her she shouldn't expect of you what she isn't willing to do herself. Jealousy is supposed to be a sign of love. Perhaps she is more in love with you than you are with her and the idea of your going out with other girls is more repulsive to her than a similar situation is to you. Have it out with her anyway, and come to some agreement.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl in my late 'teens and am coming to you for advise. I am in love with a young man about my own age. I see him almost every day and he is very friendly toward me. I do not think he knows I am in love with him. He does not go out much at night and I have never seen him with a girl. I would like to get better acquainted with him. I have a great many friends, both boys and girls, and am not actually homely, nor really beautiful, but a happy medium. I have been going with a boy but I seem to tire of him as I have of other boy friends. As yet I have never met anyone I really liked until I met this particular young man. What would you advise me to do? Wishing you every success in your work, and thanking you in advance. BUBBLES.

BUBBLES: Are you quite sure, as you say you tire of other boy friends, that it isn't a case of simply wanting what is hard to get? Of course, yours may be a instance of real love. Perhaps this young man is the ideal mate for you and that is why you want to get better acquainted with him. I can't give you any special procedure to follow, except to try as hard as you can to be at those places where this young man is and to look your best and act as well as possible when you do meet him. I certainly would not let him know that you are in love with him at this stage of the game. If you want him badly enough, concentrate on that thought, and you will likely see some results in the near future. You know, they say, "Love does not come. 'Tis sent." And, if you do succeed in getting a line on him, don't tire of him after all your trouble. As an afterthought, how would it be to let him come after you? That was the old-fashioned way, but old-fashioned marriages were often happier than those of today. A man usually appreciates most what is hardest to achieve.

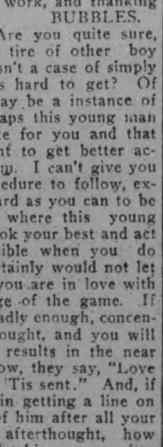
VICKS VAPORUB



The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin. —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

P. McI.—You have a nature that needs a good deal of watching, if you wish to attain any measure of happiness in life. You have a strong, active personality, somewhat limited in vision and self-centred, but your destiny points to the care of others. Domesticity is your way in life, with service to others inspired by love. You belong to the parents of the race. And still, with this manifest path before you, you will perhaps mar it by a capricious, fickle instinct in your nature, a jealous, suspicious feeling even toward those you love, and a lack of patience. You should try to conquer indecision of character, never take drugs or stimulants of any sort, remember that money has a value and that he who dances must pay the fiddler. You are of the type also that craves only for the affection that eludes you. To achieve happiness, you have somewhat to face, haven't you? But you have a large and true nature and can conquer your faults, if you try hard enough. Do not marry unless you know the man well, and then choose a mate born in December. He can best cope with your dual nature.

You were born on Monday. Your color is flame in all its variations.

H. M. R.—You have a personality that is not especially adapted to the work you have chosen. You would do better as a teacher, perhaps. You have a certain amount of attraction, both physical and mental, but no great depth, having a somewhat changable nature. Combined with this is a tendency toward reserve and sometimes morbid thinking that should be overcome if at all possible. You are inclined to be secretive about your own affairs, a good quality when not carried to excess. Marry a bright, cheery man, born in March, May or August, and begin important undertakings on Wednesday. Try to conquer a habit of picking people to pieces—not an excellent trait in anyone. You are generous, affectionate and possessed of considerable personal magnetism. You are orderly and methodical and will succeed in anything you undertake.

You were born on Tuesday. Your color is pink. The day you enquire about, a Saturday, is one on which to avoid arguments and undertake nothing new. Strive to get along with your associates on this day.

V. P. S.—You are fond of good times, and like amusement. Pleasure and good cheer appeal to you. You should be successful in any work involving finance or business. You have a strong will power and are skilful in the use of your hands. You are courteous and affable when you so desire, but can be very blunt on occasion. You like good things to eat and good dressing. You have one extremely bad habit, that of putting things off, which will work you no good in life. And you are inclined at times to scold and nag. You will be more successful when connected with large schemes and will not meet with much material prosperity in a subordinate position. You are fond of change, and although lazy by instinct, your stars are perpetually pushing you forward to better things. You are inclined to be extravagant.

You were born on Friday. Your color is black.

The day you ask about, a Tuesday, is one for exercising patience and being agreeable. Do not exercise strenuously and make no important purchases.

M. E. S.—Naturally, you have an inclination to take the lead and to domineer at times. You have a strong, active nature, rather self-centred, however. And circumstances of your life make it imperative, if you wish to succeed and be happy, that you do not try to stand alone in any enterprise. Associate yourself with others at all times. Any attempt to control the affairs of those about you will end in failure.

You are fearless and kind, when not irritated, and are powerful mentally and spiritually. You are inclined to pay too much attention to the showy things of life and to showy people, who are not always the most worth while. You have a very good memory. You should guard against sudden, explosive anger, which causes you regret later. Cultivate patience.

You were born on Friday. Your color is flame. The day you ask about, a Monday, is one on which to be cheerful and generous. Do not put anything off on that day and accept any responsibility offered you.

M. A. W.—You have a good deal of strength physically, with creative power and tenacity. Your life has been hampered at times by a quality of changefulness and uncertainty that has not always spelled either success or happiness for you. You have a great deal of skill with your hands and are possessed of great tact and taste in the choice of language. You like good things to eat and fine dressing. You are overfond of praise and flattery and have a bad habit of putting things off. You are apt also to nag at times and this is not a good thing. A little tendency to sarcasm creeps into your conversation on occasion. You are inclined to be just a little extravagant with money. You are happiest and most successful when at the head of any enterprise.

You were born on Thursday. Your colors are blue and silver.

Calomel Acts Upon the Liver

Takes away all previous days waste

To feel your best day in and out, to eat well, work well, sleep well, digest well, you must keep your liver active or the system will immediately become filled with poison causing a multitude of troubles as indigestion, headaches, gas on stomach, constipation, kidney pains, foul breath, biliousness, rheumatism, etc. One Tanol Calomel tablet taken before meals or two at bedtime, then the next morning jump from your bed, take a glass of water, and away goes all the previous days wastes and poisons. Be sure you get Tamol Calomel as it is much better than ordinary calomel; no salts or seidlitz are needed to remove from system. Get a few from F. C. Webber, druggist, Charlotte St., Peterborough, and you will be surprised how effective they are.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

No. 21—THE KIND CHINAMAN

At last they reached China. That is the elevator on which the Twins, Jupe and Hickydoo were riding, reached China.

They all got off and looked around curiously.

But no more curiously than the Chinese people looked at them. They had never been children with light hair or white skin like the Twins before, nor had they seen a kangaroo much less a kangaroo in a velvet coat. But the person who attracted the most attention was Hickydoo, who stepped jerkily along on his wooden legs and stared stonily ahead.

"It surely must be the land of dragon-flies," whispered Nancy to Nick.

Indeed it seemed so, for the Chinese ladies had dragon-flies embroidered on their dresses and dragon-flies on their obis, or big sashes, their fans had dragon-flies painted on them, the paper parasols were decorated with dragon-flies, and even the walls of the houses were ornamented with them.

"I hope we can get a bushel somewhere," said Jupe. "We'll have to hurry, too, for that old bat won't let us past until we do."

Right then they passed a market. All sorts of things were for sale.

Birds' nests, for one thing, and goose livers, and rice both cooked and raw. Then there were fish. Big fish, little fish, and all sorts of fish. And flowers! Cherry blossoms and iris and big red poppies—all for sale!

Everything but dragon-flies!

Suddenly they came face to face with the fat Chinaman with the pigtail, who had come down in the elevator with them.

He was still grinning and when he saw the Twins and Jupe and Hickydoo, he stopped and repeated the very words he had said in the elevator, "Ooly, hooly ony yippy yang sang werry!"

But nobody knew what on earth, or what in China, he was gabbling about.

Then he laughed and said in perfectly good American, "I just said that I was the Fairy Queen's ambassador to China, and I know why you are here. She told me to be on the lookout for you, I suppose the cross old bat held you up on your adventures and wouldn't let you past until you got a bushel of dragon-flies for him. Isn't that true?"

"Oh, yes sir!" cried Nancy and Nick. "That's it exactly."

"Well, don't worry," said the kind Chinaman. "He holds up everybody. He sends everybody to China for dragon-flies. Not that he cares for dragon-flies so much but he thinks he'll keep them out of the way for awhile. That old bat is paid by Blue Whiskers, the wizard, to keep people away from the palace."

"How did you know we were coming?" asked Jupe.

"I was watching," said the kind Chinaman. "I knew exactly when you stepped on the elevator. So I pressed a spring and down it came and brought you with it."

Do you know where we can get a bushel of dragon-flies?" asked Nick.

"Yes, they are all ready," said the Chinaman. "They are in the elevator now, and you may return at once."

"Oh, we can't!" said Nancy. "We have to get a bushel of Jersey mosquitoes too, and a bushel of fuzzy caterpillars."

"I've attended to everything," said the kind Chinaman. "You will find everything. You will also find your motorcycles repaired and waiting for you."

"I'm sure we're ever and ever and ever so much obliged," said Nancy.

"I should say so," said Nick.

"Yes, indeed," said Jupe and Hickydoo.

"Don't mention it," said the kind Chinaman. "And now you'd better be going."

DE LAVAL'S FRONT LINE SPEED WON FIRST GAME FROM BRINTON

Score 4-3 in Senior City League Game For Brown Cup.

BAILEY REFEREED.

Greater speed and persistent back checking by the De Laval forwards enabled the Separator boys to win the first game of the senior city league series for the Brown cup by the odd goal from the Brintons. The final score of the game in which the lead changed hands several times, was 4-3 for the De Laval.

The work of Williams, McDougall and Dundas, the three youthful forwards of the winners, featured. They checked hard and repeatedly stopped the rushes of McMartin and Lackey. They were given good support by their defence men, while Ward played a useful game in goal.

Lackey, McMartin, and Rose were the stars of the Carpet squad. They were given good support by their defence. LeBarr turned in a splendid game in goal, while Wood and Cripps were also prominent.

Both teams were unlucky around the nets, missing the open goal at times by inches on shots from short range.

Irvin Bailey was referee and made a splendid showing, keeping the game in hand by the frequent issue of rest orders, which totalled eighteen.

Brintons—Goal, LeBarr; defence, Lackey and McMartin; centre, Rose; wings, King and Cripps; subs, Wood and White.

De Laval—Goal, Ward; defence, Marchen and Evans; centre, Williams; wings, Dundas and McDougall; subs, Kingdon and Smith.

Referee—Irvin Bailey.

First Period.

The speed of the De Laval forwards enabled them to do most of the pressing in this period, which was fought at high speed all the way through.

The Brintons made the first attack, Ward stopping a couple of smart shots before LeBarr was tested on a Dundas and Williams combination which he broke up by intercepting the last pass. McMartin opened the scoring in six minutes when Ward scooped the puck in on a slow shot to the corner of the net. Two minutes later Dundas equalled matters on a rebound from Williams, and a minute later McDougall score an odd goal. He shot high and the puck, bouncing back from the end of the rink, struck LeBarr and dropped back of the goal line. McMartin, McDougall and Marchen drew penalties during this period.

Second Period.

A little laxity in checking and clearing on the part of the De Laval quickly changed their lead af one goal to a like deficit. Rose slammed home a pair of rebounds within a minute, and the lead he gave his team was held until the middle of the period when McDougall scored on a shot between the defence men.

The period was marked by a great deal of roughness, ten penalties being issued by Referee Bailey. Lew LeBarr served a couple, one in company with Evans for mixing it in front of the net and the other for throwing the puck at McDougall who tried to knock it from his hand. McMartin occupied the net during LeBarr's absence and stopped several hard shots. McMartin grew a little careless in his use of his stick and served a pair of penalties for tripping, while McDougall, Marchen, Williams and King, all made one or more trips to the timers. The period ended with the Brinton two men short.

Third Period.

Play slowed up considerably at the beginning of the last period, both teams showing the effect of the gruelling struggle of the first two frames. As soon as McDougall and Williams combined who what proved to be the winning goal, however, the play resumed its former pace and both goalies were kept busy as play swept from one end of the rink to the other. The play also became rougher as it speeded up. Marchen served a penalty. Williams went off for a trip. Cripps bodied an opponent against the boards and was chased. Williams saved a goal by tripping Rose, who was right through. Lackey drew the last penalty of the game for a trip in front of his own goal.

Summary:

First Period.

Brintons—McMartin, 6.00.
De Laval—Dundas, 2.00.
De Laval, McDougall, 1.00.

Second Period.

Brintons—Rose, 2.30
Brintons—Rose, 1.00.
De Laval, McDougall (Dundas) 11.00.

Third Period.

De Laval—Williams (McDougall) 12.00.

EDDIE PLANK DEAD WAS GREAT PITCHER

Star of Connie Mack's Great Team Follows Mathewson.

Plank won fame while he played with the Philadelphia Athletics under the famous Connie Mack. In his first year, 1901, under Mack, he won 17 of the 28 games he pitched, and his record increased in following years when in 1902, 1905 and 1911, when the Athletics copped the pennant of the American League and twice won the world's championship.

Plank's forte was consistency rather than brilliancy.

MARMORA HOCKEY.

Public and Separate School Teams Play.

MARMORA, Feb. 25. — An interesting game of juvenile hockey was played on the Marmora rink on Tuesday evening between teams representing Marmora Separate school and Marmora Public school. Tommy Warren guarded the net for the P's and Frank Burns for the S's.

The first period saw Gordon Burns score for the Separate school, and Gerald McInroy for their rivals. The tie was unbroken in the next period. In the third period, the Separate quintette became the more aggressive of the two. William Shannon put his team ahead and Hugh Brady adding a brace, the Public school went down to defeat to the extent of 4-1. The game was refereed by Mr. Ralph Neal.

WORTH IN SPORT KNOWING

There were five one-hit games pitched in the majors last season. The National produced three.

Nehf, Jones and Vance were the "one-hitters" in the Heydler circuit. Bush and Lyons turned the trick in the American. Cincinnati, Brooklyn and Philadelphia were the old league victims.

Oddly enough, Washington was the only Johnsonian ensemble to be held to a single safety, the first time on August 27 and again September 19.

Youth is to all the glad season of life; but often only by what it hopes, not by what it attains, or what it escapes.—Carlyle.

McGOVERN'S DEFEAT BY CORBETT BIG SURPRISE.

(By Joe Williams.)

Some 25 years ago a pink-faced, cherubic-looking youngster came out of the west, unheralded and unknown, to give boxing one of the most astounding surprises the ancient sport has ever embraced.

They called him Young Corbett, though his real name was Billy Rothwell, and out in Denver, whence he came, they knew him as a fightin' fool.

Matched to battle Terry McGovern—Terrible Terry—at Hartford, Conn., on Thanksgiving Day, 1901, Young Corbett, then scarcely 21, was conceded little more than an outside chance to last the limit.

Eastern critics, familiar with Terrible Terry's slashing onslaughts, actually felt a bit sorry for the invader and his boyish manager, Johnny Corbett, who came wearing a bizarre vest of muskrat skins, the hairy side out.

They predicted a short fight and the betting odds, 2 to 1 favoring Terrible Terry, at that time champion of the featherweights, seemed logical enough.

It was a short fight. A dramatically short fight. It lasted less than two rounds. Young Corbett won by a knockout, a swinging, swishing right-hand uppercut, that caught Terrible Terry on the angle of the jaw, ended the fight after one minute and 44 seconds of furious slugging in the second round.

Terrible Terry had come in overweight. After the fight he refused formally to relinguish the title.

Young Corbett replied with a remark revealing philosophic depths:

"All right," he said, "maybe I'm not the champion, but when I go down the street people will point at me and say, 'There goes the guy that knocked out McGovern.' That'll do me."

No fight between featherweights before or since matched this one for brevity, savagery and drama. Corbett, thought to be purely a boxer, met McGovern, a relentless boring-in type of battler, at his game—and battered him to the floor under a flood of heavy blows that caused old-timers to gasp.

Both men were knocked down in the first round. With the round more than half gone Corbett shot a right to the jaw which sat McGovern on his haunches. At seven he was up, throwing punches from every angle. Corbett met every rush, but was finally forced to his knees by a left over the heart. He was able to get back on his feet after a short count and the two were slugging toe to toe at the bell.

Going back to his corner McGovern said to his amazed handlers, "That's the toughest man I ever met, but I'll peg him just as soon as I get an opening."

McGovern was not destined to get the opening. When two more minutes had been clicked off he was a bent, crumpled figure on the canvas, trying desperately to get to his feet while Referee Charlie White counted him out. Here's the blow-by-blow detail of that history-making haymaker:

Round Two.

McGovern rushed in with a left to the body, clinched and there was an exchange of rights and leftse. Corbett, on the defensive, met McGovern's rushes with stiff punches and straight left jabs. With a left-hand uppercut he sent McGovern to the floor. McGovern took five and came back like a wild man. All science was abandoned and both men began slugging.

McGovern was the wilder of the two. They made a half circle of the ring in this manner. It was anybody's fight, depending on who landed the first crushing blow. Corbett was keeping his head better, and was landing more effectively to the body. There was no guarding on McGovern's part—he forgot all defense. All he saw was a hurricane of blows coming toward him. One of them, a right-swining uppercut, landed squarely on the jaw and he went down. He was not senseless, but made frantic efforts to get to his feet while the referee slowly counted 10 over him.

Corbett, meanwhile, stood back looking dubiously at the proceedings, thinking McGovern would be able to get up and renew the fight. Realizing finally it was over, and he had won, a broad smile broke across the westerner's round face and he walked over to McGovern's corner and patted him on the shoulders.

MISS WILLS TAKES REST FROM TENNIS

Day's Holiday To Avoid Going Stale.

MONTE CARLO, Feb. 25. — Canadian Press. — The Monte Carlo tennis tournament went on yesterday with its stars absent. Suzanne Lenglen remained in the mountains; Helen Wills, deciding to take a day's holiday, motored to the Italian Riviera, while neither Senorita De Alvarez of Spain, nor Frau Nepach of Germany, other favorites, were engaged in singles' play.

When the United States champion failed to appear on the courts reports were circulated that she, like Suzanne, had broken down under the strain of their rivalry, but she merely feared that she was going stale after five weeks of continuous play under the Riviera sun. She asked for a day's rest, lunched at San Remo and returned this evening, looking much refreshed.

To-day she will have to do extra duty, for three matches are on her schedule. At 11 o'clock she will play singles against Miss Lily Cadle, of England, who defeated Mrs. Molla Mallory at Mentone in 1923. In the open doubles championships Miss Wills and Mlle. Contoslavos will face Mrs. Young and Miss Green of England; and in their second match in the Beaumont Cup play she and Mrs. Aeschlimann, as a United States pair will oppose Mrs. Phyllis Satterthwaite and Miss Eillean Bennett, an English team.

ST. PETER'S TEAM THREE GOALS UP

Defeated St. Andrew's 3-0 in First of City League Finals.

CLOSE CHECKING.

St. Peter's Junior hockey team earned a three goal lead over St. Andrew's in the first game of the City League playoffs for the Hobberlin Cup last night, the score of the game being 3 to 0. The winners, although handicapped by having only one sub, out-checked their opponents, making the combination play, which won first place in the schedule games for their opponents, impossible. Backed by good goalkeeping by Mein, who was at the top of his form, the persistency of the Cathedral boys was rewarded by 3 goals in quick success at about the middle of the third period. Gillespie in the losers' goal, was not up to par, while his defence was carefess in the clearing of rebounds and loose pucks.

Sowden and Marshall led the attack for the losers, but spoiled their work by failure to pass at the proper moments. LeBarr and Jones were best for the St. Peter's team, with Archambault also effective.

Referee Bill Jackson had an off night and many uncomplimentary remarks were made by players and supporters of both teams because of his laxity in calling offsides and bodychecks in centre ice.

St. Andrews—Goal, Gillespie; defence, Sowden and Marshall; centre, Hall; wings, Nixon and Allen subs. Mowry, Robertson and Jennings.

St. Peters—Goal, Mein; defence, Le Barr and Richea; centre, Archambault; wings, Jones and Kennealey; sub, Wolff.

Referee—"Bill' Jackson.

Play in the first period was hard and close checking with both goals having many narrow escapes. The customary combination of St. Andrew's was spoiled by the persistent work of the opposing forwards, while the Cathedral team spoiled its work by the loafing of a couple of the players. The Blueshirts failed to hold their positions during this period. The work of both defences was the best feature of the play and the only time that either goal was seriously threatened was when Hall missed the open net on a rebound from Marshall's shot.

Penalties were served by LeBarr 2 Wolff and Sowden.

Second Period

The winners had a clear edge in this period. They displayed the only combination of the game while the losers either hogged the puck or passed wildly. The winners checked the Presbyterian attack from the start, while the losers let the St. Peter's boys get up speed before they started to check.

Archambault scored the first two goals. The first came from a scramble in front of the net, while the second was deflected in by Robertson when Archambault shot straight across the goal mouth. Jones scored the third when he skated around the defence. For the last few minutes Mein was kept busy, but he played a great game.

Penalties were served by Sowden 3, Jones, LeBarr and Nixon.

BENEDICTS WON FROM BACHELORS

Score Was 11 To 6— Max Swanston in Training at Collegiate Rink.

A great battle was staked last evening at the Collegiate Rink between the Married and Single men of the Examiner. There was some dispute as too the score, the Married men claiming the victory and the Single men putting up the same claim. Mr. A. Wise Cracker, who was in attendance at the game, said that the Married Men had won 11-6, but as the writer of this is a confirmed bachelor, the score is going to stand a tie, 6-6.

The game was an exceedingly rough affair, body-checking, cross-checking, butt-ending and a few more rough tactics were indulged in. The main offenders were Scates; the Butcher defence of the Married Men, "Pork" Swanston and "Beef" McCauley were the worst offenders. They couldn't have done any more damage had they had a couple of cleavers, an axe and a butcher knife. The way they chopped the Single men down was a crime. One of the main victims of the Butchers Boys was the big butter and egg man from the sticks "Judas" Tedford, who hails from that northern Hamlet Owen Sound. It has a sign outside the burg which reads, "Drive slow or you might miss it; one mile to the blacksmith shop. Tedford was given a rough passage by the husky defence men on the Benedicts team. "Spike" Dugan also got a rough passage from these two porkers. Although Dugan was playing with the Bachelors there was no reason why he should be. But through his kindness in assisting the Single Men helped to boost the score for he got a couple of tallys.

"Duke" Phillips was in the nets for the Benedicts. He turned in a good performance and might have done better had not Mr. A. Wise Cracker been standing behind him pulling "red-hot" cracks. After four, in a row had been scored on Phillips Mr. Wise Cracker told him that there was nothing in the rule book which says a man can't stop them.

The Benedicts forward line was in pretty fair shape and turned in some snappy plays. When "Curly" Zeihr, "Specs" Duggan and "Nipper" Collins came down "Moon" Scates, in the Bachelor's goal, had to be right dead on. Collins was inclined to mix it a little, but after "Radio" Taylor broadcasted him a couple across the shins, he cooled down. "Judas" Tedford also cooled Collins down when he hooked him a couple under the chin.

The Bachelor's goal tender was in pretty good form, but after he let five in a row go in, Mr. Wise Cracker thought it was unfair for the Benedicts to take advantage of their opponents, and he ordered the nets reversed, in order to assist Moon Scates. On the Bachelors' defence Taylor and Tedford turned in fair games, although they were slowed up a lot in the early stages of the game after a couple of visits down around the Butcher Boys' area. The sorrell-topped youngster, "Red" Franks, at centre for the Bachelors, was in great condition(?) and he corralled a couple of counters for his team. "Red" gave the spectators a great exhibition of fancy diving, doing some great nose-dives, backward flips, etc. This was the result of clashes with "Pork" Swanston. Having mentioned Dugan's performance a little credit is due to "Whoozis" Dorrington, who was without a doubt the best stick-handler on the ice. Dorrington gave some great exhibitions of stick-handling, especially when he was alone in the corner of the rink. One of Dorrington's finest solo plays is that of skating in front of his own net and handing the puck to one of the opposition team, who have no trouble in taking advantage of Mr. Dorrington's little present.

The game was well patronized and quite a number of celebrities were noticed on the side lines, including Mr. A. Wise Cracker, who had a couple of his undertaker friends along with him.

"Duck Soup" Barringer acted in the official capacity as referee. He didn't prove satisfactory to the Bachelors. Being a married man Mr. Barringer was too lenient with the Benedicts. Efforts will be made to secure a neutral referee if the teams decide to replay the tie.

The line-ups:

Referee—J. Barringer.

NORHAM NEWS.

NORHAM, Feb. 24.—Mr. George Cockbourn the Warkworth-Colborne mail carrier was taken with an attack of heart trouble one day recently just as he was about to leave Colborne and fell from his sleigh inflicting injuries which although not considered serious have left him unable to drive the mail for the past week. He is still under the care of a physician. Mr. Wiggins is carrying the mail at present.

Murney McCann returned home after spending a week with friends in Toronto.

Robert Ryckman has been confined to his bed for the past couple of weeks with a severe illness.

Samuel Myers, of Corbyville, whose father was stationed on Norham circuit 45 years ago was a recent caller at the parsonage. He was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Stone of Campbellford.

The recent snow storm has made the roads nearly impassable for automobile traffic. Several motorists have had to be shovelled or drawn out in the past few days.

TIJUANA WINNER.

W. Munden, 15-year-old rider, has been riding only seeva months, but already at Tijuana he has more winners than any other jockey. If he keeps up his pace he may equal the records of Sane, America's premier rider, turfmen predict.

BETHANY PERSONALS

BETHANY, Feb. 24.—Mrs. P. C. Brown and Mrs. Edward Swanson were visitors to Grafton on Tuesday.

Among those from here to attend the basket social at Manver's Station were: Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Kennedy, Miss Hazel Jackson, Mr. Carleton Patton, Mr. Carlpbell Darroch and Mr. Walter Rowland.

Mr. Isaac Fallis was in Peterboro on Tuesday attending the Thresher's convention.

Mr. S. Rea of Saskatchewan is visiting his friends, Mr. and Mrs. C. Darroch.

The last progressive euchre party of the season was held on Tuesday evening in the Town Hall. The attendance was very small, only 16 tables being played First prizes were won by Miss Magill and Mr. O. H. Magill. Consolation prizes were given to Mrs. O. H. Magill and Wm. Davis, Sr.

On Wednesday the class in Agriculture was taken to Peterboro to view the Canadian Packing plant, Quaker Oat buildings, and other places of interest in the city.

Mr. Herb Patterson was a visitor to Lindsay on Wednesday.

A number from this village attended the Winter Horse Show in Millbrook on Thursday.

Miss Armstrong of Peterboro was the week end guest of Miss Jean Thorndyke.

Mr. Harry Lee of Toronto spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lee.

Train Cut Off.

The C.P.R. company discontinued the service of the train known to the surrounding country as the Port McNichol, on Monday. This train has been in operation since the building of the road some 14 years ago. From now on a mixed train due in the village at 9.10 a.m. and bound for Lindsay and other points north will be run, returning again at 4.15 p.m. bound for Peterboro and points east.

This will make it necessary for the young people who used this train to attend school in Lindsay daily, to remain in Lindsay for the entire week.

Sheds Condemned.

The trustee board of the United church has condemned the sheds at the back of the church used by the public in general, persons using these sheds, do so at their own risk.

It is the intention of the board to build new up to date sheds this coming spring and those who have always used these sheds will have an opportunity to assist in this work.

R. W. Price has started in business for himself this week, having purchased Milton Chailice's grocery store and butcher business.

SHE KNEW ADOLPHE IN DAY THAT WAS LESS PALMY.

By NEA Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The two important screen roles that have fallen to the lot of Elsie Lawson in the course of her cinema career found her playing opposite Adolphe Menjou, the star of Paramount's "A Social Celebrity," now in the course of production with Mal St. Clair as director.

Miss Lawson made her screen debut in 1917, appearing in extra and bit roles in a series of pictures under the direction of Christie Cabanne. She was given her first opportunity in pictures as one of the sisters of Marguerite Clark in "The Amazons," an early Famous Players success. Opposite her, in the role of a French beau, appeared Adolphe Menjou, then an unknown in cinema ranks, who made frequent but unimportant appearances in a miscellany of photoplays.

Following her performance in "The Amazons" Miss Lawson left the screen and devoted herself to the stage, singing and dancing in several popular musical comedies.

But while Miss Lawson pursued footlight fame, Menjou gradually forged to the front as a screen star. In "A Social Celebrity," which stars Menjou, she has been assigned a prominent part in his support, which features also Chester Conklin and Louise Brooks.

The two players found each other well advanced on the road to success upon which they had earlier met as less fortunate newcomers.

GENE SARAZEN—LEARN BY WATCHING EXPERTS.

I learned many things about golf in tournaments and I realized I had a long distance to travel. In fact,

I was a little discouraged over my showing. Some of the boys were grumbling about their luck and the putting greens. I felt I had had hard luck on the greens, also, because so many putts stayed out of the hole. However, I have since learned that if you hit your putts properly they will generally drop.

I played in a few other tournaments, learning something in each competition but winning no money. However, my confidence was increasing and the more I saw of the other players, the more I thought I could do as well as most of them.

But I also realized that fellows like Hutchison, Barnes and Hagen had shots I knew nothing about and were champions because of their exceptional skill.

Hutchison's iron play particularly impressed me. At Pinehurst I watched him closely. In fact, after I had played two rounds I withdrew from the tournament and followed Jock, studying his swing all the way.

Her Face Was Covered With Large, Red Pimples

Miss Greta Carlisle, 23 Leonard St., Brantford, Ont., writes:—"A short while ago, my face was completely covered with large red pimples, and it seemed that it was almost impossible for me to get rid of them, as nothing I took seemed to do me any good.

One day I noticed an advertisement of

and I will never regret the day I bought it, as, now, my face is entirely cleared up of blotches and pimples of every kind."

AT K. OF C. ALLEYS

Ladies' teams bowling scheduled games at the Knights of Columbus' Alleys last evening were the West Ends (Mrs. J. J. Doris, captain) who took three games from the Shamrocks (Miss Helen Quinn, captain), and the Daffodils (Miss Florence Murray captain) who took two games out of three from the Owls Miss Katherine McDonald, captain).

Players on the West Ends' team had scores of 171 (Mrs. J. Picard) and 158 (Mrs. J. P. Finn). On the Daffodils' team Miss Irene O'Brien made 177 and 159, and Miss K. O'Keefe 163.

TOUR ENDORSED.

Manitoba Football Association Support D.F.A.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—Complete endorsation of the action of the Dominion Football Association in bringing over a team of old country players this summer was expressed at a meeting of the Manitoba Football Association. The fact that the Dominion body will assume all responsibility for the tour, and will divide any profits accruing with the local associations, where the games are played, was also favorably commented upon.

The Football Association, of London, England, the ruling body of all organized football, has cancelled a permit which allowed John Hastie, now a resident of this city, to play with the local Celtics, without remuneration. Hastie, an English professional, left the Celtics and joined the Westminster team, of the United church league here. The church league is not affiliated with the Manitoba Association.

W.C.T.U. RALLY MEETING.

Addresses on Work and Budget of Union Were Heard.

A rally meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the green room and library of the Y.W.C.A. yesterday afternoon, with a remarkably good attendance The president, Mrs. A. B. Cunningham, was in the chair. Brief addresses on W.C.T.U. and the budget were given by Mrs Buckler and Mrs. I. Weir, and it was decided to send the sum of $35 to the Provincial Budget Fund. Mrs. J. F. Allin read the Bible lesson and Mrs. Geo. Rowe took part in the devotional exercises. During the afternoon, several well-received vocal solos were given by Mrs. H. Doig, Mrs. V. Walker, and Miss I. McBride, with accompaniments by Miss Alma Blanchard. Mrs. H. G. Walker and Mrs. T. Barrie had charge of the musical programme and Mrs. Jas. Spencer looked after the refreshments which were served at the conclusion of the business session

UNIVERSAL AND LASTING PEACE IS ROTARY'S AIM

Anniversary Message From Paul Harris, Founder of Movement.

WORLD BROTHERHOOD

Charitable Disposition Must Be Cultivated Toward All Peoples.

The best minds of the most advanced nations are addressing themselves to the task of finding ways and means to establish universal and permanent peace. Rotary occupies a position of matchless strategic importance of which good use must be made in aid of this most laudable purpose. Let us make the utmost of our opportunities to cultivate personal friendship with men of other nations. I would love some day to be able to truthfully say that I have friends in every civilized country of the globe. If neither you or I live to realize such a blessing, perhaps those of the next generation may. The desired result can be achieved only by putting aside national differences and cultivating charitable disposition toward civilization essentially different from our own.

Having started the march there is of course only one logical and proper objective and that is that every nation be ultimately made to realize the practical force and economic advantage of a real universal brotherhood ,and man will not be content to cease him efforts until that one great objective is achieved.

COMPROMISE ON UNION IN QUEBEC

Expected That Church Bill Will Be Same as Ontario Legislation.

TO HAVE COMMISSION.

QUEBEC, Feb. 25.— (Canadian Press.)— What with the spirit of compromise hovering about, and what with a significant suggestion from Premier Taschereau which carries weight, the result of the Church Union Bill now before the Legislature will be the same as that reached in Ontario.

The compromise was offered by the Unionists and was that a commission be named to deal with cases of hardship for minorities of congregations. The suggestion of The Premier's suggestion was not Presbyterian College be turned over to the Continuing Presbyterians. The Premier's suggestion was ont accepted by Aime Geoffrion, K.C., and E. H. Place, K.C., counsel for the Unionists, but they promised to consult their clients, while the Continuing Presbyterians, represented by Eugene Lafleur, K.C., and C. A. Campbell, K.C., did not promise to give way in their idea that the congregational property should be turned over only on a two-third vote.

UNITE OPPRESSED SAYS COMMUNIST

Must Be Motto of Party in America, He Tells Internationale.

MOSCOW, Feb. 25 (United Press)—Union of oppressed workers in North and South America must be the basic motto of the Communist party, John Pepper, American Communist, told the executive committee of Third Internationale today.

CONFERENCE ARRANGED.

Baldwin Hopes All Empire Premiers Will Attend in October.

LONDON, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press)—An imperial conference embracing matters of import to Canada and other parts of the British Empire has been arranged for October, Premier Baldwin announced in the House of Commons today.

"I hope all the Dominion Prime Ministers will be able to be present as well as a representative of India," he said.

Theatre

AT THE REGENT

"THE MIDSHIPMAN" IS ABOVE AVERAGE SCREENOEFERING.

Romance With Naval Academy Background Is Unusual and Interesting.

Something new in the way of motion picture entertainment made its appearance at the Regent Theatre to-day and stood out as prominently as a genuine vocal artist among a bunch of rank song pluggers.

The novelty of the U. S. Naval Academy as a background and locale of a photodrama remains undisputed. Not until the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company exerted the metnal initiative to seek it out, did it probably occur to others what an unexplored and fertile field they had passed by without notice.

The Navy Department's willingness to co-operate with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company is in itself indicative of a high respect for courage and forethought. Romance and adventure that had piled up for years in the form of Naval Academy history would have gone begging for interpretation in entertainment form. As it was, the pioneers were welcomed and the documentary evidence of what they have discovered is faithfully preserved in "The Midshipman."

QUEBEC TO KEEP HYDRO POWERS

Law Forbidding Export Introduced in Provincial Legislature.

PREMIER SPONSOR.

QUEBEC, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—The prohibition of hydro-electric power produced in this province will become effective from the passing of a bill sponsored by Premier L. A. Taschereau yesterday in the Legislature. According to the terms of the bill all future contracts must contain a clause of a prohabitive nature. The ban is also to be written into existing contracts and to their renewal. The terms of the bill are in line with Premier Taschereau's public utetrances and since he commands a huge majority in the Legislature passage of the bill is assured.

VILLAGE DESTROYED.

One Hundred and Fifty Inhabitants Take Refuge in Post Office.

MELBOURNE, Australia Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—Bush fires, which recently have done immense damage in Australia, have broken out again in the Queenstown district. King Lake Township has been destroyed except for the post office. One hundred and fifty men, women and children, took refuge in the post office and were rescued after being surrounded by flames for six hours.

HEARING POSTPONED.

Quebec Petition To Privy Council on Nipissing Railway To Be Heard April 20.

LONDON, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—The hearing of a petition for leave to appeal in the case of the Attorney-General of Quebec vs. Nipissing Central Railway Co. has been postponed until April 20, owing to the difficulty of getting the appeal lodged earlier.

The appeal is designed to settle the question of the Federal government's right to give the Nipissing Central Railway a charter to cross the Crown lands in the Province of Quebec in connection with the proposed T. and N. O. Railway extension into the Rouyn district.

TWO STORES BURNED.

Loss in Village Near Parry Sound.

PARRY SOUND, Feb. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—Two large general stores with their entire contents were destroyed and a house damaged in a fire in the village of McKellar, 15 miles north of here yesterday. The Parry Sound fire brigade were summoned but owing to the condition of the roads were unable to go. The stores were owned by John Agnst and R. Canning and the dwelling by Mrs. Fletcher. The loss has not yet been estimated.

MENNONITES MOVE.

150 in Party Going To Mexico.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Feb. 25.—(Canadian Press.) — A party of Mennonites from Wymark, Blomenhoff and McMahon, who are trekking to Mexico, left Moose Jaw early yesterday en route south. There were twenty-nine cars of settlers' effects and four colonist cars carrying the heads of the families with their wives and children. It is estimated that there were about 150 members in the party. It is the largest party of Mennonites to leave the province since November last when the C.P.R. took a party with 19 cars of effects and people.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

BETTY HAS A PEEK INTO A WONDER GROVE.

"Pshaw! Who ever heard of a bread tree?" Betty exclaimed, closing her book.

"I have," answered a tiny voice. Then Betty looked up to find Gocomeback, the wee travel elfin, sitting on her ink well. "But I guess, seeing is believing," he declared, "so come along."

Before Betty could ask where they were going, she was whisked out of her seat and carried through the air.

"Goodness! Gocomeback," she cried. "You do work fast. I hardly knew you were there until we started through the air. Where in the world are you taking me, anyway?"

"Right here," replied Gocomeback, a merry twinkle in his black eyes. "Right here in this wonder grove. I've heard you say you never saw a bread tree, so I'm going to show you one."

They began to descend and Betty's feet touched the ground under a big tree filled with large, glossy leaves.

"Where are we, anyway, Gocomeback?" Betty asked, glancing at the queer things hanging in the tree. "What are these things? They look like squashes, don't they?"

"Wait a second! One question at a time," the elfin laughed. "First, you are in the South Sea Islands. This is a bread tree and those squash-like things hanging up among the leaves are the fruit of the tree."

"This Is a Bread Tree."

Gocomeback pulled one of the queer loaves of bread and let Betty taste it.

"Well, it does taste something like bread, with sugar in it," declared Betty. "I think it's good."

"So do the natives," replied Gocomeback. "It is a fine tree and one well worth mentioning in the Wonder Grove. The natives eat the bread either raw or cooked. Sometimes they roast them in ashes, like you roast potatoes when on a picnic. It is one of their most important foods.

"Then, too, the bread trees are always filled with bread fruit. The timber is used for building boats and from the bark of the tree they make cloth. Now we must be going back to America. Don't forget what I've told you." Then before Betty knew it, she was back in her seat at school.

When it came her time to recite Betty had the best lesson in the room for she told all about the bread tree of the South Sea Islands.

TODAY'S HUMOR

NOT TO BE REPORTED.

Mrs. Woffer—I have just told yo a great secret. It was told to me in the strictest confidence, and I must caution you against repeating it.

Mrs. Snipper—I shall try to be just as cautious as you are.

EACH IN TURN.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Mark Twain, "I wish I had said that."

"Why don't you, Mark?" drawled Whitelaw Reid. "Choate did!"—Japan Advertiser.

NOT POSSIBLE.

First Actress—When I came on the stage the audience simply sat there, open-mouthed.

Second Actress—Oh, nonsense! They never all yawn at once.—Toronto Goblin.

TOO RISKY.

"If Edith imagines Jack is marrying her for her money, why doesn't she pretend she's lost it all?"

"She's afraid he might believe it."—Boston Transcript.

DEBATE ON ADDRESS TO END TO-MORROW

Division Had Been Expected To-night, But Now Doubtful.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press)—Prospects this morning are that the debate on the address will go over to tomorrow. Indications yesterday were that the division would take place tonight followed by adjournment but this now appears doubtful. The debate will be continued this afternoon by Peter McGibbon (Conservative, Muskoka, Ont.). Mr. McGibbon will be followed by H. A. Stewart (Conservative, Leeds) and T. L. Church (Conservative, Toronto North West.)

HOSPITALS ASK FOR MORE HELP

Wish To Charge $2.00 a Day For Indigent Patients.

COST IS $3.25 A DAY.

TORONTO, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press) — A deputation o about a hundred from the Ontario Hospital Association and representing all the hospitals in Ontario had a conference with Hon. Lincoln Goldie, Provincial Secretary, this morning and asked for greater hospital aid. Dr. John Ferguson, Toronto, asked that hospitals be allowed to charge municipalities $2 per day instead of $1.50 for patients unable to pay their own costs. He said that the daily cost per patient in all hospitals was now $3.27.
Dr. F. W. Routley, Toronto, said that 90 per cent o the people who paid their way in hospitals were from ordinary homes and were people with ordinary incomes. From these people came the necessary funds to allow treatment for the few who could not pay themselves. "We do not believe that such assistance should come out of the pockets of ordinary paying patients" he said.
Major A. H. Murphy, of London, urged that the Government amend the present act to allow, in bona fide cases, an extension of the 120 days' treatment now afforded by the Government for indigent patients.
An increase in per diem allowance from 50 cents to 65 cents per patient was also requested by the deputation.
Replying to the deputation, Mr. Goldie stated that he would be pleased to take the requests under consideration. He said the suggestions were the same as those of last year and that they would have cost the province an additional $5,565,000 a year. "I did not feel warranted in making such an additional expenditure last year," stated Mr. Goldie. "But I will be willing to take the matter up with your legislative committee this year."
The Minister will meet the Legislative committee of the deputation this afternoon to see if some new legislation can be worked out along the lines suggested.

PRIZES AT BROCK STREET NEXT WEEK

First Evening's Prize For Young Ladies Will Be Handsome Clock.

On each skating night, outside of Saturdays, commencing next week, Brock Street Rink will offer a prize, one evening for the young ladies, one evening for the gentlemen skaters, after the manner in which they were given two winters ago.
The first prize to be given is a French Ivory Clock, and a ticket is given with each lady's skating ticket the winning number taking the prize.
There will not be very many more skating nights and there should be a big crowd on hand to-morrow night. Watch for further announcement.

GILBERT COMMITTED ON THREE CHARGES

Three Millbrook Citizens Swear Peterboro Man Obtained $300 By Threatening K.K.K. Exposure

Preliminary Hearing Held in Camera and Names of Alleged Victims Kept Secret — Gilbert Said to Have Reported Press Afraid of Klan.

MR. "B" SAYS HE GAVE UP $200 ON DEMAND AND THEN SIGNED APPLICATION FOR KLAN

Witness Declares Accused Told Him Money Had Been Sent to Klan Headquarters in Toronto—Mr. "A" Asked for $500, Gets Off With $35.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

MILLBROOK, Ont., Feb. 26.—Harold Gilbert, 34, of 226 Rubidge Street, Peterborough, was yesterday evening committed for trial on three charges of blackmail, one of the alleged crimes having been perpetrated in December last, when it is said he was organizer in this district for the Ku Klux Klan of the British Empire, and the other two early this year. Magistrate W. H. Floyd, who presided at the preliminary hearing, acceded to the request of Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, K.C., of Cobourg, that in the interests of public morals the public be excluded from the court, only press representatives being allowed to remain. Fifty or sixty people were turned away, although the fact of the trial being held yesterday was kept very quiet, and not many people in the village knew what was transpiring. The accused elected speedy trial before a judge. He is defended by Joseph Wearing of Peterborough, who, however, did not appear yesterday.

Three men are said to have been defrauded by Gilbert through his representations that he would have the Ku Klux Klan expose affairs they had with women if they did not pay the sums demanded. The unfortunate victims, though knowing the charges to be false, were, they say, forced into acceding to Gilbert's demands because of their desire to protect others from the shame of even a false accusation. Gilbert, one of the witnesses said declared that he controlled the press through threats, and the papers in this district would "be compelled" to publish the stories about these prominent Millbrook citizens if the Klan so ordered. He also said that "Billy" Nickle (W. F. Nickle, K.C., Attorney General of Ontario is behind the Klan, and that even Premier Mackenzie King is a supporter one of the witnesses told Magistrate Floyd.

After mulcting a leading citizen of $200, Gilbert returned and compelled his victim to join the Klan, evidence presented yesterday stated.

Secrecy Maintained.

One of the features of the case is the success attained in guarding the names of the three unfortunate victime. Although it is more than a week since Gilbert was arrested, and nearly a month since he was read out of the Klan at a meeting in the W.O.W. Hall in Peterborough, very few people in Millbrook know the names of the complainants. On Thursday last, Provincial Constable N. F. Maker of Peterborough came in on the noon train and interviewed the three men without citizens knowing the purpose of his visit, or with whom he had business. Many thought he was following up a liquor clue.

On Friday, an Examiner reporter interviewed Klan members, private citizens and business men of all classes before running the story to earth. And yesterday morning no one outside the small number interested appeared to know that the trial was pending.

It is probable that when the case comes to trial, the same policy of excluding the public will be followed.

Serious Charge.

The charge, which is defined by the Criminal Code of Canada as extortion by threatening to publish defamatory libel, is a serious one, entailing in case of conviction a possible imprisonment of two years and a fine.

Wanted $500—Took $35.

Mr. A. first witness called, one of the complainants, said he is a resident of Millbrook, and that he had known the defendant for a month or six weeks. A branch of the Ku Klux Klan was in process of organization when he met Gilbert, and the witness agreed to join.

Gilbert and a young Peterborough lady called at his house, an Gilbert said he had been investigating a case. The witness could not remember just what the accused had said at that time, but recollected his saying "it" would cost witness $500 if he did not settle.

Witness: I said 'I am a poor man; I don't understand this.'

"Gilbert then said that he and the lady called at his house and Gilbert me off for $35, and that they would OK it. They said they would not publish it in the papers if I paid the $35. He said that he would publish things about my girl going places I did not like, and again demanded $35.

I said I did not understand this, and asked him if he could wait a while, as I had not the money. Gilbert said 'Can't you get it?' I told him I did not know. Gilbert then said 'If you get it, leave it at Mr. X's in an envelope.' I went and borrowed the $35 and came down to Mr. X's office. Mr. X was not there when I arrived. I enquired after Gilbert and was referred to Mr. Y's, the next door west. Gilbert was there, and came out to the door, where I gave him the money."

To Save His Sons.

Mr. B, the second witness, said he had seen the accused once, about February 4. "He came to my house about 9 o'clock in the morning, asked me what I did for a living, and if I owed anything in Millbrook. I said 'Yes, a little.' Gilbert asked 'Whom do you owe?' I told him several people. Gilbert said 'Take my advice and pay everything you owe.' I then told him that I paid everything that I owed.

Gilbert said: 'Are you aware that there is a criminal case against you?' I said no. Gilbert told me it was in connection with a girl down east, but he mentioned no names. I told him it was a lie, and that he had no proof of anything like that. Gilbert said he could settle it. 'You are an old man and I am going to let you off light, but unless I get $60 from you before the noon train goes out you will be arrested and taken to the police court. Even if you are innocent this thing will be tried and published in the papers.' I told him I would not want that, for the boys' sakes. I told him I had not $60. He said 'can you get it?' I replied that I did not know."

The Lady Again.

"The lady who was with him and he got up to go", Mr. B. continued. "Gilbert then said 'You would not want this thing to be published?' I said of course I wouldn't. Gilbert said 'Unless I get that sixty dollars before that train goes out it will be published and you will be arrested and tried.' I then went down town with him. I met a friend and

NOW, HONESTLY—

Success is just twice as far as the half way mark.

Hence, when you do things only half way, you'll never get to the top of whatever you're aiming at.

Folk have a queer idea about saving time by doing things in a hurry—and calling them finished when they're still lacking in actual completeness.

Maybe you do save time—but you lose the opportunity to feel secure in the fact that you've done the very best you can.

Sometimes you save time when you take your time. Try it!

KIWANIS HEAR OF GIFTS BY MRS. NICHOLLS

John Crane Tells Splendid Work Done at Nicholls Hospital.

CITY INDEBTED.

Protestant Home Well Managed and Fills Big Need For Aged.

"If there is an institution in Peterborough to which you might well give your support and sympathy, it is the Protestant Home."

Thus Rotarian John Crane, manager of the local branch of the Dominion Bank, opened his address on Peterborough institutions at the Kiwanis Club luncheon to-day. It was one of the most interesting talks on local subjects given before the Kiwanians, and the appreciation of the members was well voiced by Joseph John and Frank Stinson in moving the vote of thanks.

To-day was, in fact, a day of stellar entertainment. Charles Phillips of Montreal, the guest of John Marshall, recited two catching French-Canadian poems that brought down the house, and an alleged quartette, departing from the usual in having seven members, put on a series of noises. The members are: J. Wells Fraser, Frank Stinson, George Henderson, C. Brown, Art. Blade, Lloyd Hamilton and Hugh Niven, and they were aided and abetted by Martin Chenhall, who played the piano.

The booster of the day was Isaac McNabb, who pointed out the advantages of life insurance. The prize winners were Cecil Cragg, Jack McNabb and Tom Marks. Dr. Murray Fraser was the guest of Ray Scott.

The flower fund having languished under the too-benevolent rule of President John J. Craig, Jack McKone was boosted into the chair for the day and threw orders to pay up right and left.

Peterborough Institutions

The Protestant Home was organized in 1862, Mr. Crane said, in a house on Aylmer street given by Harry Morrow. The work was sponsored by Mrs. E. H. R. Hall and Mrs. James Walsh. On the work expanding, the home was moved to a buildingon on Stewart street, north of Brock, given by Sir Sanford Fleming, and in 1911 the present splendid building was taken over. Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls gave the Home $20,000 and the City provided $10,000. There is representation on the Board from all Protestant Churches.

Two-thirds of the accommodation is reserved for persons sent by the city at the rate of $3.50 a week, and the remaining third is available

PEOPLE LUCKY TO GET SERVICE SAYS MANAGER

Water and Sleet Coated the Rails, Delaying the Street Cars.

NO ACCIDENTS.

Buses Had To Run Slowly Because of Greasy Streets.

"I don't care what they say about the service yesterday," said J. O. Clifford, manager of the local street railway system, this morning when questioned on the matter.

"The people were lucky to get any service at all on a day like yesterday. If the city was to keep the water off the streets it might do a lot to help out but we were troubled all day with ice on the rails. When there was no water to freeze there was sleet so that practically all the rails were heavily coated."

Mr. Clifford stated that because of the condition of the rails the street cars could not operate on schedule and later when the rain began to descend the cars were held up because of the greasy and deeply rutted nature of the streets. Nor could greater speed be attained without endangering the lives of passengers.

"Even while conditions may have seemed bad here," he resumed, "they were as nothing compared to the scenes on Toronto streets or in fact any other municipality similarly affected. One bus in Toronto upset with disastrous consequences and there is not one single record of an accident from our day's operation."

In addition to the abnormal weather conditions Mr. Clifford said that the number of passengers demanding accommodation overtaxed the limits of the available facilities and made travel doubly hazardous.

"I am making no excuses for the system nor for the men who performed a noble work yesterday. Today many of them are busy putting salt on the rails in an effort to cut away the ice. The rutty streets however are the greatest menace to safety because when a heavy vehicle gets in one of the ruts it is difficult to get out again and there is the added danger of a serious side swipe or skid."

HAMILTON FIRE COST $250,000

Two Buildings Damaged and Several Firms Lose Goods.

CAUSE MYSTERY.

HAMILTON, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—Firemen battled for five hours this morning with a blaze which caused damage of $250,000 to two buildings on Ferguson Avenue North, one owned by James Dixon and occupied by several firms, the other occupied by James E. Riddell and Sons, sheet metal workers. The cause is a complete mystery. The fire broke out in the Dixon Block and quickly spread to the adjoining building. So far as can be learned, no one was in either building at the time, as workmen had not yet arrived for the day. When the firemen arrived, flames were shooting 50 feet above the buildings. A general alarm was sounded.

The chief loss was sustained by the Dominion Rubber Systems, an occupant of the Dixon Block. Damage to this firm's valuable stock and equipment totalled $100 000. Other heavy losers were the Hamilton Electro-Plating Co., Howard and Gardner, manufacturing jewellers, and the F. Chadwick Co. The Riddell Company's loss was $40,000.

Red Hot Wire In Barrel of Rifle Wounded the Owner

LINDSAY, Feb. 26.— Mr. Harry Whitney, of Tory Hill, Haliburton County, is in the Ross Hospital here with a badly torn left hand, the injuries being sustained when his rifle exploded. He was endeavoring to remove a bullet which had become lodged in the barrel. He was holding the rifle in his left hand, and when he inserted a red hot wire into the barrel an explosion followed. The barrel exploded at the exact location of the hand. He was first taken to the Red Cross Outpost at Wilberforce, and later removed to Lindsay.

Nude Chorus Girl In Bath Tub Filled With Wine At Dinner To Countess Is Called Publicity Stunt

NEW YORK Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—Reports published in this city that at a party given by Earl Carroll, who has engaged the Countess of Cathcart for a leading part in her own play, a nude chorus girl made an appearance in a bath tub filled with wine, has resulted in the Countess becoming the centre of a new tangle. The Countess Vera is said to have been a guest at the party together with a number of well-known artists and literary people, including Harry K. Thaw, and because they believe the affair was another piece of advance publicity so that her name would be a big box office attraction, the motion picture theatre owners of America have decided to do everything possible to bar her pictures from appearing on their screens.

They have been assured the support of the American motion picture advertisers.

Lady Cathcart, whose detention at Ellis Island resulted in a still unfinished battle over what constitutes "moral turpitude," is reported to have been the guest of honor. Carroll denies the report of the wine, declaring the tub was filled with ginger ale and no girl got in it. Federal and police officials refuse to discuss the party.

RIGHT TO NAME ELEVATOR CAUSE OF MUCH DEBATE

Farmer's Privilege To Say Where Wheat is Shipped Talked Over.

DEBATE ADJOURNED.

Resumed Today, Fourth of Session Canadian Council of Agriculture.

REGINA, Sask., Feb. 26 (Canadian Press)—The right of the farmer to designate the terminal elevator to which his wheat shall be shipped was the most important issue before the Canadian Council of Agriculture yesterday, the third day of its annual session. No conclusion was reached at the time of adjournment and the debate will be resumed today.

The council decided to ask parliament to enact legislation under penalty requiring that all textiles offered for sale in Canada be plainly described as to the nature of the texture of the fibres therein and the relative quantities and quality At the request of the United Farmers of Ontario the Council decided to ask that provision be made whereby young prisoners between the ages of 16 and 21 years shall not come into contact with habitual offenders and professional criminals."

The council endorsed a request from the women's section of the United Farms of Alberta for legislation "to eliminate inequalities between men and women in the matter of domicile, homestead and personal naturalization. The council went on record as favoring Dominion-wide standards for the grading of poultry but a resolution dealing with duties on eggs was tabled.

LACOSTE BEATS TILDEN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Rene Lacoste, young French tennis ace, scored a sensational victory over William T. Tilden, the outdoor United States champion, yesterday in straight sets, 6-4, 8-6, 6-3, in the opening match of the Franco-United States team contest.

SUCCEEDS DUNNING.

HON. J. G. GARDINER,
Minister of Highways in Saskatchewan, who was chosen Premier at a convention of the Liberal party held yesterday.

AND IN THE MEANTIME.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—Feeling that they had never had such a good time in their lives, delighted at the reception they had received in Ottawa from everyone, and having enjoyed to the fullest extent the wonderful winter sports at the Canadian capital, Earl and Countess Craven, noble paid much in the limelight because of the exclusion from the United States of Countess Cathcart, with whom the Earl of Craven eloped somewhat sensationally to South Africa five years ago, are leaving for Halifax, there to embark for Bermuda on one of the C.G.M.M. boats.

During her stay in the Capital, Countess Craven journeyed to the ski-ing hills along with thousands of Ottawa enthusiasts and expressed pleasure at the facilities offered in the city for this sport.

The Earl of Craven, of course, with his artificial leg, was not able to take part in the ski-ing or other sports, but he was an enthusiastic onlooker, enjoying immensely the hockey games he witnessed.

During their week in the city they have been the guests of Col. and Mrs. E. R. McNeill and of other former officers of the 38th Battalion, with which the Earl served some months as a subaltern in Bermuda.

They did not visit Rideau Hall during their stay, their visit being purely informal.

While they were in Ottawa they were visited by Captain the Hon. Stephen Craven, a cousin of the Earl's, who has resided in Toronto for the past year.

Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., had the pleasure of meeting Lord and Lady Craven, and found them very interesting and sociable. Lord Craven enquired about business conditions in Peterborough, and generally showed himself extremely well acquainted with Canada and activities here.

ELEVEN KILLED IN WIND STORM

Scores Injured and Heavy Damage Done in Central States.

TOWN DESTROYED.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—Eleven are dead and scores injured as the result of a high windstorm in the Middle West. The winds struck the central part of the country yesterday, accompanied by heavy rains and snow, at a velocity of sixty miles an hour, causing incalculable property loss. Buildings were destroyed, streets flooded, telephone and telegraph lines damaged, and traffic delayed.

Four white persons and a negro were killed in Chico County, Arkansas, but only one death is reported, although practically the entire town of Tisdale, Mississippi, was demolished.

96 Year Old Man In Court For First Drink In Life

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (United Press). — Joseph Steinberg "never drank a drop" throughout his 96 years until yesterday, and his liquor debut got him into trouble with the police.

"How did you happen to break the drought," questioned Magistrate Weil.

"It's all this prohibition talk, Your Honor," said Steinberg. "With all sorts of people screaming prohibition, I just naturally rebelled."

The appreciative Magistrate suspended sentence.

POLICY NEITHER WET NOR DRY AT PRESENT TIME; STATEMENT OF COL. T. D. JOHNSTON, M.P.P.

POLICY NOT DECIDED.

COL. T. D. JOHNSTON, M.P.P.
Whose constituency of East Peterborough voted dry at the last plebiscite.

Member For East Peterboro' Doesn't Know Stand of Constituency.

SOME OPINIONS.

Prominent Conservatives in Surrounding District Give Their Views.

TORONTO, Feb. 26 (Special to The Examiner).—"I can't say that I am either wet or dry on my policy at the present moment," stated Col. T. D. Johnston, member for East Peterborough, when asked as to his attitude on prohibition to-day. His constituency voted dry by 2,604 at the time of the plebiscite. "Could a Conservative candidate carry East Peterborough on the Government control issue?" he was asked. "I couldn't tell you that until the night after the election," replied Colonel Johnston. "A lot of water may run under the bridge before another Provincial election. No one knows what may happen in the mean time."

"Were your election expenses paid out of the Central Conservative Campaign Fund?" "I should say not," replied the East Peterborough member. "They were paid out of my account at the Royal Bank at Peterborough, and for some of the money which met my campaign expenses I am still paying eight per cent. I have not got it all paid back to the bank yet," he added laughingly.

"OF LITTLE VALUE."

MILLBROOK, Feb. 26 (Special Despatch to The Examiner).—Asked his opinion regarding the liquor situation, Dr. H. A. Turner states his belief that the present liquor law is of little value as an effective hindrance to the consumption of alcohol.

That a quantity of liquor is brought in locally for illegal consumption he believes is proved by the fact that empty bottles are frequently found in the yard at the rear of his drug store after Saturday night. Whether conditions would be bettered by the substitution of Government control, he thinks hinges on the question whether this would bring about a reduction in the number of bootleggers. The suggestion of having Government control in the ridings which voted wet at the last plebiscite would not solve the difficulty, as this would permit plenty of booze being brought from these towns to adjacent dry territory.

Dr. Turner does not regard with favor the position in which his profession is placed under the O.T.A. as "official bartenders for the province." His determination from the beginning to refuse a scrip unless absolutely necessary, is well-known, and after a few refusals in the early days he is not now asked for such permits unless there is actual need.

Dr. Turner has no knowledge of any drinking among the girls of the community but has reason to believe that home brew is made in considerable quantities. Altogether he regards the present situation as decidedly unsatisfactory.

Rev. Canon Allen says: "I believe that Ontario will soon follow the majority of the provinces of Canada by making Government control the law. This, I believe, to be the best system capable of legal enactment."

L. H. Winslow, past president of the Conservative Association, states that he is strongly in sympathy with anything that will promote tem-

CONTINUE PROBE INTO HANDLING OF SEIZED CARS

Committee of House Hears of Transfer of Parts of Cars.

FOR INSPECTOR.

Garagemen Say Parts Were Used on Car Owned By Bisaillon.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—Inquiry into the handling of autos seized by the Customs officers in the Port of Montreal was continued at the Customs probe to-day. The manager and accountant of the Central Garage in Montreal, where most of the seized cars are stored pending disposal, testified that they had transferred parts from a "dismantled car," to one owned by J. E. A. Bisaillon, former chief inspector of the port. The much-talked-of door, transferred from a stolen car to one used by a preventive officer, came up again, but the garage men could not remember whose car it was that benefited, and Germain Parrot, the manager, again denied that he told Inspector Walter Duncan that it was Bisaillon who instructed him to make the transfer, although he is quoted in sworn evidence as having said so.

There was much cross-questioning to discover what officers of the Montreal Customs port used seized cars and how they paid for storage and repairs to their own cars.

Hon. G. H. Boivin, Minister of Customs, read an anonymous letter threatening him that if his attitude remained "hostile," the writer, claiming to be a Customs officer, would reveal what he knew of "boozing, bumming, bootlegging and smuggling" in the Department itself, with the connivance of the chiefs. Mr. Boivin commented that he did not know whether it was a threat or a promise. Hon. H. H. Stevens said he got letters like that every day.

EARNINGS OF C.N.R. ARE MUCH HIGHER

Net Increase of $15,000,000 Last Year in Report.

MONTREAL, Feb. 26. — Final figures showing the complete statement of operating results during 1925 were announced Thursday by the Canadian National Railways. These figures show that the net earnings of the system during last year were $32,264,414.79, as compared with $17,244,251.48 in 1925, or a net increase of $15,020,136.31.

DEBATE ON ADDRESS CONTINUED BY MEMBERS OF THE OPPOSITION

F. S. Cahill Only Liberal To Take Part in Yesterday's Debate.

GIVE LINE AWAY.

Two Speakers Favor Handing H. B. Railway Over to Prarie Provinces.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26. — (Canadian Press).—The debate on the address continued throughout another day in the House of Commons. From the Conservative side criticism of the Government was voiced by several speakers. Only one Government supporter, F. S. Cahill, member for Pontiac, contributed to the debate, and his brief speech was devoted to a defence of the Rouyn railway project. Two Conservative speakers, P. McGibbon of Muskoka, and H. A. Stewart, of Leeds, advocated turning over the Hudson Bay Railway to the Western provinces for completion. The former said that the Dominion would probably be better off in the long run if it presented the road to the Prairie Provinces, together with a gift of three or four million dollars for its completion. The latter suggested the fomation of a company to be controlled by the interested provinces and to which the road would be presented. This company could complete the railway, operate it and enjoy whatever profits it produced.

Later T. L. Church, Conservative member for North-West Toronto, referred to the diversion of water by the Chicago Sanitary District. He advocated sending a bill to the United States amounting to $35,000,000 a year for the past five years as a reparation for damage resulting from the diversion.

Maritime rights were discussed by Finlay MacDonald, Conservative, Cape Breton South, who declared against the appointment of a commission as suggested by the Government.

The debate will be continued by G. T. MacNutt, Conservative, Colchester.

Any Old Time Of Year Is Excursion Time In Cobourg; Happy Party From Roches ter Spends Holiday In Town

COBOURG, Feb. 26.—It is early yet in the year to talk of excursions, but these things are all the year around occurrences in Cobourg, where there is an open harbor and two steamers coming in daily. On Monday, about one hundred and twenty-five members of the Rochester Yacht Club came over to Cobourg by Steamer Ontario, arriving in the early afternoon. Accompanied by the Mayor of Rochester, they congregated at Mayor McArthur's furniture store, where they promptly arranged an infomal programme. They were accompanied by a song leader and a jazz band. Mayor McArthur, in a brief speech, welcomed them to Cobourg and extended to them the freedom of the town. His kindly words of greeting were endorsed by F. M. Field, K.C., Town Solicitor, and Deputy-Reeve W. J. Maher, both of whom spoke briefly. The Mayor of Rochester responded in felicitous words. Songs and community singing helped to cement the bond of good fellowship, and after a short time in sight-seeing, the excursionists returned to the boat, which shortly afterward threaded her way 'neath snow-laden clouds, across the blue waters of Lake Ontario, on the return trip to Rochester.

BENSFORT LEAGUE VISITS BAILIEBORO

Guests at Social Evening in Bateson's Hall.

BAILIEBORO, Feb. 26 — The Bailieboro Young People's Epworth League, gave a reception to the Young People's League of Bensfort in Bateson's hall on Tuesday evening.

The young folks from Bensfort put on a splendid entertainment at the beginning of the program, and at the conclusion the Bailieboro young folks conducted several interesting contests. At the conclusion the home league served a dainty luncheon to the gathering.

After an introductory address by the President, Fred Barnard, the meeting was given over entirely to the visiting league.

The President of the young people's league from Bensfort, Miss Fern Telford, presided over the meeting and made a brief opening address, and during the devotional exercises, the scripture reading was taken by Miss Florence Curtis. Miss Lottie Perrin then gave an excellent reading. A vocal duet was splendidly rendered by Misses Marjory Emberson and Fern Telford. The subject was then taken by Miss Ruby McAllister, the subject was "God's Way with the Soul," taken from "Silas Mariner." It was very interesting and altogether the program was immensely enjoyed by the home league.

The contests were then presided over by Rev. W. H. Foley. The first was a hand shaking contest which caused plenty of amusement for everyone. Everyone had to shake hands with everyone present, and Miss Emberson was the party winning the lucky number. The second contest was in the form of an examination on questions dealing principally with the Bible. The audience was divided into groups of four, and the group who had the greatest amount of questions answered won the contest. Mrs. Foley, Mrs. Heaslip, Roland Johnston, Arthur Andrews were successful in coming out ahead.

At the conclusion of the luncheon everyone crossed their hands and sang "Blest be the tie that binds."

Miss Kathleen Dawson has accepted the position as night supervisor in a hospital in Detroit.

Rufus Jewson is home from the west visiting friends in this district.

Miss Charlotte Barnard of Ross Memorial hospital, Lindsay, is spending a couple of weeks' holidays the guest of her parents.

"BRINGING UP FATHER" — Geo. McManus

The YELLOW STUB

by Ernest Lynn

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the stub of a yellow theater ticket.

JIMMY RAND, his son, goes to Chicago, where the theater is. The stub is traced to THOMAS FOGARTY, who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints when she learns police want her for murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lifting Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the handkerchief and stub might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder. Jimmy receives several mysterious warnings to leave Chicago, but ignores them. Later he is attacked at night by two men, but escapes.

With Jimmy and Mary estranged, Church presses his advantage and gets Mary's promise to marry him. Mary tells Jimmy this when they meet. Jimmy, trying to hurt her, accuses her of marrying for money.

That evening, with Olga, he sees the man they are looking for—the man who is supposed to have got the ticket stub—in an automobile. It is one of the men who had attacked Jimmy. They follow the car, but the man and his companion escape. Later they recognize his picture in the Bertillon records as that of IKE JENSON.

That same night Jimmy goes home to his room to find another warning letter.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Jimmy, studying the letter, frowned. It was written in the same large, scrawly hand as the first one.

"This is your last chance," it said. "Either leave town in three days or they'll be carrying you out in a pine box."

He shrugged his shoulders, laughing. "Persistent cuss, whoever it is." Rising from his chair, he peeled off his coat and vest, lit a cigaret and threw himself down on the bed to smoke and reflect.

"It couldn't very well have been this Ike Jensen or the man who was with him tonight," he said. "Unless, of course, they brought it or sent it here early in the evening. Who was it? Who is it that's writing this stuff?"

He jumped up from the bed and extinguished his cigaret. "And how in the devil did the darned thing get there? No stamp on it or anything. It's spooky—actually spooky. I'll have to ask Mrs. King about it in the morning."

He turned out the light and hopped into bed.

Mrs. King was in the kitchen when he came downstairs—it was just a little past six-thirty—and he thought, "What a hard working woman she is. Gets up with the birds and works till all hours at night. I wonder when she finds time to sleep."

"Good morning, Mrs. King," he said. "I found a letter in my room last night. How did it get there—do you know? It didn't come through the mail."

"Why, yes." She turned from the gas range and out of habit thrust her hands in her apron pocket. 'A boy brought it shortly after you went out last evening."

"A boy, eh?" This was quite unexpected.

"Yes, a little fellow of perhaps ten or eleven."

"Did you ask him who sent it?"

"Why, no. I didn't consider it any of my business, who sent you letters. All he said was that a man gave it to him to deliver. Don't you know who it was from?" Again that eager curiosity on her part.

"No, I don't, Mrs. King. I'm puzzled about it. It's an anonymous letter from someone who seems intent on having me leave town. It's the second one I've found in my room. You remember that evening I came home and you told me you thought you had heard me moving around in my room upstairs?"

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, I found one that night. I think you probably did hear someone up there, but it was the man who left that note. I bumped into someone coming out the gate as I came in."

"Why, Mr. Rand! Don't tell me that! What does it mean?"

"I don't know what it means, Mrs. King. Perhaps you won't feel comfortable if I continue to stay here. I'll move out if you are afraid."

"Oh, I wouldn't think of asking you to move, Mr. Rand. It's so pleasant to have you here. You're no trouble and you're so neat and clean—not sloppy like so many roomers." She sighed. "I'm not afraid, Mr. Rand. There's a policeman around all the time now. I'm only afraid you'll run into some trouble some time while you're out."

His jaw set grimly. "I'll try to take care of myself. I just don't want to be a worry and a bother to you. About this boy who brought the note. What did he look like? Had you ever seen him before around the neighborhood?"

"No, I hadn't."

"And you say he came shortly after I left last evening?"

"It wasn't more than five minutes."

"It looks as if somebody had been keeping his eye on the house and waiting for me to leave. He waited until I had gone, so I couldn't question the boy about who had given him the letter."

"If I had suspected anything wrong, Mr. Rand, I'd have asked him myself. But goodness knows I didn't even give it a thought."

Arrived at the laundry office, he found that the man named Porter had left word with the delivery clerk that a new driver would report. The clerk, in shirt sleeves and vest, a pencil stuck behind his ear, asked a few questions and issued some brief instructions.

"Your main job is to deliver these packages of laundry and collect new batches to be washed. A smart fellow, however, goes a little beyond his job and tries to drum up new trade. Our drivers are our best means of selling this company to the people. They're the only ones who get the personal contacts outside.

"Now you look like a pretty bright fellow." Jimmy smiled, and the man continued. "Mr. Porter said he thought you had taken this job because you needed work and that you might quit as soon as you found something better. I want to tell you right now that this is no blind alley job. A man who's on his toes all the time and who gets us new business will find advancement waiting for him. Besides, there's a commission offered for new regular customers. This is a young concern and there's room for brains. That's just a friendly tip. Now get out and see how it goes.

"Here's your route." He handed Jimmy a sheaf of papers. "Know the city?"

"Fairly well."

"Well, I've taken the trouble to lay out your route for you so you can cover it in the least time. Good luck."

"Thanks." Jimmy offered his hand, and the shirt-sleeved man shook it.

"Looks like a pretty bright guy," remarked the clerk to a fellow worker as Jimmy climbed into the truck. "No foolish questions, like some of the dumbbells that come in here. A lot of these morons that claim to be truck drivers can't be trusted to wheel a baby carriage, much less run an automobile."

"What a world!" remarked Jimmy, and laughed. He had driven out of the delivery barn and was actually launched upon his newest—and rarest—job.

He wondered what his mother and Janet would think if they could see him, wondered what Barry Colvin would think—and Mary. Somehow no matter what course his thoughts took they invariably ended up with Mary Lowell.

"I was a fool," he said aloud, "to talk to her like that. If I had only unbent a little and explained what this whole thing was about, she'd have understood. One little word from me and it would have been different." He cursed himself for owning a temper that made him say things he didn't mean.

The events of the night before flashed through his mind. There was still a slight bump and discoloration on his temple where he had been struck down. The recollection of Olga standing in her doorway and asking him if he was coming back came to him and aggravated his mind.

He was threading his way through the morning rush hour traffic now and it was necessary to give his undivided attention to his driving. "No time for wool gathering," he muttered as a traffic policeman halted him with a turn of his semaphore.

Following the directions laid down in the route handed him by the shirt-sleeved clerk, he turned off the main thoroughfare at the stree he had been looking for and soon found himself in a neat and well-kept residential neighborhood.

"Well, do your stuff, Rand," he laughed as he brought the delivery truck to a stop. "Let's see." He glanced again at his little sheaf of papers. "Smith—that's right."

He searched through his bundles, found the right one and started up the driveway to the back door. It suddenly occured to him that this new job of his, laughable as it had seemed at first, might not be a bad thing.

"If I'm looking for Mr. Jensen," he said, "I'll surely have more chance of running into him if I'm driving around town all the time than if I were working inside some office."

The problem of finding Jensen, he thought, might be a matter of pure luck. This job of his would take him into odd places and a fellow could always keep his eyes open. . . . He mounted the back porch and knocked at the door.

It was opened by a little woman with black hair. A curly-headed boy of perhaps two and a half years tugged at her dress; another and younger baby sat in a high chair, eating cereal.

"Laundry, ma'am," he said, offering the bundle. "Three dollars and a quarter."

"Oh yes. Wait a minute and I'll get the money. Won't you come in?"

"What's your name, little man?" he asked the boy as the woman went into another room.

"Harry."

"Harry? That's a nice name. Harry what?"

"Harry Smiff."

"Well, that's just fine. You're a regular little man, aren't you?"

"No, Harry big man like Daddy."

Harry's mother laughed as she handed over the money to Jimmy. "Ma'ma pay the man," observed Harry.

"That's right, Harry. You ask Ma'ma if she has any laundry she wants to send back."

She laughed. "If you can wait while I gather it together. I don't like to keep you waiting."

"Glad to wait. No trouble."

While she gathered up the clothes Harry delighted his new visitor by reciting "Ittle Boy Boo, tum b'ow you horn." Jimmy was vastly entertained and received a grave handshake and an invitation to come again when he told Harry goodby.

The job, he thought, had started out auspicously. If many of his calls were as pleasant as this, it was going to be interesting. . . .

Time sped swiftly. He covered his route and went back to the laundry, where he received a compliment from the shirt-sleeved clerk and was started out on another trip.

Five o'clock in the afternoon found him driving back again to the plant, his day's work done. Traffic again was heavy, the homeward flow of the workers of Chicago. He stopped at an intersection. A large roadster, headed in the direction opposite to his, attracted his attention by its handsome, racy lines.

He gave a sudden start. It was Samuel Church at the wheel, and Church was looking at him, his lips curled in a sneering smile. Traffic started again, and Church turned to his companion. It was then that Jimmy saw it was Mary with him, and she was facing him directly, but looking through him—not at him.

toms office, said when Bisaillon had told him a second and a third time to alter his handwriting while signing this kind of document he spoke to Mr. W. G. Hickling about it, and his chief had said "never do that again." He had not signed any since, he said. When asked if he did not sign another in the following October, he said that he could not swear as to that. He thought "Leivovitch" was one name he had signed. He had finally asked to be transferred to another office and his request had been granted. He had not mentioned the signing of other people's names to anybody at the time except Hickling. Subsequently Inspector Walter Duncan had compelled him to discuss it.

Germain Parrot, manager of the Central Garage, Montreal, was the next witness. He said, he could not remember seeing a Morris Delage during the time the car was in his garage. He knew of no one of that name.

There was a good deal of mystery in the cross- examination over the repairs to a car used by Bisaillon. He admitted that parts had been transferred from seized cars stored in his garage to a car used by Bisaillon. These parts were worth about $150. He could not remember.

C. G. Blair, chief executive assistant of the department of customs and excise, was the first witness called.

Mr. Blair, who was the legal authority of the department, was queried as to the routine procedure with reference to automobile seizures.

Sold at Auction

Mr. Blair explained at some length the method by which seizures were made. After an automobile had been seized it was held in an accredited garage until the decision of the minister had been reached as to its disposal. Sometimes a car might be released after forfeiture on payment of the duty paid value.

"While a car is being held," asked Mr. Calder, "is it open to the seizing officer to have it repaired and repainted?" "He would have to refer to the department before doing it," replied the witness.

"If a car is declared forfeited what then?" "It is held for 30 days and then sold at public auction."

"Is it open to the seizing officer to sell back the car to its owner or to anyone else without auction?"

"Not without instructions."

"Has it hapepned that a forfeited car has been exchanged for some other car previously owned by the department?" "That has been reported to us but not established. It should not be done without the minister's orders."

"Is it incumbent on the seizing officer to ascertain who is the real owner of a car?" "Yes, under the treaty, if we know that a car is stolen from the United States we don't dispose of it. Invariably steps are taken to locate the owner."

Mr. Calder: "Have any complaints been made that cars stolen in the United States or Canada had acquired title through the customs seizure?"

Mr. Blair: "We have sold cars which we found later had been stolen."

"When a stolen car is seized what do you do?" "We ask the owner to get a relinquishment from the man we seized it from. We could forfeit the car and that would preclose the case."

"After forfeiture what redress would the owner have in respect to a stolen car?" "If he established his ownership without collusion the car would be returned on payment of the expenses."

BLANK Cheque for $5,000,000.

MR. G. B. NICHOLSON (East Algoma) [discussing the Rouyn railway].....It is simply a case of the Canadian Government giving a blank cheque for $5,000,000 to a dummy company.....

They SEEM To Differ.

HON. J. A. ROBB: "I have never found in the seventeen odd years that I have been in Parliament that lawyers can agree amongst themselves."

Interview the Birds.

MR. E. J. GOTT (South Essex) [discussing the tariff].

I have the honour of representing Jack Miner, the leading bird naturalist of the world—also Jack Miner's birds. Jack Miner is a good Christian soul, kind hearted and with a very charitable disposition. Through his sanctuary he protects annually more birds than all the paid officials of all of the Governments of Canada combined.

Mr. JACOBS: He believes in protection.

Mr. GOTT: Apparently.

And So, Far Into the Night.

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON (East Algoma).

.....I will read the paragraph for my hon. friend and then he will know for himself.

Mr. STEWART (West Edmonton): Reading a paragraph without giving the context and sequence may give a wrong impression.

Mr. NICHOLSON: Paragraph (a) of the agreement reads: .....

Mr. STEWART (West Edmonton): Quite correct, but my hon. friend is forgetting it is all hinged on the question of cost.

Mr. MEIGHEN. No, no. Read it.

Mr. STEWART (West Edmonton): It all hinges on the question of cost.

Mr. MEIGHEN: Read it.

Mr. STEWART (West Edmonton): I was listening while the hon. gentleman was reading it.

Mr. MEIGHEN: Not that part. He has not read that part at all.

Mr. NICHOLSON: If my hon. friend wants me to do it I will read the whole agreement.

Mr. STEWART (West Edmonton): I am not going to say anything more. Go ahead.

Mr. NICHOLSON: Let me read again:

And so, far into the night ....

Behave Yourself! Mr. Campbell.

Mr. E. J. GOTT (South Essex) [discussing the tariff on glass]....

Across the river two huge factories employ thousands of men manufacturing glass that is shipped to us for consumption, while our own factories employ but a few men because our government allows the market for its product to be choked by the product of our competitors.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Does the hon. member think that a 35 per cent duty on glass is not sufficient?

Mr. GOTT: I have noticed a dispostion on the part of hon. members to my left to interfere with younger members who are making their first speeches. The hon. member who spoke before me was not interrupted; I have not yet interrupted a speaker in this House, and if my hon. friend desires an answer to any question I shall be willing tomorrow to sit down with him and go into the question in an intelligent manner.

THREE MILLBROOK CITIZENS SWEAR

borrowed the money from him and gave it to Gilbert. Gilbert said 'you won't hear no more of it'."

Accused Cross-Examines.

Gilbert, when asked by the Crown Attorney if he had any questions he wished to ask the witness, proceeded to cross examine him.

Gilbert: "Do you swear to the statement that I threatened to have you arrested?'

Mr. B: "Sure you did."

Gilbert: "Did I ask you for money?"

Mr. B: "You did, and I gave you $60 on the street."

Gilbert: "Why did you say you did not want your sons to hear about this?"

Mr. B: "I did not want them mixed up in it."

Gilbert: "Do you remember staying all night in Fraserville station with a girl?"

Mr. B: "No, certainly not."

Gilbert: "Did you not make an admission to me that you had seen this girl?"

Mr. B: "I did not make an admission that I was seeing this girl."

Gilbert: "Didn't you ask me if I would accept an amount for my services?"

Mr. B: "I am positive that you made a demand for sixty dollars."

The Third Charge.

Mr. C, the third complainant, said he had met the accused in the latter part of November or early part of December, 1925, in Mr. C's office. Gilbert came into his office, presented his card, and said he was an organizer for the Ku Klux Klan of the British Empire. Gilbert said that he was organizing a branch in Millbrook and that Mr. C's name had been suggested by a local resident. "He wanted to know if I would like to join order. I told him that I already belonged to two societies, the I.O.O.F. and the Masons, and I very rarely attended lodge, and that there would be no use of my joining another society. Gilbert talked for a while about the activities of the Klan and then went away. I next saw him on December 22nd in my office. He asked me if he could have a private conversation with me. I told him he could. He said he had heard reports from gossip coupling my name with that of a certain young lady in Millbrook, and said that on the strength of what he had heard the Klan were going after me, and that he as their representative in this vicinity had full power to act and was going to push it. He threatened that he would expose me in the newspaper and on the public platform, and that they were holding an open meeting in January with Dr. Hawkins of Toronto as the chief speaker."

Threat Over Newspapers.

"I said to him 'Surely you would not expect that newspaper across the street to publish any such rot as public gossip!'

He said that they could not prevent themselves; that they would have to publish anything he told them. He said he 'would hold a threat over them, and they would be afraid to refuse.'

Gilbert then said there was a way to prevent it. I asked him how is that?' He said by giving him a certain sum of money. I asked him how much. Gilbert said they should get $250 or $300 as the Klan had gone to a lot of trouble investigating my affairs but he thought if I was to give him $200 that he would forward that amount to headquarters in Toronto and that likely on his recommendation, seeing that he had full authority in this district, they would accept this amount.

Gilbert asked me if I would agree to this, and said if I wouldn't that he would do all that he said he would and as well would drive me out of my position in that office an would make it so hot for me that and would make it so hot for me that Under pressure of these threats I agreed to give him the $200. He said 'give me a cheque'. I said I could not do that, not having sufficient balance to cover it, but that I would get the money in the bank. I obtained the money by borrowing it, and gave it to Gilbert. He went away after getting the money."

Sent to Headquarters.

"After thinking over what a fool I had been in giving him the money" Mr. C. continued, "and worrying about it for a couple of days, I wrote Gilbert. I got a telegram in reply on December 26th which was telephoned to me from the station. Gilbert came to see me on the following Tuesday. He said to me 'I got your letter, and you want your money back?' I told him I did. He then said 'You don't suppose that I have been carrying that money around all this time?' Gilbert said that he had sent the money to Klan headquarters in Toronto, and that he had advised them of receiving my letter and produced a letter which he said was from the second-in-command advising that the chief was out of the city and that nothing could be done about getting my money back. When I saw this letter I became a little doubtful, as it was typewritten on common white paper and was in an ordinary white envelope without either an address or a stamp. I said to him 'don't you know you got that money from me by means of threats and that it was a case of blackmail, pure and simple, and that if I was to place the case in the hands of the Crown Attorney it might be very serious thing for you.'

Refers to 'Billy' Nickle.

Gilbert then said that he knew the Crown Attorney well, and that he wouldn't take action because the Klan was backed up in all it did by "Billy' Nickle. He also said that Mackenzie King was behind them, and that if I had him arrested and brought into court it would simply be his word against mine, and that he would swear that I gave this money as a personal gift to the Klan to help them with their work.

Joins the Klan.

"He told me that if I still insisted in my demands to have my money back they would open up the whole case against me and that they would do what they said they would, and more. I said 'Yes, more extortion.'

He said that there was a way to prevent that, and it was to give him my application to the order. I did this, and just then some person came into the office and there was no more said.."

This concluded the hearing of the evidence.

AMUNDSEN SURE OF SUCCEEDING IN POLE FLIGHT

Explorer's Attempt This Year in May With Dirigible.

WITH SIXTEEN MEN

Doubts Existence of Great Continent in Polar Region.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 26. — (Canadian Press).—Captain Raold Amundsen, world famous explorer, is confident of passing over the North Pole in his proposed flight into the Arctive regions next May. The intrepid Norwegian, who was in Vancouver Wednesday, en route to New York, in an interview here, said in answer to a question as to his probable success in passing over the North Pole in May:

"Of course I will make it. I have not the slightest doubt of it. We have a splendid Italian-made dirigible of the semi-rigid type, a picked crew, and we will be flying in the polar regions when the atmospheric conditions will be ideal. At no place will they be more favorable than in the Arctic at the time of year we propose leaving King's Bay."

Not only is Captain Amundsen confident of passing over the pole, but he expects to go from Spitzbergen to Point Barrow in two days. From there he will proceed to Nome and he expects to come down from Nome to Seattle by steamer.

The dirigible is being prepared in Rome. The mechanicians will be Italians. Scientific experts will be carried as well as two wireless experts. The remainder of the crew will be Norwegian naval officers. Sixteen men in all will be carried.

With a dirigible there will be no necessity of searching for non-existant landing places in the polar regions, the explorer believes, and greater possibility of success is indicated. The explorer doubts the existence of a great continent in the polar region. As far as he has been able to judge from years of experience in exploration work in the Arctic, the pole is surrounded by a million square miles of water and enormous fields of ice.

Captain Amundsen said he deenly regretted that the Wilkins expedition had decided to use aeroplanes in its flight north, and said he feared for the success or safety of the expedition. He is satisfied, he said, that until the airplane has been perfected, it is useless for polar work.

Captain Amundsen has left for the East.

HON. J. G. GARDINER SUCCEEDS HON. C. A. DUNNING AS PREMIER

Minister of Highways in Saskatchewan Cabinet Chosen By Party.

ONTARIO BORN.

New Premier is of Scotch Parentage—In Province Since 1904.

REGINA, Sask., Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Highways, was yesterday chosen Premier of Saskatchewan, in succession to the Hon. Charles Dunning, who resigned to accept the Federal portfolio of Minister of Railways and Canals.

The choice was made yesterday by a Province-wide convention of Liberal supporters, including all the Liberal members of the Legislature, candidates defeated at the last election and officials of the constituency Liberal associations.

James Garfield Gardiner was born on November 30, 1883, at Farquhar, near Exeter, Ontario, and is a son of J. C. and Elizabeth Gardiner, both of whom are of Scottish parentage.

He attended public school in Thames Road, Ontario, and in Lincoln, Nebraska, going then to intermediate school at Clearwater, Man., whence he proceeded to normal school at Regina and Manitoba University, Winnipeg. He went to Saskatchewan in 1904, and after teaching school for several years, commenced farming in 1917. First elected to the Legislature when he contested the by-election in North Que'Appelle on June 25, 1914, he was re-elected by a double majority at the general election in June, 1917, and at the next general election in 1921 went in by acclamation. Upon the formation of the Dunning Ministry on April 5, 1922, he was appointed Minister of Highways and Minister in charge of the Bureau of Labor and Industries.

COBOURG COUNCIL TAKES NO ACTION

Will Not Require Meat Sold on Market To Be Inspected.

COBOURG, Feb. 26. — Although the matter was presented for consideration, Cobourg Town Council did not at the last meeting take any action upon the resolution passed by the Cobourg Board of Health recommending that in future all meats supplied to the citizens of Cobourg be Government stamped, approved and inspected. It is felt that this, if put into effect, will militate strongly against the sale of meats in the open market here by the several butchers, six or seven of whom do a thriving trade for a few hours every Saturday. The result is that there is much discussion both pro and con by citizens of town and country.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26 1926.

WORSE THAN WAS THOUGHT.

Apparently the Sault Ste. Marie case mentioned by the Examiner the other day as an instance of the misuse of the prized service button of Canada's veterans is even worse than at first surmised.

It would have been bad enough if the spotter who made use of the emblem of service to entrap war veterans in breaches of the O.T.A. had been an ex-service man himself and entitled to wear the bronze button.

Now it is learned, however, that the agent was not a returned soldier, and was therefore wearing an emblem which he had no business to be using.

The story is that he found it on the street.

Wherever he got it there was no justification for his wearing the button under any circumstance; while to use it as a decoy was, as the Examiner pointed out, a prostitution of an emblem that should be honoured by every Canadian.

The Attorney-General of Ontario should get to the bottom of this case and find out whether this is only an isolated incident or whether there has been a more or less general misuse of the active service button in the enforcing of the Ontario Temperance Act.

THE SLIDE QUESTION.

In any references it has made to the toboggan slide question the Examiner has not, intentionally at least, committed itself to the Jackson Park site, although that offers many advantages that are apparent to everybody.

What we intended to convey was the idea that Peterboro should have better facilities for the grand winter pastime of tobogganing.

These need not necessarily be provided at Jackson Park if that site does not appeal to the authorities as the best for the purpose; they can be established at Armour's Hill or any other location that appears suitable.

All the Examiner is concerned with is that the desirability of more recreational facilities, particularly of more opportunities for winter sport, should not be lost sight of by the city fathers.

A permanent toboggan slide should not involve a large expenditure, either in its construction or maintenance, and there are many citizens who would like to see some progress made toward establishing a slide somewhere in the city.

ABOLISHING TAXATION.

The Kitchener Board of Trade has come out with a very drastic programme of suggested changes in Federal taxation.

At one full sweep the Board would do away with the sales tax, the stamp tax and the stamp tax on drafts, cheques and other commercial documents.

At the same time the Kitchener organization suggests that the special excise taxes embodied in the legislation passed in the last few years be repeated, and that the normal tax of 10 1_2 per cent. on the income of corporations exceeding $2,000 a year be reduced to the present rate on individuals, namely 4 per cent. per year, and that the rate of income tax in Canada be reduced to approximately the same rates as those now in effect in the United States.

Now there's a nice programme, and the people of Canada would greet it with tremendous cheering if it could be adopted.

Unfortunately, however, this country must have revenue, plenty of it, and if the Progressive impulse toward lower tariffs is successful and all these taxes mentioned by our Kitchener friends were abolished, it would be a very pretty problem indeed to find an alternative way of raising the sinews of war.

Perhaps the Kitchener Board of Trade may be able to arrive at a solution.

If they do they should be immediately asked to form a Government.

BANNING "LIBERTY."

The Examiner's opinion in regard to the banning of the magazine "Liberty" from Canada finds many journalistic supporters. Here are a couple of articles along the same line:

The Ottawa Journal says:

"The Minister of Customs announces that the Chicago weekly magazine 'Liberty' is to be excluded from Canada because it has been printing a series of articles on the late Queen Mother Alexandra that reflect unpleasantly on the earlier years of King Edward VII. 'The heartbreak of a Queen' is the title of the series and Albert Edward's alleged fondness for the ladies is the basis for assumptions that may be obvious but not necessarily correct.

"The prohibition is ordered under a provision in the customs law affecting 'immoral and indecent publications;' but Hon. George H. Boivin, the Minister, explains that the real reason is that 'the articles in question were libellous toward the Royal family.'

"It is just a question whether the Dominion Government is not defeating the commendable end it appears to have in view by seeming to attach an importance to the articles which they do not deserve. Only by a stretch of the imagination could they be characterized as 'immoral and indecent.' In one-half the novels on the shelves of the Parliamentary and other libraries sex matters are discussed in a much bolder way; and a still greater percentage of cinema films that have 'passed the censor' are more flagrantly immoral. Nor are we able to imagine that royalty needs or seeks protection from libel other than that which is afforded to subjects. Royalty might in circumstances such as these even pray to be preserved from its friends.

"Many sensitive Canadians will resent the flippant manner in which the life of King Edward is dealt with under the disguise of sympathy for his beautiful consort. A severe and more lasting admonition to the publishers of 'Liberty' could have come, and probably has, from these individuals by the stoppage of their subscriptions to the offending magazine. As it is, the Dominion Government has given an enormously valuable advertisement to the publishers, and, so far from suffering under bureaucratic reproof, they may actually gain a wider circulation in the United States for the objectionable articles."

"Hank" in the St. Thomas Times-Journal says:

"We see where another United States magabine has been forbidden entrance to Canada, this time because it was a trifle too candid in its references to past and present members of the British royal family. We hold no brief for the magazine in question. We are not attempting to defend it in respect to the articles that have been anathematized by the powers that be at Ottawa and certain women's organizations in this broad Dominion, but we do maintain that it is manifestly unfair to purge a magazine of this comparatively high literary quality, while dozens of other United States publications of the confessional type, sensational magazines that fairly wallow in sex stuff, in what is commonly called lecherous literature, magazines that are as dangerous to the adolescent mind as high explosives in the hands of a baby, are permitted to flood the Canadian news stands, apparently unchallenged. We're prepared to wager that there are at least ten times as many copies of an issue of one of these undesirables sold in St. Thomas as there are of the magazine that has just been banned. And if you were to check up on the sales you would find that about 75 per cent. of the confessional magazines go to young girls and youths who shouldn't be reading such salacious stuff.

"Let them ban an American magazine if it prints something that shocks the patriotism of certain thin-skinned Canadians, if they must; but for heaven's sake let them be consistent and also ban magazines that should shock the decency of every right-thinking Canadian, whether he or she is a flag-waver or not.

"Perhaps if some of the old women throughout the country and on Parliament Hill were to have their eyes tested and fitted to new spectacles there wouldn't be so much of this short-sightedness in evidence."

IN RIGHT DIRECTION.

The Retail Trade Bureau of Canada has launched a fight against the income tax, and while there never was a time when revenue was so badly needed as right now in Canada, there is a fairly good chance of making some progress in this direction. If such progress only consisted of knocking down income taxation to the same level as that now in force in the United States, it would be a good thing for Canadain business.

Georges Lapointe, Montreal, President of the Retail Trade Bureau, delivered an address which was a most comprehensive review of the whole question of Dominion taxes, of which there are no less than eleven different forms. Adam Smith, the famous economist, laid down certain principles for taxation which are still good. These were the elements necessary for good taxation, equality or ability, certainty, convenience and economy. Secretary Andrew Mellon of the United States has declared a more modern method to make for successful taxation:

1. It must be scientific.
2. It must not disturb business.
3. It must get the most money with the least "squeal."

And these principles are being carried out by a steadily reduced income tax in the United States by Secretary Mellon.

The one big objection to an overdose of income taxation is that it destroys savings of a very large part of the people, and hits those who should be least hit. It will be found that the employees of Canada are paying the major portion of the income taxation. Moreover, taxes from this source have been declining. Here are some interesting figures over a period:

1918-1919	$ 9,349,719.80
1919-1920	20,263,739.91
1920-1921	46,381,824.31
1921-1922	78,684,354.80
1922-1923	59,711,538.37
1923-1924	54,204,027.99

Here are more interesting figures as to what the farmers of Canada have been paying:

Year	No. Farmers	Amount
1918-1919	4,971	$ 350,759.53
1919-1920	9,504	525,836.74
1920-1921	16,652	611,736.64
1921-1922	13,873	1,324,693.68
1922-1923	8,230	480,353.33
1923-1924	4,676	281,928.37

During a period of five years the farmers have paid $3,224,548.76 in income taxation; the professional people have paid $11,253,985.67; the merchants have paid $43,373,933; the manufacturers, excluding surtax, $56,922,838, and the employees of the country have contributed $62,467,780.49.

In regard to the above, there is difficulty always in determining what a farmer actually makes in one year. This form of taxation for the farmer is obviously faulty. In regard to the employee, the matter is different. Payrolls may be demanded and the employee pays the limit.

The sales tax is recommended by the Retail Trade Bureau as the one which is inescapable, which is getting the money, and which hits everybody who buys stuff of any kind. The figures for five years, in respect to revenue, are as follows:

1920-1921	$ 38,131,448.20
1921-1922	61,518,751.13
1922-1923	91,262,254.13
1923-1924	100,990,076.80
1924-1925	66,707,369.96

It may not be possible for the Government to wipe out income taxes, but it should be possible to effect large reductions and to raise exemptions. And in connection with income taxation, and the way it works out, it might be well to remember what the late William Ewart Gladstone once said about income taxes: "Any system of taxation that depends upon the people assessing themselves correctly is a system that is making liars and thieves out of the people." And how many have been made since the system was introduced?—St. Catharines Standard.

Husband: Self-control.

It ought to cheer a husband up when his wife says she's got a lot of things she wants to talk about. Usually her conversation is about a lot of things she hasn't got.

Just think of all the disappointments it would remove if all of us quit expecting things.

We always wish we were in some friend's place without knowing that then we would be out of place.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

THE SPIRIT OF FRIENDSHIP

To the Editor,—

Dear Sir,—On reading your issue of Febrnuary 22nd I was very pleased to see the note struck and emphasised by Rotarian John Gibson at their anniversary meeting, pleading for better international feeling and as to developing the Brotherhood movement.

The tremendous sacrifice of the war years had opened men's eyes to the fact that something was clogging the advance of the spirit of friendship in the world. Today the gospel of friendship is being preached more than ever before, and our greatest men all talking of friendship between every race as the goal of international diplomacy. Before the world can regain her equilibrium and the path of true peace, we must have a tremendous resurrection of the spirit of friendship as between man and man, nation and nation. The League of Nations is a great symbol of that spirit and the Locarno pact should bring us much nearer the realization of true peace than ever before.

It is characteristic of the British race in their attitude to all sport, playing the game for the game's sake, and in the spirit of of "better luck next time" to the loser. In a similar way the British Empire was extending their hand of friendship to their late foe, in a fashion that no other country had attempted.

All the nations are eages for peace and friendship and the British Empire has given a valuable lead in this direction. The Locarno pact rests on the friendship of nations, and that can only be successful if a true spirit of friendship exists between man and man, and another splendid example has been set by such movements as the Rotarians, Kiwanians, and various organizations for the welfare of the young were concrete expressions of the desire for friendship which existed today. Again take the fraternal societies established for the purpose of mutual help in the time of need and difficulty, and it must be remembered many of these societies are international in character, and form one great brotherhood. In both the fraternal societies and brotherhood the more they put in the more they get out, the greatest of all being friendship.

We all know the motto adopted during the French Revolution—Liberty, Equality, Fraternity. If we reverse the order beginning with fraternity, and then equality, liberty will soon follow of its own accord. Mankind deserves something better than continual grinding, suspicious and jealous regards at home and abroad whch breeds hate, because after all this planet is not a penal settlement. The world is hungering for a lead towards happiness, it is said love alone is unconquerable, and it is by love alone that the nations of the world can be brought into the paths of peace. Take the League of Nations and the Locarno Pact—surely this is a sign that the nations are waking up to the tremendous value of friendship and long may that awakening continue.

Yours truly,
J. ABRAHAM.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain in the Montreal market remains unchanged to-day, there being no firm bids received from foreign buyers for wheat and those for oats and barley were away below working basis. The demand from local and country buyers was also of a very limited character. The tone of the market for Canadian Western oats was weaker and prices were reduced 1c per bushel, with No. 2 Canadian Western quoted at 60c, No. 3 C.W. 56c, and No. 1 feed at 53c.

There was no important change in the condition of the local market for fresh eggs to-day, prices generally being maintained under a steady demand. There was a fair demand for storage eggs in a wholesale way, and sales of several fair-sized lots were made at steady prices. Receipts were 1,285 cases.

A stronger feeling developed in the butter market, and prices scored an advance of ¼c per pound, the demand being generally good and a fairly active business was done. No. 1 pasteurized creamery sold at 43½c per lb. Receipts were 28 packages.

A firm feeling prevailed on the cheese market, but no actual change in prices took place, current receipts still selling at 19c to 19¼c per lb. Receipts were 128 boxes.

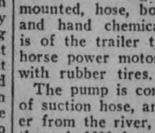
CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25 (Canadian Press).—Wheat underwent a material set-back in price to-day, and in some quarters this result was to a considerable degree associated with proposals to amend the Grain Futures Act so as to restrict any individual from trades exceeding 1,000,000 bushels a day. The wheat market closed weak, 1 3-8c to 2c net lower, May $1.65 7-8 to $1.66 and July $1.43¾ to $1.43 5-8, with corn ¼c to 5-8c up, oats at 1-8c decline to ¼c gain, and provisions 12c to 20c down.

The Slight Cold Of To-day May Be Serious To-morrow

On the first appearance of a cough or cold, do not neglect it, but get rid of it at once before it has a chance to grow worse and becomes settled on the lungs, for once it does become deep-seated you are going to have a lot of trouble in getting rid of it.

Our advice to you is that on the first sign of a cough or cold you should procure a bottle of



Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

as by its timely use you may save yourself many years of suffering from some serious bronchial or lung troubles. "Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past 37 years; so you are not experimenting with some new and untried remedy; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OMEMEE BUYS FIRE APPARATUS

Chemical and Hose Pump With Pumper on Trailer, Selected.

OMEMEE NEWS.

OMEMEE, February 26. — The committee which was recently appointed to secure better fire protection for the village, has purchased an up-to-date fire fighting equipment from the Lorne Tractors, Limited, Tilsonburg and Ingersoll, which will arrive about the middle of April.

The outfit consists of a one ton truck with a 50 gallon chemical tank mounted, hose, body, axes, lanterns and hand chemicals. The pumper is of the trailer type, run by a 22-horse power motor, and is equipped with rubber tires.

The pump is connected with 30 ft. of suction hose, and will pump water from the river, creek, cistern,etc., through 1000 feet of hose. This will throw a stream about 50 feet high.

The chemicals are available for ordinary fires and if necessary it may be followed up by the powerful pumper, which gives city protection to the villagers.

A.Y.P.A. Meeting.

At the weekly A.Y.P.A. meeting in Christ church on Monday evening, the Rev. A. T. Weir spoke on the subject "Why I am an Anglican." Referring back to the earliest days, the speaker set forth clearly and unmistakably the source from which the Anglican communion has sprung. He traced it down through the ages to the present day, making a very interesting and instructive address. He concluded by giving several reasons as to why the individual may be an Anglican.

Next week's entertainment is to be a series of lantern sildes on two interesting topics.

Y.P.L. Meeting.

Monday evening was social and Literary night, in the Young Peoples' League of the United church. The meeting was in charge of Miss Rita Kennedy, the president of that department of League work. The topic for the evening was in the cap able hands of Mr. F. G. Sandy, who gave a splendid address on Literature.

The Scripture lesson was taken by Mr. Cecil Kennedy, while Mr. Vernon Lang read a most helpful devotional leaflet. The musical part of the evening consisted of a piano selection by Miss Helen Rutherford, a musical duet by the Misses Eva and Lillian Race on autoharp and piano, which was interspersed with several bright hyms.

A splendid reading by Miss Christina Connell brought to a close a most enjoyable evening.

Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Bible reading and meditation prepared for Commission on Evangelism of Federal Churches of Christ in America.

FRIDAY—
The Democracy of Jesus.

Read Jn. 4:19-24. Text: 4:24. God is a spirit: and they that worship him must worship in spirit and truth.

Meditation—Here beside Jacob's well the greatest man of the ages exemplified the spirit of Democracy. Without pride, prejudice or self consciousness he shows this lowly and alien woman the same respect he gave the Hebrew senator who came to him by night. To Nicodemus he uttered the profoundest truth about the soul of man, for this woman he formulated the simplest yet the most comprehensive definition of God. Across all the traditional lines which sunder mankind he spoke. Neither race nor religion, neither status nor even sex proved a barrier when moral needs appealed to him. He gave with lavish generosity the knowledge of God in his spiritual greatness. She needed a new foundation of character, and the Master builder gave the greatest truth in the universe upon which to build.

Prayer—O thou Eternal Spirit, who lovest us and desireth not the death of the sinner but that he should repent and live, help us to worship Thee in spirit and in truth. Deliver us from all hypocrisy and sham. Help our souls to abhor all lies and to have faith in the liberating power of truth. We come to Thee for the satisfaction of every true need of our spirits, made bold by Thy gracious promise. Amen.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

LOOK UP.

A young man once found a dollar-bill on the street. From that time on he never lifted his eyes from the ground when walking. In the course of forty years he accumulated 29,516 buttons, 54,172 pins, 7 pennies, a bent back and a miserly disposition. He lost the glories of the sunlight, the smiles of friends, the song of birds, the beauties of flowers, trees, blue skies, and the opportunity to serve his fellow-men and spread happiness—all for a tattered dollar-bill!

PRESENTATION MADE.

Friends and Neighbors of John Magee Bade Him Farewell.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Feb. 25.—Friends and neighbors of Mr. John Magee, of the second line of Emily, to the number of about fifty, gathered at his home on Friday evening, February 19th, to bid him farewell before his departure from the neighborhood. The evening was spent in cards and dancing during the evening. Mr. Magee was asked to come forward, while Mr. Joseph Boyd read the following address:

Dear Mr. Magee— We, your friends and neighbors regret your departure from our community. You have always been ready to assist us in every way, both socially and in other ways.

We also feel that the course you have taken in disposing of your property will leave you in a position to have a well earned holiday.

Although you are leaving our midst, we will always be pleased to have you visit us again and you will always find the latch string on the outside. May you always be protected and guided by God of Love through the remainder of your life, which we hope will be long and happy.

We would ask you to accept this companion as a slight token of our remembrance.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors.

Austin Hayes.
J. Harold Dick.

February 19th, 1926.

Mr. Magee, although taken by complete surprise, made a suitable reply, stating that when asked for the evening, he never expected a presentation, and in a few well chosen words thanked his neighbors for their many kindnesses and stated that he would always remember them as he smoked his pipes.

Everybody then sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

A dainty lunch was served at the midnight hour, and toward the wee small hours of the morning the happy gathering dispersed.

MEMBER FOR WEST PETERBORO MAKES FIRST SPEECH IN HOUSE DURING DEBATE ON THE ADDRESS

Mr. Peck Talks of Present Condition in House of Commons.

SPEAKS OF EXODUS

Asks for Consideration of Question of Protection.

On Tuesday E. A. Peck, M.P. for West Peterborough delivered his maiden speech in the House of Commons, speaking in the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne. The following is the text of his address, taken from Hansard, and including the interjections and questions of other members:

Mr. Speaker, I rise with some diffidence to address myself to the motion and amendment before the House although I realize that you, Sir, will accord to me the same kindly consideration which you are in the habit of extending to all new members of this House. One may be accustomed to address local audiences, but I realize that now I am a member of and addressing myself to the supreme assembly of this country, an assembly composed of members resident for the most part in the riding's which they represent, assembled here from all parts of the Dominion to deliberate on matters affecting the welfare of the whole of Canada, and, if necessary, to crystallize their views into the form of legislation. It is only natural to expect that a gathering such as this, representing all the various sections of Canada and gathered here from sea to sea, as the scroll over the entrance to this building states, will have divergent views. They represent diferent interests, different occupations, and necessarily there will be divergencies of opinion. It is our duty when we meet here to discuss fully all the questions which may possibly affect Canada, and to do so there must be the fullest freedom of debate.

The debate on the Address has been a feature of our proceedings ever since parliament was established. It answers a useful purpose. It gives us an opportuity of stating our views and of hearing the views of those who do not, perhaps, agree with us. There should be no limitation of that debate unless limitation becomes really necessary. It has been suggested that by carrying on this discussion we are obstructing, but we are in no way preventing the carrying on of public business. The government has expressly stated that it does not intend to bring down any more business until March 15; and so if we wish to continue exchanging our views we are in no way preventing the carrying on of the business of the country. In that connection I regret to see introduced the amendment calling for the previous question to be put. Under the circumstances it answers no useful purpose. If important measures were being held up by reason of this debate there would be some reason for checking discussion. But no such condition exists; and it is unfortunate that, by reason of that amendment, a suggestion should go forth from this assembly that there should be any restriction of the fullest discussion of public matters.

We have an unusual condition in the present interesting parliament—

AUTOMOBILE SEIZED BY CUSTOMS OFFICERS SOLD PRIVATELY AFTER CLERK HAD FORGED REGISTRATION

Was Smuggled Into Canada —No Trace of Supposed Owner.

CUSTOMS INQUIRY

Clerk Admits Forgery "at Request of Bisaillon, Chief Inspector."

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 26 (Canadian Press)—How a car stolen in the United States, smuggled into Canada and seized by the customs authorities, was sold privately on forged registration certificates, was described at the Customs probe yesterday.

H. I. Levitt of Montreal, said he had bought a car a year go through J. E. A. Bisaillon, then Chief Inspector of the Customs port of Montreal, for $612, plus $137 garage bill and repairs. He met a man who was described as "Morris Delage of Holyoke, Mass.," the supposed owner of the car. Bisaillon had told him Delage had been "frightened" into giving up his claim to the car by an assessment of double duties in penalty for having tried to smuggle it into Canada. He had received a ticket purporting to be the registration certificate in the state of Massachusetts.

Detectives of the Customs Department found that there was no Morris Delage in Holyoke and that the registration certificate had been forged. M. Garceau, clerk in the Montreal customs office, was called to the stand and admitted that he wrote the certificate and signed it "Morris Delage" disguising his handwriting for the purpose. He also had prepared other documents necessary to secure release of the car from bond, and signed them too. This he had done "not of his own volition, but at the request of Bisaillon." He had performed the same service for the former Chief Inspector on two other occasions.

Later Germain Parrot, manager of the Central garage in Montreal, where the Customs department stores most of its seized cars, was questioned concerning the transfer of parts from cars seized to cars used by Customs officers there. He admitted that such transfer had been made at the request of Bisaillon and other preventive officers whose names he could not remember.

No Trace of Delage

J. E. Knox, customs officer, described his investigation of the case. He had examined the car in January and had found that the original manufacturer's numbers on the car had been changed. He went to Holyoke, Mass.., and found no trace of Morris Delage. The police in Holyoke could not find him.

Mr. Gagnon asked why Mr. Knox had not asked Bisaillon about Delage. Mr. Knox said he had never talked to Bisaillon.

Originally the car was reported as having been seized from "some person unknown, who was endeavoring to sell the car for Morris Delage."

OBITUARY.

MARMORA, Feb. 26. — James Hamilton, a well known farmer of Marmora township, passed away on Wednesday after a lingering illness. He is survived by his widow and two young children at home, Lilian and Fred. He is also survived by three sisters, Mrs. Sam Chambers who resides near Belleville, Mrs. Victoria Nickle of Marmora and Miss Emma Hamilton of Belleville. His brother Henry predeceased him seven years ago. Deceased was a Methodist in religion and Conservative in politics.

JOHN CAREY.

GRAFTON, Feb. 26.—John Carey died at Cobourg General Hospital on Wenesday morning after a week's illness. He was in his 73rd year and a prominent agriculturist and resident of Haldimand township.

A week ago as Mr. Carey was going from his barn to the house he fell on some ice and fractured his hip and lay there for a short time before he was found. Medical aid was summoned and he was taken to the hospital.

He was a bachelor and resided on the Carey homestead with his sister, Mrs. McGuire. Three brothers, Andrew and James, of Haldimand and P.I. Carey, Toronto, for many years Dominion Fruit Inspector, predeceased him. The funeral will be held on Friday to St. Mary's church and cemetery here.

KILLED BY TREE.

KAMLOOPS, B.C., Feb. 26. — (Canadian Press.)—His skull fractured by a falling tree, Frank Jarman, 34, a native of Ontario, was instantly killed at a lumber camp here. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

JANUARY TREND OF BUSINESS IN CANADA UPWARD

Industrial Index Reached Maximum for All Time, Statistics Show.

ADVANCE 39 P.C.

Above January Last Year—High Price Level Maintained.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26. — (Canadian Press). — The trend of business conditions in Canada was decidedly favorable during the first month of the present year, says the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. In spite of the high levels attained in preceding months, many factors showed considerable increases.

"This remark," continues the Bureau in a statement reviewing business statistics for February, "applies to the three prominent factors selected to represent the different phases of business, but especially to industrial stock prices and to notice deposits. The index of industrials in January reached a maximum on the present movement, as well as for all time. The increase in the month under review was nearly 6 per cent. as compared with December last, while the advance since January, 1925, was about 39 per cent.

Prices Maintained.

"The increase in the index of wholesale prices in January was comparatively slight when compared with the preceding month. Prices in Canada, however, had shown considerable advance in the last two months of 1925, so that a relatively high level was maintained in the month under review. In view of the considerable weight given in the Canadian index to agricultural products, prices in this country rose during 1925 to a greater extent as compared with the preceding year than in the United States, while an absolute decline was experienced in Great Britain, as a consequence of the re-establishment of the currency on the gold basis.

"The pronounced rise in the notice deposits as at December 31st was also full of significance. The deposits now total $1,318,875,000. which constitutes a record for all time with the exception of March. 1921, when a slightly larger total was attained. The increase in December over the total at the end of the preceding month was 1.5 per cent., and the advance over the corresponding date of the preceding year was 6.5 per cent.

BOTH RAILWAYS TO CARRY COAL

No Discrimination in Transportation From Alberta to Ontario.

OTTAWA STATEMENT

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—There will be no discrimination between the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways in respect to transportation of a certain amount of coal from Alberta to Ontario, one-third of the cost of which over and above seven dollars will be borne by the Dominion Government. This assurance was given in the House of Commons Thursday afternoon by Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, who stated that no discrimination would be shown "so long as the coal comes through to Central Canada."

The matter was brought up by Hon. R. B. Bennett (Conservative, Calgary West). Mr. Bennett drew attention to the announcement that the Government proposed to pay one-third of the cost of transportation of certain quantities of coal from Alberta to Ontario, over and above seven dollars a ton. Some of the collieries were located at C.N.R. points not reached by the C.P.R. He would like to know if any assistance given by the Government would be equally available to both lines.

"Yes, there will be no discrimination so long as the coal comes through to Central Canada," replied Mr. Stewart.

EIGHT KILLED IN SOUTHERN STORM

Mules Disappear as Cyclone Swept States.

YAZOO CITY, Miss., Feb. 26.—Two negroes are dead, four others seriously injured, one white man badly crippled, and much property damage reported as the result of a cyclone which struck the C. J. Hill plantation, five miles north of Cruger, in Leftore county, late Wednesday night, it was learned yesterday.

The storm badly damaged the Hill residence, seriously injured his son, blew away his barn and many tenant houses, and did other property damage.

A peculiar freak of the storm was that all of Hill's mules were blown away, and no trace of them has been found. A large tree was blown across the railway track and near the scene of the storm negroes removed the tree just before the train reached the point, thus preventing what might have been a serious wreck.

Six Killed in Arkansas.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 26.—Three whites and three negroes were killed and a score injured in a tornado that swept across the Mississippi river from south-eastern Arkansas and, after demolishing several buildings near Lake village, wrecked 25 structures in a suburb of Greenville, Miss.

Three white persons were reported killed on the Wheat plantation in the southern part of Chicot county, Arkansas; one negro was killed near Jennie, Ark., another near Greenwood, Miss., and another near Greenville.

SEYMOUR TAXES PAID BY HYDRO

Windfall of $229.86 Received By Township For Two Years.

DR. HAY'S EFFORTS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 26.—The Township of Seymour came in for a windfall Thursday when the clerk, Dr. G. A. Hay, received from the Hydro Commission a cheque for $229.86 in payment of the taxes due the township for the years 1924-25. This tax is based on the assessed value of the lands, other than those occupied by the power houses, the lands on which are erected the residences that are tenanted by the employees of the Hydro.

For three years this matter has been in abeyance and the entire credit for the successful issue belongs to Dr. Hay, who carried on the campaign with tireless patience, and without the slightest encouragement from the different members of the Council who have held office during that time. These councillors appeared to be convinced that nothing would ever come of the correspondence that was being carried on by Dr. Hay and the members of the legal profession were of the same way of thinking.

Dr. Hay has been in correspondence with three of the leading Hydro officials. His first communication was addressed to Engineer Gaby, who referred him to A. E. Hugill, solicitor for the Hydro, but even that skilled lawyer was unable to shake off or discourage his lay correspondent. Finally Dr. Hay found himself pitted against Secretary W. W. Pope, and it was that official who concluded the negotiations. At the February meeting of the Council a letter from Mr. Pope was read stating that if information was sent him as to the assessed value of the lands in question and the school and general tax rate he would try to have the claim of the township settled in a few weeks' time. The information asked for was forwarded and the Hydro cheque for the full amount of the bill was the result.

The Hydro has a number of residences at its various power houses in this district that are occupied by its employees, many of whom are married men with large families. The children of these tenants attended the Public schools nearest them, while neither their parents nor their landlords paid one cent of taxes toward the support of these schools. In some cases the number of these free pupils in attendance almost equalled the number of those whose parents paid taxes. Dr. Hay did not regard such a situation as fair to the taxpayers of Seymour and this conviction was his inspiration to persevere in his campaign which has just been brought to a successful issue. This is not the conclusion of the matter by any means as the Doctor says he proposes to make an effort to collect the back taxes owing by the Hydro for the years previous to 1924, from the date of the taking over of the system in this district by its present owners.

The Hydro has always been assessed for the lands in question that were occupied by private residences but this valuation was placed in the exemption column of the assessor's roll. The amount of taxes due from this course in 1924 was $108.36 and in 1925 the bill was $121.50, all of which has now been paid as per account rendered.

CALL PASTOR TO MILLBROOK

Presbyterian Congregations Asks Rev. John Riddle to Take Pastorate.

MILLBROOK NEWS

MILLBROOK, Feb. 26.—A largely attended congregational meeting, representative of the Millbrook and Centreville Presbyterian churches, was held in Grace church on Monday afternoon when a unanimous call to the pastorate was extended to Rev. John Riddle, a student in Toronto who completes his course next month. There is every reason ot believe the call will be accepted, and the induction will take place in March.

Mr. Riddle spent four years overseas as chaplain during the world war, and has also had pastoral work, in a missionary capacity, in the Canadian West. He has twice occupied the pulpits of the Centreville and Millbrook charges, being most favorably received on both occasions.

These two congregations united as a joint circuit following the union last June.

Mission Circle.

A special meeting of the Golden Links Mission Circle was held on Tuesday evening, at the home of Mrs. E. S. Burnham, Mark street, the attendance being the largest for several months.

At the request of the Circle president, Mrs. J. McKnight, the "Wide Awakes" group of Canadian-Girls-in-Training prepared the program, the C.G.I.T. president, Jean Burnham, occupying the chair. Miss Ella Elson presided at the piano.

After the opening devotional period, during which Elvira Davis read the Scripture lesson, the following were the items on the programme.

Reading, "The Little Brown Girl and I", by Mary Burnham.

Missionary News Items: "The Value of Prayer in Missions", by Wilma Fallis.

"A Moving Picture Machine in Japan," by Pearl Davis.

Duet, "Light at Evening", by Mrs G. W. Sayles and Miss May Byam.

Hymn, "Far, Far Away in Heathen Darkness Bending".

Missionary news items continued: "The flag follows the missionary," by Margaret Howard.

"The Missionary's Danger", by Hazel McMahon.

Reading, "Her Greatest Treasure", by Elsie Spence (the author of the reading, Miss Wilma C. Peters, once taught in the primary room of Millbrook public school!).

"Pray Ye", by Jean Burnham.

Missionary talk, "Rubbing elbows with the real Chinese for one day", by Miss P. Burnham.

Refreshments were served during the social hour at the close, and the circle members, under the leadership of Mrs. H. W. Johnston, practised some choruses for the public meeting to be held on March 9, when Miss Paul, a missionary of over thirty years' experience, will deliver an address. The circle will present the cantata, "Inasmuch," the same evening.

Mrs. V. C. Lambert, Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. M. Weatherup, and Miss Marjorie Skitch were the committee in charge during the social hour on Tuesday evening.

Women's Auxiliary.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Thomas' church held its February meeting on Monday evening, at the home of Miss Annie Armstrong, the attendance being most encouraging.

The president, Mrs. (Canon) Allen occupied the chair, and business items included further arrangements for completing the bale to be sent in April. A sewing meeting will be held in the Sunday school room next Wednesday to work on supplies for this annual bale which is provided by the whole parish.

Miss Armstrong took up the chapter from the study book, "The Clash of Colour", by Basil Matthews which grows in interest with each reading.

The March meeting will be held at the home of the secretary, Mrs. E. Whyte.

Ice Harvest Complete.

The ice harvest was completed locally last week, about six thousand blocks being cut this season.

Though the winter has been comparatively mild the ice was of uniformly good quality, from twelve to eighteen inches thick, and with but little snow on the surface to mar its keeping qualities.

MEMBER FOR WEST PETERBORO

the fact that the government which is endeavouring to carry on is a minority in the House. In the former House the Prime Minister had a following, I believe, of 125. He expressly stated that he had not a sufficient following to enable him to put into effect the policies which he wished to have adopted. Having gone to the country he comes back with a far less number of supporters—to be precise, only 101—and seeks to carry on. His only salvation is to turn to the members of the Progressive party for support. As has been stated in the House, he has had several interviews with some of the members of that party, and after some discussion a very loose agreement as been arrived at—in fact it is scarcely to be called an agreement at all.

As I understand that agreement, it contains three parts. It starts off with the statement on the part of the Progressive party that it has no confidence in Mr. King's government, and that any support the Progressives see fit to give to the government is not to be construed as an expression of confidence in it. And then, as I gather, another feature of the agreement is this: It is not intended there should be a departure in any respect from the principles to which the Progressive party are wedded. In no way is it to mean an abandonment of the views which the Progressive party have expressed in the House; if any party is to give way it must be the Liberal party. In the third place there is this understanding I believe, with the Progresive party. It will not only support the government as long as the measures introduced are satisfactory to it. That is a very loose agreement. It must be very unsatisfactory to the Prime Minister that he can secure no better treatment from the Progressive party than that which I have indicated. Well might the Prime Minister, as time goes on, say in the words of the psalmist: "I am in jeopardy every hour. Every night I make my bed and water my couch with my tears."

Now, Mr. Speaker, where does this lead us to? It leads us to the conclusion that when the House reassembles on March 15, Progressive measures are to be considered first. The government is to continue to ride in the government car, but the man at the wheel is to be the hon. member for Brandon (Mr. Forke); he is to direct the course which the car will take. Now, I am not going to say that will necessarily be a bad thing. I do not know altogether the views of the Progressive party. Part of my constituency, which was taken out of the former riding of East Peterborough, was represented in the last parliament by a Progressive member, and there are several Progressives now in the present riding, many of whome gave me support. So far as the Progressive party is concerned I have come to parliament with a fairly open mind. My experience tells me that there are generally two sides to every question; and when I find that the Progressive party was composed in the last parliament of sixty1five members—many of whom had broken away from the former political affiliations to assist in forming that group—I cannot but come to the conclusion that there must be something in the Progressive movement. Therefore, speaking personally, I am prepared to give fair consideration to any of the measures that may be introduced on behalf of the Progressive party, without giving any assurance that I will accept them and support them. But there is this to be borne in mind: the Progressive party does not pretend to represent the whole of Canada. With two exceptions the Progressive members in the present House all come from Western provinces and naturally represent western views. But they are only twenty-four in number, a trifle under one-tenth of the representation in this House, and presumably they only represent about that percentage of the people of this country. It may be said by them that they are endeavouring to represent all the people of this country engaged in agricultural pursuits. Admitting that for the sake of argument, it still follows that they only represent about thirty-four per cent of the Canadian people. Now I want to say something, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the other 66 per cent, composed to a very great extent of persons engaged in manual work, persons who are dependent upon industrial employment to enable them to earn the wages necessary to support themselves and their families. I come from a riding which is about two-thirds urban, and one-third rural, and I desire to speak for a few minutes on the subject of protection, which has been discussed so much in this chamber since we met last month.

I wonder if I might venture to say a word or two about the conditions in the city of Peterborough at the time of the election and for some time previous1. There was considerable depression in the city and to be truthful I must say there were depressed conditions not only in the city of Peterborough but in all other urban centres in Canada, I believe, with one or two exceptions. Yet I realize that these conditions can be improved by the adoption of a better protective system than the one now in vogue in this country. There are several factories in the city of Peterborough which require protection. They are exposed at the present time to undue and unfair competition with foreign goods imported into the country and manufactured under conditions which no respectable workman in this country should be subjected to. The depression at any rate exists, and prior to the election some of those factories found it necessary partly to close down and in some cases to work half time. Many men were out of work and times were very hard in Peterborough. Frequently I would meet a man and he would ask me: "For heaven's sake, can you get me a job?" There was no job to be had for him. I am sorry to say.

In connection with and as a result of that condition, many of the people of the city of Peterboro found it desirable to go to the United States and take their families with them. I could give many instances during the few months preceding my election when my attention was particularly directed to that sort of thing. There was one man in whom I was particularly interested, a man I had known for many years, who was born in the county, brought up there, married, with three or four children, a strong, able-bodied middle aged man, able and willing to work. He hunted round for six months, but could not get a job. Finally he went to the States, came back to Canada, reported that he had a job for himself and one of his eldest boys. He sold the little house which he had been given time to pay for; he went away, and probably will never return. I met another man the other day and asked him about his boys. "Oh," he said: "My four boys are all gone and I am left alone." I asked him, "How are they getting on?" He said: "They are over in the States and doing pretty well." There are many cases of that kind. The matter became serious, and as the election approached people became aroused and awakened to the condition of things, realizing that the failure to put up a proper customs tariff against the importation of goods which we were capable of manufacturing in Peterboro was causing the trouble in that city. There was no undue or unfair propaganda, as was suggested by the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. King) in this House the other evening. The facts were plain, and the people realized them. There were men out of employment and there were many cases of people going to the States. It was not necessary to appeal to the people; they appreciated the seriousness of the situation. They appealed to me, I may say, to run in the election and to carry their burdens and present them to this House. What happened? The case was very ably presented for the Liberal side by the then member, a man of great ability and force, a man very well known to this House, I daresay, because in the last Parliament he was Deputy Speaker. He had been returned for that riding in 1921 with over a majority of 2,000, and he was defeated at the last election by nearly the same figure. He presented all the stock arguments of the Liberal party. He pointed to the fact that the Canadian dollar was worth a whole dollar in New York. He dwelt upon the favorable balance of trade between Canada and foreign countries. He asserted with some force that the Government had reduced the taxation of the people. But somehow or other all those assertions did not seem to influence the result; the people were against him. It just shows the folly of endeavoring to prove such and such a thing to be true by statistics. The statistics were there, and his case looked all right on paper, but the machine would not work. The statistics alone did not bring employment to the working people.

And it was not merely in Peterboro that the protectionist principle was adopted by the people. The rural portion of the population in West Peterboro is not particularly antagonistic to the protectionist principle. Nearly half the agriculturists in the rural portion of the riding voted for the Conservative candidate. Not merely West Peterboro, but almost every other riding in Ontario seemed to adopt that protectionist principle and returned Conservative candidates by large majorities. You know, Mr. Speaker, that out of 83 members for the Province of Ontario 69 are seated on this side of the House. The same thing happened in other Provinces. The Maritimes were very strong for the protectionist principle; Manitoba came back into line; British Columbia gave us ten out of fourteen, and Quebec is coming back coyly. That Province is Conservative at heart and protectionist, and it will be only a matter of time before Ontario and Quebec are ranged side by side fighting for protection.

I think I have made a case for the consideration of this question of protection. I am not going into details, but particular instances in which protection is needed have been detailed by other hon. members. I wish to point out, however, that apparently the attention of the Government is beginning to be directed to the necessity for doing something in connection with this protective principle. During the four years that the present Government was in power prior to 1925, the speeches from the throne failed to refer in any way to the tariff question. Now, in view of the discussion and the expression of opinion by the people on that subject, the Speech from the Throne undertakes to deal with the matter in some way, and this particular portion of it begins as follows:

"My Ministers are of the opinion that a general increase in the customs tariff would prove detrimental to the country's continued prosperity and prejudicial to national unity."

If that is supposed to indicate that we on this side of the House are in favor of a general increase in the customs tariff, I for one do not propose to accept it. Speaking for myself, I do not know that a general increase in the customs tariff is required. There are in this country certain industries the nature of which is such that they do not require to be protected by a customs tariff, but there are others which should be protected, and I wish to urge that upon the House. The Speech continues:

"They believe (that is, the Ministers) that in the interest of industrial development every effort should be made to eliminate the element of uncertainty with respect to tariff changes."

This uncertainty with reference to tariff changes is profoundly affecting the country. There is a feeling on the part of people engaged in or proposing to engage in industry that some tariff changes may take place which will be prejudicial to the industries which they are carrying on or propose to carry on. We have all heard the views of the Hon. Mr. Dunning, who, I believe, is about to take his place in this House as Minister of Railways and Canals.

Some hon. members: "Not yet."

Some hon. members: "Oh, yes."

Mr. Peck: "He must be elected, of course. I presume if he is not elected in the constituency which has been set aside for him by Mr. Darke, he will keep on until he finds some place in which he can take shelter. We all know his views, because he came to Ontario during the last election and gave expression to them. He has the satisfaction of knowing that wherever he spoke a Conservative candidate was elected. He expressed the view that there should be a reduction in the tariff and a similar idea was given expression to by the Hon. Vincent Massey—a great friend of the Prime Minister—who, it is suggested, is also going to endeavor to obtain a seat in this House. There is thus the element of uncertainty and there will be continued uncertainty until this policy of protection is fully adopted by the House and steps are taken to put the tariff on a sound footing.

"Then this portion of the Speech concludes:

"'A tariff advisory board will accordingly be appointed forthwith. This board will be expected to make a careful study of the customs tariff, the revenue to be derived therefrom and the effect of the tariff and allied factors on industry and agriculture.'

"That, if the expression is not unparliamentary, is simply passing the buck. The matter is to be referred to a commission and everything will consequently be postponed for another year, or possibly longer. I do not think it is the wish of the people that action upon this tariff question should be postponed; I believe the people want the adjustment of the tariff to be taken up and dealt with immediately. I do not see any reason why a special tariff commission should be appointed. There are in this House members who are capable of serving on committees and making their own investigations, and I have very strong objection to the appointment of a commission by any party if that can possibly be avoided. Hon. members who are here representing the people are an intelligent set of men, and I am quite sure a committee could be selected from members on all sides of this House who would give this matter fair and impartial consideration and within a reasonable time recommend such changes in the tariff as would give effect to the wishes of the people.

"In the Speech from the Throne there are many other matters with which I might deal, but I do not wish to do so now because I do not want to get away from the question of protection; for it is important that that matter should be considered in the interest of the people. I have, therefore, risen tonight to express in a general way my views in this regard, and my hope that a matter of such importance to many people in this country will not be side-tracked even for measures of interest and value to the Progressive party."

Mr. Millar: "Considering that during the years 1914, 1915, 1916 and until March, 1917, the United States were reaping hundreds of millions of dollars of profit by manufacturing munitions for the Allies and had not a man in the field, while during the same period Canada was paying out hundreds of millions of dollars and had hundreds of thousands of men in the field, is it not a little unfair to point to the fact that conditions just after the war was over were better in the United States than in Canada?"

Mr. Peck: "I do not remember making any comparison between the United States and Canada. I recognize the fact that the United States by reason of their keeping out of the war so long are in a much better position financially than Canada. We must try to overcome that, but we cannot do so by continuing to buy United States or European goods manufactured by cheap labor. The increase in the value of manufactured goods coming into this country was shown in a recent article in the Financial Post. That article pointed out that although Canada was apparently improving in some respects, the quantity of manufactured goods which we could make in this country was increasing. If we could arrange to manufacture in Canada the goods which we require for use by our people, this trouble about lack of employment and all the troubles incident thereto would be avoided."

Mr. Millar: "Was there not in the hon. member's remarks the implication that conditions were better in the United States than in Canada and for that reason our people were going to the United States to seek employment?"

Mr. Peck: "There is no question that the United States, which is a tariff country, is prospering."

HIGHWAY TAXES BURDEN FARMERS TO THE ADVANTAGE OF CITIES, SAYS PROGRESSIVE IN ONTARIO HOUSE

Farmers Pay 41 and Cities 3 Per Cent. of Highway Cost.

FORD NOW A CITY

Railway to be Built From Haliburton to Mattawa.

TORONTO, February 26. Canadian Press. — The debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne was carried on in the Legislature on Thursday by R. R. Kemp, (Prog. Lincoln), and M. M. McBride (Con. Port Arthur.) The latter spoke at some length on waterways and asked the Liberals to prod up the Liberals at Ottawa and get action on the St. Lawrence development.

Mr. Kemp contended that the agricultural portions of Ontario were paying more than their share of taxation for provincial roads and provincial education. He also urged the government to start a system of fruit grading as they were grading cream and milk. He charged that fruit buyers were changing the grades on fruits in Ontario when they sold to the consumers and that number two apples became number one when the fruit men sold them.

Mr. McBride then charged the Drury government with trying to block progress in Hydro affairs and the Liberals at Ottawa with ignoring appeals for relief in unemployment matters.

Many private bills were introduced including one by K. K. Homuth (Lab. South Waterloo) to make the Lemieux Act effective in Ontario. Another bill proposed will amalgamate Western and Grace hospitals, Toronto.

Ford Becomes City.

Karl Homuth introduced a bill incorporating Ford, Ont., as a city.

Before the orders of the day were called, Z. Mageau of Sturgeon Falls, drew the attention of the Attorney-General to charges that a liquor operative had used a returned veteran's button to aid him in getting a conviction.

"I want to know," said Mr. Mageau, "if the Attorney General intends to go on hiring these scoundrels?"

Premier Ferguson: "Don't make a speech."

The Speaker: "I dont think the officials should be referred to in that way. Put the question."

Mr. Mageau: "I am putting the question. What I want to know is: does the attorney general intend to employ such citizens of disrepute? I use that term if the other one is not regarded as parliamentary."

Mr. Nickle: "All I have to say is that I deny the allegation and that I intend to hire such officers as are necessary to enforce the O.T.A."

Haliburton Railway.

J. R. Marking introduced a bill which would enable the Schroeder Lumber Company to build a logging railway from Haliburton to Mattawa. The company is now negotiating for the purchase of six townships from a concern which has held them for years. The railway to be built first as a logging road will be made standard gauge in time if the conditions warrant it.

Praise for McCrea.

F. H. Keefer continued the debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne. He gave Hon. Chas. McCrea credit for a great revival in the mining industry, and said that the Minister was held almost affectionately by those in the Northern country. For every dollar put out by the Mines Department the province go three back. Mr. Keefer spoke at some length about the possibilities of the country, stating that cattle raising could be carried on right up to the shores of Hudson Bay.

Not Frozen North.

"The district of Patricia, in which the Red Lake mining area is situatted, is equal in size to the whole of Northern Ostario," declared F. H. Keefer, Conservative, Port Arthur, in resuming the debate on the speech from the throne.

"And it is not a hopeless area, outside of mining, as is generally supposed," asserted Mr. Keefer, who is also legislative secretary for Northern Ontario. "Cattle can graze on the shores of James Bay and on the average it is warmer there than on the shores of Lake Superior.

Mr. Keefer drew a glowing picture of th mining industry and wealth of Northern Ontario and of Ontario's leadership in several kinds of minerals.

Claims too Much Credit.

R. H. Kemp (Prog. Lincoln) said that the opposition was ready to support the government in its St. Lawrence development. "The government however is slow to acquaint us with its policy on this question, as it is on many others," said Mr. Kemp. He said that the government was taking too much credit to itself for the development of Northern Ontario. Other governments had done as much for it and all parties had done their share at development. Taxation and education were the big problems before Ontario in Mr. Kemp's opinion.

Mr. Kemp opposed the bill for township school boards stating that the small school sections would be the losers by such a system.

Toronto Escapes Taxes.

Continuing his contentions that taxation was unequal and imposed more burden on the farmer than he should bear Mr. Kemp said that of the provincial highway expenditure, the agriculturists were paying 41 per cent., while the cities paid but three per cent.

"Toronto should pay more," he continued. "Six per cent. of the highways are within 100 miles of Toronto and Toronto people do not have to pass over mud roads to get to them."

He contended that not one cent of the motor license fees was earmarked for highways. It is this unjust taxation that is driving the boys from the farm, and to-day retired farmers are going to the cities to escape taxation. Mr. Kemp said the advisory road committee of the government was arbitrary in its decisions with counties and townships.

If a man's fortune does not fit him, it is like the shoe in the story if too large it trips him up, if too small it pinches him. —Horace.

We judge others according to results; how else?—not knowing the process by which results are arrived at. —George Eliot.

TEA MEETING.

Members of Gospel Hall Sunday School Braved Bad Weather.

In spite of the terrible rain and bad walking, almost every member of the Sunday school turned out to the annual tea. After a splendid supper, a ladies' quartette sang "The Last Song." The ladies taking part were Miss E. Wells and Mrs. G. Hartshorn, soprano, Miss Ada Loyd and Miss Helen Mulligan contralto.

A very realistic lantern talk was given by Mr. Hartshorn. The subject was "Dick and His Donkey" and the story brought many useful lessons for the young mind to take in. Some recitations and a number of choruses closed a very happy evening.

Unless you bear with the faults of a friend, you betray your own. — Syrus.

OPENING OF BRITISH HOUSE

More than usual interest was displayed in the state opening of the British parliament, since it was the first public appearance of their majesties since the death of Dowager Queen Alexandra and great crowds seized the opportunity to show their sympathy with the King and Queen. The above photograph shows the state coach in the procession passing across the Horse Guards parade on the return from the opening.

HEROIC RESCUE OF BUSH FIRE VICTIMS

150 Persons Hemmed in Post Office in Australia.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb. 26—One hundred and fifty men, women and children, who took refuge in the post office building at King Lake, while the remainder of the town was swept by a great bush fire, have been rescued after being surrounded by the flames for six hours.

The story of the rescue is among the most thrilling in the annals of Australia. Hemmed in by the flaming bush, the outlying buildings in the little town caught like tinder, and the inhabitants fled to the post-office, the most substantial structure in the place.

News of their plight reached Queenstown, and a rescue party made a wild dash in automobiles over burning bridges, and along fire swept roads partially blocked by fallen trees.

Through this inferno the rescuers reached the imprisoned company, and brought them all out to safety, without the loss of a single life.

Despite the gallantry of the rescue, there was no more heroic figure in the episode than the postmistress of King Lake, whose name is missing from the press despatches thus far received.

Throughout the long hours while the town was burning about her, she stuck to her post, telephoning to the outside world, telling of the progress of the flames and giving directions for the fire-fighters and rescuers.

Finally the wires were burned away, after which she turned her energies to the task of cheering up and sustaining the courage of those who had taken refuge in the building. Late despatches say the bush fires in the Queenstown district have been checked at least temporarily, by a change in the wind.

WAS SERPENT REAL IN GARDEN OF EDEN?

Dutch Pastor in Trial For Heresy in Sermon.

ASSEN, Holland, Feb. 26.—Rev. J. G. Geelkerken, on trial for heresy by the General Synod of the Dutch Reformed Church Wednesday, appeared before the Synod for a verbal examination, the feature of which was the point blank question whether he believed the serpent of the Biblical account of the Garden of Eden was "a real creeping creature." The pastor is alleged to have cast doubt in a sermon on the Genesis story of Eve and the serpent.

Amid dead silence Rev. Mr. Geelkerken replied that he believed what is recorded in Holy Writ, although he did not know the term "serpent" should be interpreted here. He asserted that he believed the traditional interpretation of the secessionist-Calvinist Church, namely, that it was a real animal, was quite possible, but he also admitted that he had believed that the serpent was a figurative representation of the devil.

Demands Liberty.

The defendant, however, declined to commit himself on this point, on the ground that he was no expert on the Old Testament. He then demanded that he be fully rehabilitated on the Church and that all pastors be given liberty of interpretation. He already has submitted a typewritten reply of 45 sheets to 19 questions submitted to him on points of dogma.

Rev. Mr. Geelkerken has received many messages of sympathy from England, Germany and the United States.

ARMY ESTIMATES OUT OF POLITICS

Hope of Canadian Artillery Association This Year.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—For the first time an attempt will be made this year to lift consideration of militia estimates out of the political arena, declared Major General J. H. MacBrien, Chief of General Staff, who spoke to the Canadian Artillery Association in annual session in the city hall.

Hon. E. N. MacDonald, Minister of National Defense, yesterday paid a high tribute to the enthusiasm shown by the Association in furthering their particular branch of the service. He promised to do his utmost to obtain sufficient funds from the Government this year to maintain the efficiency of the artillery and enable it to carry on intensive training. In regard to the Association's desire to get back the blue uniforms, the Minister said he hoped before long to see each branch of the militia service properly arrayed. He expressed the view that people were merging from the hysteria of wars and had gone to the other extremes, a feeling existing that there should not be much expended on militia or defence.

Explaining his plan to remove the estimates from politics this year, General MacBrien said that two months ago he had recommended to the Minister of National Defence that the Department be permitted to submit its estimates to a committee of the House, such as the Public Accounts committee and after the hearing heads of the Departments this committee be allowed to make recommendations to the House. In this way they would get ahead more rapidly. He thought the outlook was promising, for the Artillery Association getting a larger appropriation to enable them to increase their training.

Major General E. C. Ashton, Quarter-Master General, said his department was not increasing its estimates, in order that any increase granted might be devoted to training, which was greeted with applause.

BOWLING AT K. OF C. ALLEYS

Last evening, at the Knights of Columbus' bowling alleys, the Tulips (Miss Josephine Hunt, captain) took two games out of three from the Bluebells (Miss Gertrude Doyle, captain). Miss M. Lynch of the Bluebells had high score of 189.

ADDRESS ON LEAGUE OF NATIONS GIVEN AT MEETING IN OMEMEE

M. Godfrey Tells Young People's Society About Organization.

WELL DESCRIBED

Purpose, Functions and Methods Are All Touched On.

OMEMEE, Feb. 26—Through the instrumentality of Mr. F. G. Sandy the Young People's League of the United Church were successful in securing the services of J. M. Godfrey, K.C., of Toronto, a representative of the League of Nations committee of Canada, to give an address on that subject on Friday evening.

F. G. Sandy acted as chairman and after a few brief remarks introduced the speaker, who before commencing his subject referred to his early boyhood days which were spent in Omemee, when his father was pastor of the present Methodist Church which was under erection at that time. He recalled many reminiscences, some of which were pleasant, while others were somewhat gruesome.

With these few remarks, he introduced his subject by referring to warlike relationships of the past. Wars have always been frequent. From the year 1876 to the year 1914, a period of 38 years, there were 14 wars, due to lack of invention to prevent them. Canadians did not realize this scourge, because war never touched their threshold nor its shadow never penetrated their hearts until the World War.

Ever since the Christian Era, war has cost the world $20,000 an hour each day and yet nothing has been done. It is eight years since the war ended and the cost to Canada today is $15,000 an hour, and it will go on as long as the youngest child today will live before the debt will be wiped off. In all the scourges of society, there is nothing as horrible as war. If another war broke out, it would be much worse than the last. Germany during the Great War dropped tons of explosives, and look at the damage which resulted therefrom. France, at the present time, is prepared should war break out between Great Britain and France, to drop within a day's notice, 50 tons and within a week would be able to drop at the rate of 60 tons a night. Neither the cost nor the horrors of war were realized.

When the Pewers met in Versailles in 1919, they met to conclude a Treaty of Peace, and find an invention to prevent war. Fourteen allied countries appointed 19 leading men who spent three months, trying to find a plan. They finally brought forward the Covenant of the League of Nations; an agreement for all the nations of the world to enter to establish peace. With some amendments, it was signed by the Allied forces, neutral nations were called in, then others have since come in, and now 55 nations are members of the League, and next month Germany is to be admitted, being a total of 56 nations with the United States, Mexico, Russia and Turkey, the only countries outside.

The preamble of the Covenant of the League of Nations is:

"An agreement between the countries of the world to promote international co-operation and to achieve national peace and security by the acceptance of the obligation, not to go to war, by open, just and honorable relation between nations; to understand international law and the maintenance of justice and respect for the treaties of the organization."

If this covenant is broken by any nation the sanction of punishment is that the nation is declared an outlaw and is interdicted by all others in the League.

Organization of the League.

A permanent secretariat, or business oraganization of the League, is established at Geneva, where hundreds of departments are dealing with the different matters that come before the League. This great international Parliament meets once a year, on the first Monday in September, and is composed of three members sent by each Government. For one month, all questions, which the nations bring before them for the benefit of man are dealt with. The Council, composed of six or seven permanent members, meets when the assembly is not in session every two months, or may be called at any time of emergency.

The purpose of the Independent International Labor Bureau is to promote the cause of the worker, striving to establish over the world the eight-hour day system and to improve the conditions of children in factories raise the age, etc.

At The Hague a permanent Court of International Justice is established where nations may enter their grievances. Spain and Portugal recently submitted a case to court over the Guadiana River. Many other decisions have been satisfactorily given and it has proved a great benefit in keeping the peace of the world.

The cost of the maintenance of the League of Nations to Canada, who contributes her share, is 1½c a year to each individual, or a total cost of $150,000.

The first assembly of the League of Nations was held in 1920, at Geneva, and since then there have been six assemblies held. Hon. Sir George Foster was the first representative from Canada, and since then, Sir Robert Borden and Hon. N. W. Rowell have been among the representatives, and at the present time the Hon. Senator R. Dandurand, of Montreal, brings honor to Canada by holding the Presidency of the assembly of the League of Nations.

The Accomplishments

After the Treaty of Versailles, Europe was left in a state of unrest, with the old hatreds of war still there. The last six years have been a most difficult period and great credit is due the League of Nations for restoring peaceful relationships at many times.

Many instances were related by the speaker where the League of Nations had been able to stop a war.

The first reference was to the Aaland Islands in the Baltic; off Sweden. These islands belonged to Finland but the inhabitants were Swedes who wanted to belong to Sweden. The two nations almost went to war. The difficulties were submitted to a council of legal experts who gave the land to Finland. The council made the following settlement: Finland gave the people local autonomy, their own language, customs, and religions and make the territory a neutral zone in case of war. Both accepted the settlement and secured peace.

The second reference was between Serbia and Albania. These two countries, which had agreed to the preamble, had invaded their neighbors' terrtiory and burned about 80 villages. The matter was referred to the secretariat at Geneva. A conference was called to meet in three days and representatives of both countries were ordered to be present. Previous to this, there had been no such machinery whereby similar questions might be settled. In 2' hours the Serbian army had withdrawn and a commission was appointed to limit the boundary between the countries.

A third reference was where Greece invaded Bulgaria. Greece was found to blame and had to pay indemnities.

A fourth was between Greece and Italy.

The financial stability of Austria was saved from ruin by the League of Nations, which was a magnificent undertaking. After the world war she was isolated, her trading limited and her country robbed. The nations had lent many millions of dollars to her. The League of Nations devised a plan whereby Austria agreed to cut down her expenses. In two years, she was able to balance her budget, re-established her trade and now she is one of the prosperous countries of the world.

The speaker briefly referred to the Dawes plan.

After the flu "typhus" spread from Germany. This had to be controlled from America and by expending $200,000 from Canada it was stopped on the borders of Poland and the disease was scourged. The drug traffic has also been lessened. These are some of the accomplishments of the League of Nations where, with nations helping one another, the world is being made a better place to live in.

The League of Nations cannot be a success unless each does a part. If people prepare for war—war will follow and if they prepare for peace—peace will most likely follow. They must establish the peace habit, which of these is to be decided by the nations of the world.

Sir Robert Borden was the first President to organize the League of Nations in Canada. Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Robert Forke, M.P., and Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen are honorary presidents. Strong public opinion, said the speaker, must be established among the people to make the League a success. People may become members and get others to. The church may become a corporate member for $10.

"International co-operation of the League of Nations is the greatest thing next to the coming of Christ that ever happened," said Mr. Godfrey. Christianity is being tried in the League of Nations and what is wanted is to realize the magnificent ideas which are behind this great institution. Regard it, he urged, as part of church work, as foreign mission or Sunday School work that peace may be established throughout the world.

Mr. Godfrey closed his splendid address by a plea that each might do his or her part to back the League of Nations up so that "Nation shall not war with nation, neither shall they learn the art of war any more."

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Godfrey by Harry Lamb in a neat speech and seconded by Rev. E. W. Rowland, and was heartily enodrsed by the congregation. Rev. A. T. Weir also expressed appreciation and pleasure for the enlightenment that had been received on this subject

Other special numbers on the programme were a duet by Misses Katie and Mary Weir and an organ number by Mrs. Cecil Corneil both of which were deeply appreciated.

LECUTRE ON USE OF GAS IS GIVEN

Speaker at Engineers Meet Opposed To Burning Raw Coal,

TOO MUCH WASTE.

An exceedingly interesting lecture on coal and its uses was presented last night by G. W. Allen, secretary treasurer of the Canadian Gas Association, at a joint meeting of the Engineers and the Chamber of Commerce in the Board Room of the latter association. Harry L. Beal, the local superintendent of the gas department, acted as chairman. At the conclusion of the meeting J. Wells Fraser proposed a motion of thanks for the instructive address, and extended an invitation to the speaker to come again at any time.

Mr. Allen stressed the fact that considerable wastage had characterized the use of many of what were at one time considered limitless resources to the extent that to-day the nations of the world are faced with a power shortage. There has been considerable waste in the handling of natural gas. On some occasions when drilling operations were being made for oil natural gas wells were struck. Instead of being capped and the gas conserved for future use the wells were allowed to run wild, the gas being pumped to some place where it would not interfere with the people living in that particular locality. There had been no research work done with a view toward conserving the natural supply so that a very valuable fuel had gone to waste and it was now necessary to establish great manufacturing plants in the places where the supply of natural gas, if proper precautions had been taken, would have served as fuel for years to come. Even the cases where it had been used to any extent no research work has been carried out with the object of discovering better methods of using it so that in most cases ten cubic feet had been burned where one would have served as well.

It was the same with the Hydro power developed at Niagara. Its very cheapness resulted in wastage so that now the peak loads of the day are created by the household use of current for heat and light and not by the demand of manufacturing concerns.

The speaker declared that Sir Adam Beck had seen the need for co-operation between the Hydro, which he sponsored, and the gas-coking industry. If business were to pick up to the extent which prevailed before the war, the country would be faced with a definite power shortage due solely to the place which electric current had won in the people's homes. He declared that if one does not pay for a commodity it is not appreciated and when that happens waste naturally follows.

The feature of waste is also applicable to the coal industry where millions of tons have been used in the raw state and not passed through a coking plant which can extract so many useful materials and still leave an excellent fuel. In the United States coal was the supply was rapidly becoming depleted. Two hundred of the available four hundred square miles was already used up and the seams left were difficult to mine because the seams were narrow and the coal of a poorer quality.

In conjunction with his lecture Mr. Allen had a splendid selection of lantern slides which he used to good advantage to illustrate the progress of the coking industry from the time of the earliest investigations to the present day period of mammoth coking plants. One of the slides depicted the local plant. Charts were shown to indicate the growth of the industry, the projects which might be obtained by coking, and the waste which characterized the wholesale burning of raw coal.

The speaker concluded by saying that the gas flame should be utilized to a greater extent than it now is because it is able to do many things better than any known source of heat.

HOT OR COLD BATHS?

A hasty glance at the statistics of water consumption in Peterborough presented at the meeting of the Utilities Commission would convey the impression that a Florida city is reported. If these figures leak out it is probable that Peterborough will be mistaken for a winter resort where summer conditions prevail in January.

For, if the figures do not lie, Peterborough people drank 5,000,000 gals more water in January last year than they did in July. Or they may have had 340,000 more baths in January than in July—which is an allowance of 15 baths more for every person in Peterborough in 31 days in Mid winter than in 31 days in mid-summer

The figures are:

January.....87,790,000 gallons.
July.....82,565,00 gallons.

NATIONS CLAIM COUNCIL SEATS

Members of British Cabinet Ready To Support Poland.

SPAIN INSISTENT.

LONDON, Feb. 26.— (Canadian Press.)— The Westminster Gazette says that several members of the Cabinet oppose the claim of Poland and other nations to a permanent seat in the Council of the League, but a majority of the cabinet would be ready to support Sir Austen Chamberlain at Geneva if he favored these claims.

SPAIN INSISTS ON SEAT.

MADRID, Feb. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—Spain insists on becoming a permanent member of the League of Nations Council when it meets in Geneva on March 8th. Foreign Minister Yanguas, in a statement published in La Nacion, the Government newspaper, cites various reasons in support of the Spanish claim.

EARNINGS INCREASED.

C.N.R. Net Earnings Show a Decided Increase Over Those of 1924.

MONTREAL, Feb. 26.—(Canadian Press.)— Final figures, showing the complete statement of operating results during 1925 were announced yesterday by the Canadian National Railways. These figures show that the net earnings of the system during the last year were $32 264,414.79 as compared with $17,244,251.48 or a net increase of $15,020,163.31.

During the twelve months ending Dec. 31, 1925, the operating ratio was 86.83 per cent., as compared with 92.68 per cent. in 1924, and 91.92 per cent. in 1923.

SPRINGVILLE W.M.S. HELD PRAYER DAY

Ladies Gathered at Home of Mrs. J. Grandy, Cavan.

SPRINGVILLE, Feb. 26. — The Springville W.F.M.S. junior and senior, held their day of prayer service at the home of Mrs. J. Grandy, Cavan. The meeting despite the cold day was remarkably well attended, there being 22 ladies present, and all who were thus privileged could not help but feel "that it was good for them to be there."

The service was under the able leadership of their new resident, Mrs. M. Johnson, who opened the meeting by speaking briefly of its characters and purpose.

Mrs. S. Staples read the Scripture lesson and the following ladies led in prayer: Mrs. A. E. Sanderson, Mrs. William Whitfield, Mrs. J. Grandy, Mrs. R. Robertson, Mrs. A. Hunter, Miss Annie Brown and Mrs. M. Johnson.

Mrs. Grandy and Miss Southam accompanied by Miss A. Brown sang pleasantly the very appropriate hymn "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

The meeting was closed by the Doxology and the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison.

The hostess of the occasion then served refreshments and Master Clarmont Morgan entertained the gathering with a reading and a musical selection.

SMALLPOX SPREADS IN MEXICAN TOWNS

Many Deaths Are Reported and Authorities Order Vaccination.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Feb. 26.—(Canadian Press.)— With smallpox spreading through Vera Cruz at an alarming rate, the municipal authorities have begun a campaign agains tthe spread of the disease. Orders have been issued to vaccinate everyone.

Reports from the Isthmus of Tehuantepec state that black smallpox has broken out there and many deaths have occurred. News from Orizaba mentions that in adjacent villages many cases have been found.

WE FURNISH THE HOME COMPLETE

The ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin. —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

S. A. S.—You have always liked to take the lead in anything and to see that those about you were inclined to your way of thinking. But your life has been one of reserved retirement, and you have had a liking for the mystic and occult side of existence. You are kind hearted and very careful in money matters. A promise with you is absolutely sacred. People are drawn to you, but you do not care for much demonstration of affection. You have original ideas and are fond of travel. You are not especially robust and should take special care of your health at all times. Dress always as well as your means will allow.

You were born on Tuesday. Your color is flame in all its variations.

W. P. K. (Mike).—As you are still quite young, I am going to warn you that you are of the type that has a dual nature and you must watch constantly that the highest elements in your nature are in power, to attain success and happiness. By nature, you wish to lead always, and have a strong, active nature, just a little inclined to disregard the rights of others and to be self-centred. But you have a quality of reserve and retirement that nullifies at times your natural ability, and will have to fight shyness and morbidity. You will always suffer from the wish to be doing something else than what you are engaged in at the time and will be suspicious, easily offended and inclined to whine and nag. If you demand that your better nature rule, you can be a great power for good. You would make a good doctor, scientist or minister. Study cheerfulness and steadfastness, begin important things in April or August and preferably on Friday. Marry a girl born in February or November, and resolve to be agreeable rather than dictatorial with her.

You were born on Wednesday. Your color is flame.

C. Z.—You are quite well satisfied with yourself and possess poise to a great extent. You are conservative by nature and not inclined to look with favor on new enterprises. You like to study religion and occultism. You should have a great deal of success in business or financial world as your stars point to attainment in these ways. With a destiny that is rather favorable, you combine some natural qualities that are not at all good. You are not at all easy to get along with and resent interference, even if well-meant, with great intensity. You become jealous over imaginary slights and can be extremely tantalizing and tormenting with those you do not admire. You are keen at reading the minds of those about you, and are whimsical, fickle and changeable to the last degree. You will destroy some of your best chances in life by jealousy, anger and caprice, which will have a sad effect on your destiny, unless you resolve now to control it. You are fiery rather than affectionate, and should remember that "he who dances must pay the fiddler"—always. Never take drugs or stimulants of any sort.

You were born on Tuesday. The day you ask about is past. Your colors are purple and steel.

M. E. V. S.—You are naturally inclined to be reserved and retired in your ways. You do not care much about embarking on anything new. Yes, you would make a good mystic. The occult appeals to you, but so does religion. Why not cultivate the latter rather than the former? Delving in psychic phenomena does not always mean success, and your stars do not point to success of a material type, anyway. Your attainment in life will come through the use of diplomacy, rather than of force. Cleverness will get what you want, rather than the mailed fist. You are not happy when alone, and pictures and luxuries will never take the place of companions with you. To be happy and successful, you must practise self-control, patience and care in what you eat. Do not worry over imaginary slights.

You were born on Thursday. Your colors are steel and brick shades.

J. T. T.—You have a kind nature, but independent and persevering, and should be especially fortunate in commercial enterprises. Although you may not achieve overmuch in a material way in life, although your innate powers should make for a certain measure of success for you, you will be one of those to whom others look for leadership, understanding and sympathy. It is a pleasant destiny that lies before you. You are a tireless worker, and will do better for yourself than when harnessed to others. Perseverance is a strong point in your character. You would make a good merchant, superintendent or engineer of big works. Practise control of your temper, and avoid at all times the company of scolders and fault-finders. Change of scenery and a certain amount of excitement are good for you. Marry a girl born in May, July, February or November, and begin important undertakings in March or November, preferably on Tuesday or Saturday. Yes, you were born on Sunday. Your colors are gold and violet.

KEEPING U. S. A. MOIST.

Ice floes and blizzards make no difference to the liquor exporters operating from Port Dalhousie to points on the American shore of Lake Ontario east of the Niagara river with rye whiskey for Niagara Falls, New York and Buffalo. Not one day this winter has the channel been frozen over. In the upper picture, eight freight car loads of whiskey are shown on the siding beside the C.N.R. station and one of the tugs loaded with 250 cases. Below are shown men taking away the empty cases in trucks.

LOCAL FACTORIES VISITED BY STIRLING AGRICULTURAL CLASS

Accompanied By Instructors at Short Course—Skating Rink Prospering.

STIRLING, Feb. 24—On Thursday last about twenty students of the agricultural classes being held here were given a trip to Peterborough. They were accompanied by District Representative Atkin and some of the instructors. The purpose of the visit was to inspect the hospital, Quaker Oats factory, Packing plant, and other institutions of that city.

Mrs. Elmer Sandercock, who recently purchased the Judd block is fitting it up and will move his grocery and butcher shop to his new quarters soon.

A financial statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Stirling Skating and Curling Association ending January 22, 1926, has been ssued, which shows the Association to be in a prosperous condition financially. The expenditures have been $5920.02 with a balance in the bank of $689.60 on the above date.

The choir of St. Paul's United Church and a number of their friends had supper at the church on Wednesday evening prior to choir practice.

Library Board Annual

The Public Library Board held their annual meeting last week. Mrs. (Dr.) Potts who has been at the head ot the Board for over twelve years, gave an excellent report of the work accomplished during the past year, showing that the library had been patronized to a greater extent than any previous year. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the president for her encouraging report. The treasurer, C. R. Bastedo, gave his report which was also of a gratifying nature.

The W. M. S. of the United Church are preparing for a banquet to be held in the basement of their church on Friday evening. The speaker of the evening will be the Rev. J. L. Stewart of Toronto, formerly a missionary in China, and author of the story "The Laughing Buddha" now running in the "New Outlook."

The service in connection with the Women's Day of Prayer was held last Friday afternoon in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, being well attended. The following congregations were represented, St. John's Anglican, St. Paul's United. St. Andrew's Presbtyerian, and Mount Pleasant United Church. In addition to the suggested program Mrs. (Dr.) Alger sang a solo and Mrs. (Rev.) W. H. Stevens of Ratona, New Mexico, gave an excellent prayer.

BATTERYLESS SET ELIMINATES HUM

Perfecting of Invention Largely Result of Canadian Engineer's Research Work.

BY JAMES MONTAGNES

Another dream has come true in the radio world with the perfecting of the batteryless set, over which concerts may now be received with a volume and clearness of tone equal to that of the best of the battery supplied receivers.

To the extensive research conducted by a Canadian company may be given the credit for the elimination of the hum which in times past was noticeable in the batteryless set. This hum is absent now regardless of whether an outside aerial is used or whether the electric light wires are employed as an aerial.

These sets are similar to any others of their kind on the market—with the usual differences denoting a difference in manufacture—except for one feature; whereas the ordinary sets use batteries of some type or other, this set utilizes the electric house-current. This is accomplished by means of special apparatus, part of which was invented, and all of it perfected, by a young Canadian radio engineer.

Instead of the usual radio tubes, special ones are required for this set. They are built to be heated by the alternating electric current found in most homes. The filaments are made of an element which heats on the same principle as the element in an electric heater, and this allows the application of alternating current, doing away with the "A" battery or filament battery found in the ordinary sets.

Replacing the high voltage or "B" battery is a source of direct current of the right voltage derived from the alternating current through rectifiers. These rectifiers are specially built vacuum tubes and following them come a series of filters which smooth out any remaining effects of the alternating current, making the whole into a really good substitute for the "B" battery. All this apparatus is held in a small metal box and has its place in the set.

The results attained are extraordinary, to say the least, when it is considered that a year ago no such apparatus was to be procured except in a laboratory, and there only for scientific research.

Now it may be bought with a radio receiver, installed in the house and all that is necessary is to plug the receiver into a lamp in the same manner that electric irons, heaters, toasters, etc., are plugged in.

It will readily be seen the cost of upkeep is at a minimum when using this battery eliminator. Formerly it would have been necessary to buy new batteries at various times—not often, but still they had to be bought—and the storage battery had to be kept charged. With the eliminators, the cost of operation every night per week for several hours would not amount to the cost of keeping one room in a house lit for the same period. Besides the eliminator installed in the radio receivers, separate units are also available and one may turn their battery received into a batteryless one by buying any one of the several makes on the market.

DUNSFORD PERSONALS

DUNSFORD, Feb. 25.— Miss Stella Sanderson of Lindsay was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Brien over the week end.

Many from this community were at Mr. Sweet's sale of farm stock and implements on Monday.

Mr. Wm. Myers has been kept quite busy on the road with his snowplough this last while owing to so much stormy weather.

Mr. and Mrs. James McGahey entertained a number of young people at their home last Thursday evening. They spent the evening in games and dancing and all report a real good time.

Misses Nora and Winnie Cross spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Melville Brien.

Mr. Cyril Elliott is spending a few days in Toronto.

Mrs. W. J. Thurston is holidaying with friends in Lindsay.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Strowd of Lindsay spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Thurston.

Miss Pearl Brien is spending a few days in Lindsay.

Masters John and Joe McFeeters spent the week end with their aunt, Mrs. Walter Thurston.

Rev. Mr. Gardener of Toronto spent the past week visiting Dunsford friends. He took the service in the Anglican church on Sunday afternoon, which was very well attended.

Bobcaygeon school boys journeyed to Dunsford on Saturday and played a game of hockey with the locals. The score was a tie, 1-1, so the boys are looking forward to another game in the near future.

Many of the farmers are quite busy these days getting ready for the seed fair and street carnival to be held in Bobcaygeon next Saturday, February 27th.

Mr. Wm. Myers was a business visitor to Lindsay on Monday.

The boys are busy preparing for the hockey tournament to be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. They are looking forward to a big time.

The Baker Cup which is to be played for has been held by the Strollers of Lindsay during the past year.

DUAL PASTORATE TO BE CONCLUDED

Rev. Mr. Brenner to Leave Trinity Church in Charge of Rev. Dr. Brown.

COBOURG, Feb. 26. — It is expected that the dual pastorate of Rev. Dr. Alfred Brown and Rev. W. A. Bremner at Trinity United Church, Cobourg, will not be continued beyond the present conference year, and that Rev. Dr. Brown will remain as pastor here, and Rev. W. A. Bremner will take up work elsewhere. The dual pastorate has been very harmonious since entered upon, and both ministers are popular with the congregation of Trinity United Church.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

CORINNE GRIFFITH
Charming Film Star
Secret of her beautiful hair

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, which is pure and greaseless, and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensie, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

Mrs. J. W. Thrush

Hamilton, Ont.—"For over three years I suffered with severe nervous headaches. When I would get these spells I would have to give up and go to bed. They would occur about every two weeks. I tried everything I heard of but got no relief until I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and the 'Pleasant Pellets.' By the time I had taken two bottles I found a wonderful improvement, and four bottles overcame the trouble. I have never since suffered from headaches of any sort."—Mrs. J. W. Thrush, 41 Margarett St.

Go to your neighborhood drug store at once and obtain this Prescription in tablets or liquid, or send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont., for trial package.

ORLAND NEWS

ORLAND, Feb. 22.—Patrick McCaulay, while tending a wood sawing outfit at his place, endeavored to remove some pieces from under the saw and had one thumb so badly lacerated that the doctor, who was summoned from Trenton, had to remove it.

Mrs. Henry Tackaberry, one of the oldest persons in this vicinity, passed away suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wesley Coombs, at Hilton, about three miles south of here. She was born on Cramahe Hill ninety-six years ago and has spent all her lifetime in the immediate vicinity. She leaves three children to mourn her loss, Alva of Codrington, Chester of Brighton and Mrs. W. Coombs of Hilton. Before marrying Henry Tackaberry, who predeceased her about seven years, she was Miss Louisa Carr.

David Wright is having an auction sale and is moving to Brighton, where he has purchased a home.

Mr. Gaffield, of Dundonald, has leased the Palen farm and is moving this week.

Harold Sheppard is moving from the Palen farm to Geo. Bogg's farm, which he has leased for a year.

Geo. Bogg, having rented his farm, is moving to Codrington where he has rented Joseph Hyde's farm.

Geo. Yarrow, who moved from this locality over a year ago to a farm near Hastings, has returned and is living in what is locally known as the Roddy house.

Willet Simpson and son Earl are in Norwood where they are employed in the sawmill.

A very large number of custom logs are being delivered at Willet Simpson's portable sawmill to be made into lumber as soon as Mr. Simpson has finished at Norwood.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Royal Scarlet Chapter was held in the lodge room of L. O. L. No. 620, Wooler, and two candidates were elevated to this illustrious degree.

The ice harvest has given place to the wood harvest, which is in full swing, and owners of sawing outfits are vieing to get the waiting jobs.

Robert Wade, of Brighton, has sold off in plots about 30 acres of wood from the Proctor place which he recently acquired, and which lies about a mile south-west of here.

Aubrey Woof has purchased the wood-sawing outfit owned and run last season by Jack Phillips, who is at present in Dutton, Ont.

ROSENEATH NEWS

ROSENEATH, Feb. 25. — The Womans' Institue is again busy making ready to given an entertainment and social in the town hall.

A few cases of chicken pox are found in the village but none are seriously ill. It has been rumored that smallpox was prevalent, which is an error. So far the M.O.H. officials have no reports of smallpox.

Several of the young people are taking advantage of the fine weather and making use of their snowshoes.

There was a good attendance at service on Sunday evening. Rev. Lovelace gave an excellent sermon. The choir also rendered good music and singing.

Miss Mary Mattress has been confined to the house for several days with a heavy cold and sore throat.

MEETING POSTPONED.

REGINA, Sask., Feb. 26.— (Canadian Press.) — The Conservative meeting scheduled for last night to discuss the possibility of placing a candidate in the field to contest for the coming by-election in Regina was cancelled. The meeting will be held to-day, according to present arrangements.

That practical joke about looking upward

You can't help yourself. If you see someone standing still in the street, looking upward, you bend your neck backward. You want to see too. You want to know what's going on.

That instinct is perhaps the main reason for newspapers. So you can know what's going on. Going on among your neighbors, among the people in the next state, in other lands. You want to know the news.

And that's what advertising is for, too. So you can know what's going on. So you can know the news about styles in clothing, about theories in foods, about the latest improvements in radio amplifiers or automobile engines. News! You want to know the news.

The advertising in this newspaper is here to tell you things. It is here to keep you in touch with the things that are going on. Advertisements are interesting. They are useful. They are news.

Menus for the Family

By Sister Mary.

Breakfast—Stewed dried peaches, cereal, thin cream, tomato omelet, crisp whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Creamed shrimps in rice border bran bread, apple and celery salad, orange cream pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—Roast loin of lamb, mashed potatoes, creamed turnips, endive salad, canned strawberries, sponge cake, graham bread, milk, coffee.

Sometimes after opening a can of tomatoes there is some left, not enough for a meal but too much to waste. While any vegetable left-over can always be used in soup, sometimes we aren't making soup. This tomato omelet is a suggestion for using up left-over tomatoes. Tomato soup can be used, in which case omit the soda in the recipe.

Tomato Omelet.

One cup tomato pulp, 1-2 cup milk, 1-8 teaspoon soda, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 4 eggs.

Canned tomatoes must be rubbed through a strainer. Heat puree and add soda. Melt 1 1-2 tablespoons butter, in sauce pan, stir in flour and slowly add tomato mixture, stirring constantly. Add milk and cook until thick and smooth. Season with salt and pepper and add yolks of eggs beaten until thick and lemon colored. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Melt remaining butter in hot spider, or omelet pan. When hissing hot turn in egg mixture. Cook slowly on top of stove or bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. Fold and slide on to a hot platter and serve at once.

ECLIPSE FASHIONS

Exclusive Patterns by Hazel Bayne

1287

Charming Frock for the Junior Miss

Fashionable frocks for girls from 8 to 14 years of age are developed in fabrics as modish as those worn by the grown-ups. The vogue for combining printed and plain material finds expression in this graceful frock, which slips on over the head and has a flared apron tunic tied at the back with a wide sash. The shoulders are cut kimono, and the sleeves may be finished short, or with an extension gathered into a narrow band at the wrist. The foundation of this frock is perfectly plain and in one-piece, with the tunic set on. No. 1287 is in sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 10 years requires 3¼ yards 39-inch, or 1⅞ yards 54-inch material. Price 20 cents.

Our new Fashion Book contains many styles showing how to dress boys and girls. Simplicity is the rule for well-dressed children. Clothes of character and individuality for the junior folks are hard to buy, but easy to make with our patterns. A small amount of money spent on good materials, cut on simple lines, will give children the privilege of wearing adorable things. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

Advance Models.

Although the majority of the local stores are not yet showing their Spring models, some of the advance guard have crept into the shops and may be viewed at any time. The notes for Spring and Summer wear are demonstrated in these, the vogue for flares which continues, the upward trend to the collars, which still hesitate at a somewhat half-way mark, with the throw collar and the handkerchief tie much in evidence, the long sleeves which are contrasted sharply with the short lengths for hot weather use, the prevalence of button trimming and the continuing popularity of the long overblouse, with a variation at times in the deep cuff at the bottom.

A smart little two-piece costume, with the side-pleated skirt attached to a cotton camisole, is developed in soft reseda green silk crepe, its moderately high soft collar and little turned-back cuffs faced with light sand crepe.

An afternoon gown of black crepe romaine has a separate vestee front, done in fine accordion pleats and developed in pencil blue, with a brilliantly-colored flower of velvet at the side front.

A printed silk shows the vogue for black and white, with broad stripes of the two colors alternating with sections done in hairline effect. The flare on the over-drape is done in diagonally-striped fashion and the front has a long line of small black buttons.

A neighboring sports model in tweed is in brown, with an odd effect in the fitted basque over a flared skirt portion, the front length outlined by large leather buttons in brown, which also makes the small collar.

Buttons also trim the soft blue homespun dress whose sole trimming is diagonal bands of self material, with long trim sleeves and a smart little "stando" collar.

CAPTIVE! - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - By Juanita Hamel

At last! After a long, weary chase they've captured Love and, so that they may not lose him, have fastened him tightly in the cage which represents their hearts. And they're so proud and so happy to think that they have found Cupid.

But be careful, for the mere fact of having found him and knowing that he's caged, will never, never hold him. For he's a sly little chap, and just when you are so sure of him and think that he'll never leave you, is the time he'll take wings and fly away. For he must be cherished and guarded. Feed him with the honey of sweetness and toleration and understanding.

Care for him and watch him carefully lest he become unhappy and fly away. For once he's gone, it's a hard task to catch him again. Ugly words, jealously, lack of care and attention will soon kill him, and some day you'll wake to the knowledge that the Love you thought you held so safely is dead—never again to come to life. And that would never do.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES AN EFFECTIVE SMOCK.

Pam rushed into our midst in the manikin's room, quite breathless from excitement.

"Girls, I have an order!" she exclaimed.

We all looked up to see the usually immaculate Pam, her hair quite dishevelled, with a length of green linen trailing from her arm.

"Come, come! Do compose yourself and tell us what you're talking about!" I said sternly, recovering from my surprise.

"You know I told you about the smock I made to wear over my frock about the house when I'm working?" Pam queried.

"Told me about it, didn't I see you sewing on it here for at least a week?" I reminded her.

"Well, a friend of mine, who works in an office downtown, came in one evening when I was painting a table in the smock, and was crazy about it," Pam explained.

"Throwing bouquets at your own handiwork," I remarked. Pam paid no attention to this and continued.

"Last night the same girl came back to call and begged me to make one for her at my own price. It seems that all the girls in the broker's office where she works have taken to smocks. She hasn't time to make one, and she likes mine especially."

"Wonderful chance for you to start in on a little special order business of your own," Gaby put in.

"Fine idea, for the girls to wear smocks to protect their cloth frocks at the office," I remarked.

"Well," Pam continued. "If a pretty colored smock is as becoming to all of them as it will be to this girl, I don't blame them for starting the fad."

Of course, we had to find out all about the smock, and Pam explained that all she designed were to have very deep V necks, laced up with colored silk lacing to match the smock. She said:

"You see, then the lacing can be loosened and the smock slipped on over the head without disarranging the hair at all. I think this is an excellent idea for smocks that are put on and taken off in the office."

We all agreed with her, and one of the girls suggested that they could also be made with buttons all the way down the front.

I'm almost sorry that I don't work in an office so that I could wear one of the gay colored smocks, for I do think it is a wonderful idea and such a saving to one's frocks. Don't you agree with me?

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am another girl coming to you for advice. I have been going with a young man for sometime, but recently we had a quarrel. I have been out with other boys, and he has been out several times with one girl. I love him, Annie Laurie, and he loves me. But everyone tells me I would be foolish to go with him again. Please tell me what to do. I can never be happy with anyone else. MOLLY-O.

MOLLY-O: There really is only one answer to your question, and you know it. If you are in love with this young man and he is in love with you, what does it matter if everyone else in the world warned you about each other? Of course, these people may be quite right, and you might be better off if you never saw him again. But what is the use of thinking about that? There is always one major element in any situation in life and the minor threads should not be allowed to conflict with it. In this situation of yours, the big thing is the fact that you both love each other. I would certainly advise you to make up your quarrel with him, if it is at all possible, turn a deaf ear to anyone who tries to persuade you otherwise, and go ahead.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have read your good advice to other young fellows in distress and I thought I would ask you to solve my problem. I met a young girl about three weeks ago and fell in love with her at the first sight and I know she cares for me. We get along great but there is a joker in the pack, and that is her old man. Sometimes when we are sitting in the parlor he comes in, takes off his boots, sits down, puts his feet on the table and winds up the clock, putting it facing me. I could stand all that but when he sits there staring at me with the tobacco juice dribbling over his chin, I get beside myself in a rage. Now, dear Annie Laurie, although I love this girl I don't think I could stand her old man's insults any longer. I wish you would advise me what to do.

Hoping to see my answer soon, I remain,

FRECKLED JOE.

FRECKLED JOE: Perhaps, as you have known the young lady for only three weeks, and her father's peculiarities irritate you to such an extent, you had better give her up before matters come to such a pass that you will feel obliged to murder him some night From what you say, one would be inclined to think that he may not put too many objections in the way, if you decide to stop calling on his daughter.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have read your column many times and now I come myself for advice. Is it improper:

(a) For a young man to hold your hand?

(b) For a young man to put his arms around you?

(c) For a girl to sit on a young man's knee?

(d) Should a girl rise when being introduced to a young man?

Hoping to see your answer in the paper soon. Yours affectionately, TICKLES.

TICKLES: (a), (b) and (c)—None of these things are really improper, in the strictest sense of the word. However, they are not usually done in public, and rarely indulged in with strangers. One might say that they represent comparative stages of friendship, as it were. (a) might be the habit of a Platonic-minded gentleman, so to speak, but when it comes to (b) and (c) it would be as well to have some guarantee of the young man's intentions before being encouraged to any great extent.

(d) In polite circles, it has never been recognized as just the thing for the lady to rise when introduced to a young man. You may with perfect propriety remain seated in his presence.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl in my 'teens and would greatly appreciate your kind advice. I am in love with a young man about two years my senior. He is of good birth but he has been brought up by his uncle who gave him his own way. In his younger days he had disregarded his father's wishes; now he is sorry.

I have been going with this young man for two years but now my parents insist on me giving him up. I do not wish to offend him. What will I do? Yours very truly, SCOTTY.

SCOTTY—Your problem is rather an involved one. I can't quite figure it out. You do not explain just what is the difficulty and why your parents oppose your friendship with him. Perhaps they have the best of reasons. I can't decide from your letter. If you really love him and he loves you, and there is nothing very important standing in your way, that is, nothing that would cause an offense against morality or justice if you married him, you should go ahead. It is you that will have to live out your life to the end of it, and you, not your parents, should decide who you are going to marry. If you take a wrong s[tep] you will pay for it in the years to come, but you won't have to say "I didn't know my own mind when I should have decided for myself."

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

IN THE NEWS.

"Marriage is a woe-begone failure," according to Joseph Hergesheimer who was an author before he wrote "Cytherea." By this time every wise-cracker in the country has neatly dissected Joe's remark.

We would add merely a recent remark grabbed from a conversation with a lawyer friend.

"I have gotten my clients something like 100 divorces, have kept tab of them, and have noticed that every single one of the 100 remarried."

Failure or no, they seem, like hungry little Oliver Twist, to want "more."

One of those many well-known "best minds" has sought to solve the barren social life of many women due to the greater number of women of marriageable age in the world than men of the same age.

This best mind has invented the puppet dancing partner, embraced to whose manly torso a maiden may Charleston over the danc efloor as merrily as the merriest. And the manless wall-flower needs only the price of a puppet to stop wallflowering!

Many mean remarks will be made. But, honestly now, does the idea of a girl dancing with a sawdust and enamel puppet wound your finer sensibilities any more than the well-established vogue of men dancing with paid dancing partners furnished by the hostess of a night club?

BEAUTY.

"It is quite impossible to feed the skin by rubbing in fats or creams of any kind," says the editor of "The Journal of the American Medical Association."

"There is no such thing as a skin-food."

And he estimates that hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent every year by modern women for these so-called "skin foods."

The much-tooted "beauty clays" are merely plain clay mixed with water and perfumed, costing about five cents and selling for about $2 a pound.

To whiten the skin, boil two tablespoonfuls of fine oatmeal in enough soft water to make a thin gruel, strain carefully, when cold, add the juice of a lemon. Wash the face with this every night and do not entirely wipe off. In the morning wash off with tepid water. Make a fresh supply ever ten days.

THE GLAD RAGS.

Picture dresses are all the rage nowadays. They are seen in the Ritz at tea time, on Palm Beach sands, at the theater and tea dansant. Bits of scenery exquisitely painted in pastel shades adorn the picture dresses.

Corot landscapes, sprays of roses, corsages of violets and other "sweetness and light" subjects adorn the frocks of the yellow-curled, blue-eyed blondes. Jazzy exotic pictures, such as Cleopatra upon her golden barge or a vamp lolling upon leopard skins, are chosen for the more spirited type of maiden's frocks.

SUCCESS.

This about a woman of whom you probably never heard.

Mrs. Grace Storey Putnam once made a doll baby for her little girl from an old white stocking. She worked days to make a perfect baby face, with the aid of wire and cotton and paint.

Years later, forced to support her family, she decided the world needed a real baby doll. She spent days in maternity hospitals, studying the faces of the wee inmates.

Then came her fight with patent offices and manufacturers. One insisted on having the three-day old baby say "mama." It took Mrs. Putnam weeks to win the battle to have the baby only "squawk" instead.

Then came the dealers saying "I wouldn't have that homely brat in my store!"

But they did! And today the Mrs. Putnam doll is held in the arms of hundreds of thousands of little girls.

"I succeeded because I believed in my idea and wouldn't let go," says Mrs. Putnam.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

FRIGHTENED.

I would not have thought it possible that everything could change so completely and so quickly as it did when the train started away from town. Up until that time, I had been exultant with confidence in myself and now—well, now I was sure, as I drew my breath with a little gasp, that I was afraid.

Carefully I clutched the little black silk handbag in which I had pinned my money with a safety pin. I felt myself grow all over gooseflesh as I thought what I would do in a strange city without any money.

It began also to dawn on me that I really had thought nothing about what I was going to do with money when I got there. I began to tremble inside of me, for I knew that I had no training for anything. I could not do housekeeping, even, if it were necessary, as my mother had never taught me anything of that kind.

I bought a paper the next time the train boy went through the car and began to look at the advertisements of "Help Wanted." Stenographers, bookkeepers, saleswomen, secretaries, nurses, telephone girls—it seemed to me that there was a situation for every girl in the world provided she was trained for it. But, I did not know how to do one thing that seemed to be wanted by anyone.

Before I go half way to Toronto, I was almost ready to go back. It was the first time I realized that it was up to me. I was alone and—I was afraid.

It was lunch time and although I did not think I was hungry, I went into the diner, clutching my precious silk bag. I ordered a cold chicken sandwich and a cup of chocolate and I marveled because it tasted so good. I ate my luncheon very leisurely for I realized I had nothing else to do for the long afternoon.

Finally I went back to my seat in the chair car and again scrutinized the advertisements. I could see nothing in them where I could possibly hope to get a position.

As I neared my destination I began to be very nervous. Where should I go? My father had not even recommended a hotel to me. He seemed to think I probably would only be gone a week and that two hundred and fifty dollars would keep me handsomely until then. I had been so very cocksure that I expect I had made him think that I knew exactly where I was going and exactly what I was going to do, and I knew nothing of the kind.

It was nearly dinner time and beginning to grow dusk when the train entered the station. I asked the travelers' aid which was the best hotel, determined to go there for the night and leave the details of securing a job and a boarding place for myself until the next day.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

How much water do you drink? In few of our practices is there such variation. One person will drink close to a gallon one day, while another does not take a cupful outside the food and table beverages.

Have you ever stopped to think how valueless our food would be if it were not finely divided and put into fluid form?

It is a good thing to think of food as fuel. How much heat would you get out of one huge chunk of coal if it were crowded into your stove or furnace? The coal won't burn until it is broken into small pieces.

Likewise, the food is of no use until it is broken into fine particles. That is one reason why food should be thoroughly chewed before it is swallowed. If you don't use your teeth on it, your poor stomach must work overtime to prepare it for the digestive process.

After the food is finely divided it must be dissolved. It cannot pass through the tiny canals and soak through the membranes unless it is in fluid form.

To do all the things which must be done to make the food available, the body must have lots of water. Then, too, the blood must have an unfailing supply of water to replenish the constant losses of fluid.

There is a third reason for drinking a lot of water. The waste materials must be removed from the body.

You know how "clinkers" form in the furnace or stove. They are so hard and so big they cannot escape through the grates.

I do not mean to imply that similar lumps form in the body, but you can see that an unfailing supply of water will tend to keep the waste material fluid or, at least, to keep it soft. This will assist the intestines to deal with it.

The kidneys are sure to suffer, if the waste material they deal with is not kept in solution. An abundant supply of drinking water will help a whole lot in their work of eliminating poisons which will do serious harm if permitted to remain in the body.

You must take an abundance of water if you are to be well and vigorous. Just how much you take should not be a matter of taste. There should be some more reliable method of determining the quantity of fluid than the appeal of thirst. You need two quarts at least.

The tea and coffee you take and the fluid in foods will give you about one-half the eight or ten glasses of water you should have. During the twenty-four hours you should drink four or five glasses in addition.

The chief objection to taking water at meals is that you stop chewing and depend on the fluid to wash down the food. Then, too, you are likely to eat too much food if it goes down steadily. Persons inclined to be fat must dodge this practice.

So far as getting the fluid is concerned, it makes little difference when you drink water. But you should bear in mind the importance of getting you full allowance every single day.

THREE-MINUTE JOURNEYS

WHERE GOLD TEETH ARE PURCHASED FROM A VENDOR.

All of us avoid the dentist chair with a unanimous aversion. And we visit it only sufficiently often to insure the good condition of our teeth.

But it is otherwise in China. For there the acquisition of several gold teeth is not only a distinction, but a decided improvement in appearance. It is the ambition of every man and every woman to have as startling a set of teeth as possible.

The very wealthy may even replace their own teeth by ones of diamonds and other precious stones. The effect is grotesque to the Western eye, but quite beautiful to the Chinese.

In Chungkung, a little town in Western China, on the border of Tibet, one finds an even more startling custom. In this city, built on solid rock at the junction of the Yangtze and Kialing rivers, there are many conditions that offend the visiting Westerner. The fact that the city is built on a solid mass of rock prevents any proper system of sanitation being installed. In fact, one can only wonder how the thousands of people who live there can exist among the turmoil and the constant offense to the nostrils at all times apparent.

But still they do live, indescribably poverty-stricken and miserable, but living nevertheless. And even in this miserable community the passionate ambition to wear a few gold teeth wherewith to brighten one's countenance exists.

Those who are ambitious for dental

in Chungkiung, however, do not have to visit a dentist. They need merely wander along the main thoroughfares and in a short time they will find the man they seek. He walks proudly along, a basket tied about his shoulders. On the basket, proudly displayed is a rich and varied assortment of gold teeth. The customer stops him, tries on several of the varieties over his own teeth and makes his selection. Then he takes his way down the street, smiling proudly at all his acquaintances, to reveal his new splendor.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES.

By Blanche Silver

DORIS MAKES A NEW DISCOVERY IN THE WOODS.

"Oh Oh! Oh!" Doris exclaimed excitedly when she was the funny little things sticking up on the moss at the edge of the woods. "I'll bet they are fairy umbrellas. Oh, you cut little umbrellas! I've a good mind to pick every one of them."

"Oh, please don't do that," whispered a tiny voice. "I don't know what you are talking about, but please don't pick anything."

Doris stooped down closer to the bed of moss.

"Were you speaking just now or did I imagine I heard someone's voice?" she asked softly.

"You heard me speaking," laughed a merry, tinkling voice. "I'm Mrs. Moss. I thought I heard you say you were going to pick something."

"So I did, Mrs. Moss," replied Doris. "I was going to pick those dear little umbrellas you have there," and Doris touched one of the tiny little cornucopia things sticking up on one of Mrs. Moss' tender green stems.

"My goodness, child!" exclaimed the little Moss lady, "don't pick those capsules! They are just about ready to turn over and upset and I'd lose all my year's work. Those are not umbrellas, as you called them. Those little cornucopia things are where I hide my seed grains. I call them my treasure chests. If you should pick them now they wouldn't do you any good, for they are not ripe."

"Well, of all things!" laughed

"Please Don't Pick Anything."

Doris. "I thought some fairy had hung her umbrella up among your stems to dry. So those are the little treasure chests that hold your seeds. Silly of me. I should have known that. All flowers have seeds, so moss must have seeds, too. I suppose you are like Mr. and Mrs. Milkweed—you must wait uptil the wind blows your seeds away."

"Not my seeds," replied Mrs. Moss roudly. "No, indeed. When the seeds in these capsules are ripe and ready to find a home for themselves the little cornucopia-like things you called umbrellas bend over and upset the seeds. They fall on the ground and begin to sap up food from the damp earth. If you come back in a few days from now you'll see them all on the ground in a sort of scum-like stuff that looks like tiny white threads. Out of this scum will come the buds that make new moss."

"Well, no wonder you didn't want me to pick those umbrellas," Doris laughed. "But they certainly do look like fairy parasols or umbrellas. Do all moss and ferns bear the seeds in the same way?"

"Oh, no," replied Mrs. Moss. "In some moss as well as ferns you'll find the spore or seeds fastened to the leaves in little brown cases. The ferns have to depend on things brushing them off the leaves. They don't pop out like my capsules do. Do you know if little girls who sit around and fuss about something to do would come out and get acquainted with the flowers and growing things in the meadows they'd be much happier?"

"I should say they would," agreed Doris, as she bid Mrs. Moss good bye and ran to tell her little friends.

USES OF DUST TALK SUBJECT

Mrs. F. H. Howard Gives Address at Millbrook League Meeting.

MUCH ENJOYED

MILLBROOK, Feb. 26.—"Dust we regard as the bane of our existence, a nuisance of which we are continually trying to be rid," stated Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard in her talk on "The Uses of Dust", at the Young Peoples' League on Monday evening.

"Apart from its being a trial to the housewife dust serves a number of useful purposes; for instance it is the fine particles of dust in the atmosphere which diffuse the light of the sunbeams, causing daylight.

"Naturally the dust particles are larger and heavier near the earth's surface, and lighter higher up, and they cause a refraction of the rays as the sun rises and sets; and because these particles are moisture—laden we owe to them the beauty of our blue sky, and the gorgeous colorings of our sunrises and sunsets. Then too the direct rays of the sunlight would burn up the objects with which they come in contact, lacking this deflection and diffusion which the dust particles in the atmosphere cause.

"We often wonder where all the dust comes from. Partly from wear—the decay of all things in nature, human and otherwise, exemplifying the Scripture injunction, 'dust thou are and to dust thou shalt return'. From the smoke of factories, trains, [illegible] from the volcanoes which are always active in some part of the earth, and the dust from which is carried to a great height above our atmosphere and has been known to fall, years later, on the opposite side of the word. The 'Red Terror' of 1307, the 'Green Day' of 1491, a number of 'Yellow Days' in France when cattle died of the heat, the 'Black Day' of the 13th century, were probably the result of such a fall of volcanic dust.

"Thousands of tons of cosmic, or star, dust fall annualy from the constellations of ou runvicerse, and seadust is another peculiar phenomenon experienced in the Mediterranean, and the mid-Atlantic, a sort of dry fog, caused by a sand-spout on the desert and carried miles out to sea by the wind, falling sometimes to a depth of two inches on the deck of the vessels in its path.

"Seeds, adhering to particles of dust and sprouted, have been known to be carried from Africa to Italy on the wings of the wind. The moisture of the atmosphere would be too dense were our small friend and benefactor, dust, absent as it collects on the dust particles. Without this natural provision a summer shower would not fill our cisterns, and after a three days' rain the inside of our houses would be as thoroughly soaked as the gardens and fields.

"Lest we are inclined to tolerate to too great an extent this dust which seems to prevail in the heavens above, and in the earth beneath, and in the waters under the earth, it is wise to note that it is a great carrier of diseases germs, and makes epidemics possible.

"Until we clean up the tropics, make the desert blossom as the rose, have proper Oriental sanitation, cultivate all the waste land, make factories and railways consume their own smoke, cause wars to cease, have good oiled roads, and farm hygiene, dust will not cease to be a menace, filled with noxious organisms, to the public health.

"In closing we should note that we owe our large, red, and beautiful harvest moon to the fact that there is more heavy dust in the atmosphere in autumn than at other seasons, due not alone to the threshing-machines then in operation, but also to the general decay in nature.

"How wonderfully God has planned, nothing is too small for Him to use and show its value."

Miss Charlotte Luxon was in the chair for the meeting, and Miss Dorothy Crossley gave an appropriate reading, "Little Things."

CAMPBELLFORD NEWS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 26.—Mrs. Frank Fizpatrick of Belleville is seriously ill at her home. Her mother, Mrs. M. O'Donohue of town has gone to be with her daughter.

Mrs. Fred Hendricks of Grimsby is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Burbank.

Mr. Andrew Gowan of Seymour West, received word last week of the serious illness of his brother, Walter, at Indian Head, Sask., and he left immediately for that place. Mrs. William Hume, who is a sister of the sick man, has since had word that her brother is slowly recovering.

Mr. Edward Bates and son, Arnold, spent a few days of last week with Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Pearse of Peterboro. Arnold took first class honors in introductory piano at the Canadian Academy of Music, Peterboro.

Miss Luella Archer, R.N., has gone to Belleville to attend Mrs. Fitzpatrick, who is seriously ill.

Mrs. Thomas Atkinson and Mrs. J. Archer are spending a few days in Belleville with Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Maybee.

Mrs. Alex Pirie received word that her niece, Mrs. Mulholland passed away in Chicago on Sunday, Feb. 14. Mrs. Mullholland, who was Nina Estey, attended Campbellford schools and lived with her grandmother, Mrs. John Dorle, near the fair grounds, later moving to Toronto. Interment took place in Chicago.

EUCHRE PARTY

L.O.L. Held Well Attended Party in Lodge Rooms.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 26.—A very successful euchre was given under the auspices of the L.O.L. 526 on Tuesday evening in the lodge rooms in the Turner block. Mrs. Arthur Tripp won the ladies' prize, Mrs. Alfred Tripp the prize for lone hands, James Cameron the gentleman's first prize and G. Crawford the prize for lone hands. After the game the ladies served lunch.

A large number of friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Burley (nee Jessie Cassan) formerly of Campbellford but now of Lindsay, gathered at their home last Saturday evening to present the young couple with a miscellaneous shower and congratulations on their recent marriage. A number of Mrs. Burley's friends also presented her with some fine linen.

FAREWELL PARTY

China Fruit Set Given Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard Reid at Mount Julian.

MOUNT JULIAN, Feb. 26.—Before Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard Reid moved to their new home near Lakefield, from Burleigh, a few of their young friends and neighbors gathered at their home in Burleigh and spent a most enjoyable evening, in dancing and euchre. They presented Mr. and Mrs. Reid with a china fruit set and read the following address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Reid:

We, a few of the young people of this community, are gathered here this evening to express our deep feelings of regret at your going from our midst.

We have always found you good neighbors and kind friends. Your places will be hard to fill in this neighborhood as you have always shown yourselves so ready to give assistance in any time of need. We have been able to depend on you to do what is right under all circumstances.

Now that you are leaving for a new home, where we trust that you will make many, and good, new friends, we join in wishing you a very happy and prosperous future.

As a token of the esteem of the friend, with whom you are parting, we ask you to accept this simple gift, not for its intrinsic value but for the feeling which we mean it to express.

Signed, the young people of the neighborhood.

Women Like

The easy-disposal feature of this new hygienic help—no laundry, just discard

IN a new way, women now are freed of the disadvantages of old-time "sanitary pads." Protection is greater. The old embarrassment of disposal and laundry is avoided.

Get Kotex—8 in 10 better-class women have adopted it.

Discards as easily as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

It's five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads!

You dine, dance, motor for hours in sheerest frocks without a second's doubt or fear.

It deodorizes, too. And thus ends ALL danger of offending.

You ask for it at any drug or department store, without hesitancy, simply by saying "KOTEX."

Do as millions are doing. End old, insecure ways. Enjoy life every day. Package of twelve costs only a few cents.

The children's Lenten service, held by St. Thomas' church is at 4.15 each Friday, and the general service at 7.30 p.m. Wednesday evenings.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

No. 22—PADDYFOOT, THE MOUSE, TELLS A STORY.

Nancy and Nick and Jupe and Hickydoo stepped into the elevator again, and there, just as the Chinaman had said, were three large baskets.

One basket said, "Chinese dragonflies—young and tender."

Another basket said, "Jersey mosquitoes—fat and juicy!"

A third basket said, "Fuzzy caterpillars—fresh from the barbers!"

"Well the cross old bat should be satisfied now," said Paddyfoot, the mouse, sticking his head out of Jupe's pocket. "He can't hold you up any longer, and you should be at the palace in about five minutes."

"Oh, Paddyfoot," said Nancy. "I m so sorry about you! Wouldn't you like to be a nice big bear again like you used to be?"

"Sort of," said Paddyfoot sadly. "Only I got sick and tired of Old Blue Whiskers. If I am ever a bear again, I'm not going to be anybody's prime minister. But I'll tell you a secret I never, never, never told anyone before."

"What?" cried Nancy and Nick and Jupe together. And Hickydoo echoed hollowly, "What?"

"I'm not a bear any more than I am a mouse," said Paddyfoot. "I'm a king! I'm the real king of the Land of the Blue Cherry and old Blue Whiskers stole my kingdom and turned me into a bear and compelled me to be his prime minister and chief cook and bottle washer. I've been that for over a hundred years. It was just because he was afraid of me that he turned me into a mouse."

"But how can you ever get turned back again into a king?" asked Nancy breathlessly.

"The Blue Cherry—just a nibble of it will cure me," said Paddyfoot. "Don't you remember, when I found the tree on Cherry Bounce Hill, I tried to get to the Blue Cherry and take a bit of it first? But Blue Whiskers turned himself into a blue jay and ran off with it before I could touch it. If I had become a king then, your troubles would have been over as well as mine."

"Dear me!" remarked Hickydoo. "I shall have to look in my index again and see what it says about kings and bluejays."

"Never mind, Hickydoo. We're starting now," squeaked Paddyfoot.

The elevator was rising slowly up through the ground. Queer passengers got on and off as it made its trip up through the center of the earth again, and back to the place from which they had started.

One of them was no other than the Truffle Hunter, and Waldo, his pig.

"Well, well, well!" said the talkative Truffle Hunter. "I see we meet again. Waldo and I were out hunting for truffles and we dug so deep down into the ground for a truffle that I suggested we ride home. Did you know that Cherry Bounce Hill had not bounced away once since the Blue Cherry was stolen? I always said to Waldo that I knew that crazy hill was bewitched and Waldo said to me that he thought ——"

Right here the elevator reached the top and everybody stepped off.

"Good-bye," called Jupe and Nancy as they picked up two of the baskets and rattled off on one of the motorcycles.

"Good-bye," called Hickydoo and Nick as they picked up the other basket and rattled off on the other motorcycle.

"That old goose would talk the horns off a brass monkey!" said Jupe. "We can't wait all day listening to him."

Pretty soon they reached the place in the road where the bat was. And he hadn't another word to say. He had folded up his wings and let them go past, as soon as they gave him the baskets of bugs.

On they rode until they came to the wizard's palace.

FAMOUS FORTUNES

By Barbara Bayne

THE BONANZA KINGS OF THE COMSTOCK.

One of the most romantic chapters of mining life in America was the Comstock. A fascination abides in the very name.

Among the Californians who came early, unnoted in the throng were John W. Mackay and James G. Fair. Mackay outranks the rest of the Comstock leaders, because his rise was more remarkable. From a flannel-shirted underground miner swinging a pick at $4 a day he became an international financier with a residence in Paris and a Prince for a son-in-law.

When the gold fever was at its height he joined the forty-niners and came via the Isthmus with a party of twenty-five sturdy young fellows, among whom were Jas. C. Flood and Wm. S. O'Brien, who remained in San Francisco and went into the liquor business, while Mackay went on to Sacramento.

Fair hailed from County Tyrone, finished his education in Chicago and landed in California in 1849. He became the best engineer of his day and superintendent of the "grand old Ophir," one of the rich Comstock mines.

Both young fellows had drifted to Washoe in its first boom days and witnessed the birth of the wondrous City of Virginia. They saw the Hale and Norcross mine skyrocket to $2,100 a share and its collapse to $42. Apparently the vein was "pinched out," but Fair had been superintendent of that mine in 1867 and he was willing to stake his savings on the chance. So was mackay. An S O S call brought Flood and O'Brien on the run. Also J. M. Walker. The five men joined forces with a combined capital of $30,000 and gained control of the mine, which laid the foundation of their fortunes.

Mackay soon bought out Walker's interest, which gave him two-fifths. And the remaining four Irishmen became known the world over as "the Bonanza Kings." It is one of the most curious facts in the history of the Comstock that a little row of claims, flanked on either side by rich mines, should have been so long neglected. This group of Irish men prospected 710 feet of the strip which, united into the "Consolidated Virginia," became the "heart of the Comstock." Another 600 feet of this apparently worthless strip became the "California" mine. They were the true bonanza, unprededented in magnitude, some of the ore so rich that an average block three feet square contained from $300 to $500 in silver and gold.

In five years nearly $105,000,000 was the product of the Big Bonanza, as Comstockers have always called this body of ore. Other rich properties added another $32,000,000 to the coffers of the "Big Four."

The Comstock Lode raised the most picturesque set of millionaires that this country has ever seen—Mackay, Fair, Flood, Huntington, Mills, O'Brien, Daly, Hearst, Stanford, Thayer, Crocker and Hopkins. Its effect is far-reaching. It is felt on Wall St. today.

In 1884 Mackay and James Gordon Bennett laid the Commercial cable across the Atlantic from the United States to France and England, a purely private enterprise. John W. Mackay died in 1902.

In 1881 Fair became United States Senator from Nevada. He died in 1894.

The Comstock partners, together with James Phelan, founded two San Francisco banks and found many ways of using the Comstock gold to gather more gold, which is termed "high finance."

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27.

Excepting for those in employment or those holding positions of a public nature, this may be a day of routine affairs according to the fairly neutral places of the planets. The former may be in some danger of losing their posts, however, unless they take unusual precautions not to invite criticism or dissatisfaction from those in authority over them. There may be some minor loss in business or through writings.

Those whose birthday it is may have a rather routine year, unless they are in the employment of others or occupy places of public trust, when they should use every precaution to fortify their positions and not incur criticism. Also be careful of writings, checks, etc. A child born on this day should be fitted to go into business for itself as it may be difficult for it to get along with superiors or in the employment of others.

In feudal England military tenants had to provide a knight for every 500 acres of land occupied.

MIDNIGHT MUNCH

At night time, e'er retiring, when he's hungry as the deuce, the kitchen is the place you'll find a fellow runnin' loose. There's nothin' any better than to have the happy hunch to nibble on some scrappings in the well-known midnight munch.

A frazzled bit o'bacon or a chunk of liverwurst. A chilly glass of milk that's always bound to quench yer thirst. To see the icebox contents, Mister Man is on his knees, areachin' for the package that contains a bit of cheese.

He spies a lot of leavings that the wife has tucked away—just little indications of the meals they've had that day. The Missus aimed to save 'em, like a housewife really should, but, how ya gonna save 'em when they look so doggone good?

So father keeps on munching till his tummy's feelin' right, and then he shuts the icebox e'er retiring for the night. And thus the things that mother saved for breakfast and for lunch, are eaten up by father in his bloomin' midnight munch.

KING'S WHARF NEWS.

KING'S WHARF, Feb. 26.—A very good auction sale of farm stock and implements was held here on Tuesday, Feb. 23, the property of Daniel O'Neill. Geo. Jackson and Son were the auctioneers and disposed of the stock in a very creditable manner. Prices were exceptionally high for machinery and everything. The horsese were sold for $160, $167 and $172; cows sold from $60 to $65; two year old cattle for $45 each; calves for $20; pigs for $65 and $62, and young pigs at $5 each. Potatoes sold at $3 a bag, while feed, grain and hay sold equally well. It was one of the best sales held in this locality in a number of years and a large crowd was present.

Wheat Firmness Abroad Caused Rise At Chicago

CHICAGO, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—The unexpected firmness of quotations at Liverpool and Buenos Aires made wheat prices here average a little higher to-day in the first part of the Board of Trade session. Purchasing for recent active sellers was a feature. Indications of better export business gave special strength to the May delivery, but the new crop months, July and September, were inclined to lag owing to favorable weather conditions for domestic winter wheat south-west and west. The opening, which ranged from 5-8c decline to 3-8c advance, May 166 to 166¼ and July 143 to 143 3-8, was followed by upturns all around.

Fishing Up 3½ Points But All Others Decline

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—An easier trend was shown on the Toronto stock exchange this morning, in opposition to the strength developed by the outstanding leader, British Columbia Fishing sold up 4 5-8 points at a peak of 71 5-8, closing the morning at 70 1-2, three and a half points higher than yesterday. Steamships preferred and F. N. Burt were two of the few steady stocks. C.P.R. eased one at 157, Nickel 3-4 at 40, Smelters one at 242, Canners preferred a half at 66. Brazilian, the second most active stock of the session, 5-8 at 95 1-2 and Atlantic Sugar a half at 26 1-2. In the mines, Kirkland, the unlisted leader, eased six at 112 and Nipissing, the listed leader 15 at 600.

Calling of Money By Banks Caused Declines In New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press)—The marking up of the call money rate to 5 1-2 per cent, coincident with heavy calling of bank loans in anticipation of a heavy month end demand for funds, was utilized by bear traders as an excuse for another attack on quoted values in today's stock market. Among the many issues to break through their previous resistance points were Nickle Plate common, Sears Rosebuck, Mack Truck, National Lead and Atlantic Refining. Losses of 3 to nearly 6 points were recorded by Dupont.

Stocks Generally Weak On Mine Market To-day

TORONTO, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press) — Stocks turned uniformly weaker on the Standard Mining Exchange today. Dome was marked down 50 at 1830, McIntyre 25 at 2625 and Kirkland six at 112. The easier trend was marked by substantial losses, outstanding among which were Laval, down 5 1-2 at 34, Vipond 3 at 172, Barry Hollinger one at 44 and Argonaut one at 33, among the golds. The weakest silver stocks were Amulet, down seven at 105, Beaver five at 74, and Castle Trethaway four at 165.

for use at the discretion of the Board. Last year the cost of maintenance was $10,000, and there was no deficit.

"The management is very efficient. Miss Lancaster is a wonderful woman, managing kindly all her 40 old people with all their different kinds of ideas. Very little is heard of the Protestant home, but it is well worthy of your help."

Nicholls Hospital.

Mr. Nicholls, a Peterborough pioneer of Irish birth, conducted with Mr. Hall, a drygoods store on Simcoe street, and was the first bank manager in Peterborough. Mr. Nicholsolls did a great deal of charitable work but did not appear personally in the gifts, preferring to do good by stealth. His widow, Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls, carried on this work after his death. They lived in the large house on Rubidge street between St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Andrew's church.

The first hospital given by Mrs. Nicholls was the house on the gravel road now occupied by T. E. Bradburn. The north wing of the present building was erected in 1890. The growth of the usefulness of the hospital is indicated by the number of cases treated last year—1700. There were 300 babies born in Nicholls Hospital in 1925, and people are using the facilities and care offered in this institution more every year.

The hospital is managed by a board of trustees appointed from the Protestant churches of the city, and is goverened by a special act of Parliament. The members are elected for three years. If called upon the city must collect funds for maintenance only, and charge the amount against the Protestant taxpayers.

Any Protestant doctor in the city may apply for a position on the staff, put his own patients in the hospital, and also attend to indigent patients. A system of standardization has been inaugurated under which free patients are assigned to all affiliated doctors in rotation.

Training School

In connection with the hospital is a training school for nurses, known far and wide for the excellency of the tuition it gives. The doctors lecture to the nurses-in-training, and practical work is thoroughly done under the superintendent.

Mrs. Nicholls gave the first wing a $35,000 endowment and when she died the Hospital received through her will a further $35,000 or $50,000. The will also provided that the residue of her estate might be given to any charitable institution mentioned in the will, and this was handed to the Hospital which has now an income of $12,000 a year. If it had not been for Mrs. Nicholls, this amount, just sufficient to meet expenses, would be charged against the Protestant ratepayers of the city.

Needs at the present time are more room for the nurses, and several wards for maternity cases.

While the Hospital is in good shape at present, Mr. Crane pointed out, the Act of Incorporation provides that for expansion the Board must go through the Council to the ratepayers for the money.

Mrs. Nicholls left nearly a million dollars through her will. She gave Nicholls Sospital about $400,000; she gave Jackson Park; Nicholls Oval, and Inverlea Park, at a cost of $60 000, and sufficient to keep them going; she gave $20,000 towards the Protestant Home; $20,000 to the Y.M.C.A.; $20,000 to the Public Library, and $175,000 to the churches and church organizations.

"Mrs. Nicholls did great things for Peterborough," Mr. Crane concluded, "and I am glad to see that the city is taking steps to perpetuate her name through erecting memorial gates .. the parks."

UNIFIED SERVICE IS MUCH COMMENDED

Many Letters Received By Rev. Dr. Rose—Asked to Explain Plan.

The new Sunday School plan in Murray Street Baptist Church by which the church and Sunday school meet at the same time and in a unified service is attracting much attention outside of Peterboro, as well as here. This week Dr. Rose received an invitation from the Toronto Baptist Sunday School Association to explain the plan to the Sunday School workers and pastors of Toronto. In the same mail a letter was received from Baltimore commending the plan as worked out in Peterboro. Few weeks pass without letters of inquiry or commendation.

perance but regards the present liquor law as most unsatisfactory, yet is not in a position to suggest any radical improvement.

Believing there is a great quantity of home brew made in the neighborhood, and deploring particularly the drinking amoung young men Mr. Winslow has had personal experience that the latter has grown to such an extent that public dances and even entertainments, are decidedly injured by the liquor consumed at such gatherings.

"I admire the O.T.A. in many respects, and I take off my hat to the clauses which prohibit the bar, and the treating system; but I deplore the prevailing fashion for young men to carry a flask in their hip pocket.

"I believe there is a growing disregard for law, because even supporters of the Act are not actively interested in its enforcement, nor will they take office to help in this regard. It would appear that government control would be an improvement on the present system. Morally I am of the opinion that neither Canada nor the United States are in as good a position today as they were say fifteen years ago."

Councillor J. R. Eakins believes the present liquor situation most unsatisfactory, and thinks it would be wise to give government control a trial. The sale of stronger beer in hotels, subject to restrictions such as were put about the 4.4, might possibly improve conditions for the travelling public, but in common with many others spoken to, he is decidedly opposed to any return of the bar nor would he favor a local liquor store.

While he could not state definitely just what change would actually better present conditions, Mr. Eakins thinks the government has made an honest effort to enforce the O.T.A., and his opinion agrees with that of several others that the open violation of the law the prevalence of boot-legging, and the amount of home brew being made are deplorable features of the situation as it now exists.

W. T. A. Deyell regards the present liquor situation as far from satisfactory, but thinks conditions a great improvement on those existing ten or fifteen years ago. Like several other citizens he finds difficulty in suggesting a really effective remedy. Letters and news articles from a former home in Saskatchewan would apparently show some improvement under government control, and a trial for Ontario was suggested.

"I think we have moved too fast in the matter of temperance legislation, and have gone beyond what the education of the people along these lines had prepared them to accept and demand should be enforced. However, locally, we do not suffer from the illegal consumption of liquor to anything like the extent they do in the larger centres."

Against Reaction

(Special Despatch to The Examiner)

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 26. — There are very few men in Campbellford who can be induced to express their sentiments with regard to the present temperance situation and this is especially true of men in business or public life. Sentiment here is too nearly evenly divided to risk losing caste with the members of either party. There are some, however, who are outspoken.

"I have voted the Conservative ticket all my life," said T. J. Horkins, who has lived for nearly 70 years, "but if Premier Ferguson or any other leader of that party ever tries to restore the liquor traffic to anything like its former status I will not vote fo him. I may not cast a Liberal vote, but I will most certainly not vote for a party that attempts to fly in the face of the people who have so often and so emphatically declared themselves at the polls as in favor of a dry Ontario. This is the age of progress, not a time for reactionary measures."

"I believe that Premier Ferguson made a mistake when he tinkered with the Ontario Act," said W. M. Stephens, "as the people had so recently declared for prohibition. I do not think that public sentiment has changed since the last plebiscite and it is my opinion a further mistake would be made if anything is done to restore former conditions. When this town and township had local option I was always proud of them when I compared conditions here with those in municipalities that were still under a license law."

"The people of Ontario are overwhelmingly in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act," said Rev. C. D. Daniel, pastor of the Seymour Circuit. "They have shown that every time they have had a chance to give a direct expression of opinion on the measure, but in a general election there are too many people who put party before principle. The present law might be amended but anything like relaxation should not be tolerated. Prohibition, however, cannot be made a thorough success as long as the distilleries and breweries are permitted to carry on in dry territory."

GOVERNMENT CONTROL FAVORED.

(Special Despatch to the Examiner.)

MARMORA, Feb. 26. — Interviews with five prominent residents voting Tory last election on the present liquor situation, elicit d the following views:

A prominent business man when approached said: "I think the local vote taken in the last plebiscite favoring a repeal of the O.T.A. strong enough reason why I should be opposed to the act as it now stands, and I favor a return to government control." He further thought that the premier of the province was acting right in the matter.

Another remarked that at the present liquor situation was unfavorable to temperance objects. The large manufacture of illicit drink and the exposure of the youth to the more subtle temptations to drinking, in his mind, called for a drastic change in the temperance legislation, to which the country had been subjected since 1916. Any amendment he concluded, should embrace the whole country.

A third was more ready to discuss the situation. He believed in the bill as introduced recently by Col. J. A. Currie. "I believe," he emphatically declared, "in government control of hard liquor. Let those places who voted wet like the last plebiscite have beer of the 10 per cent. quality, and sell it with wines on the tables of the hotels.

A leading merchant remarked that if Col. Currie's bill recently before the house meant the working out of the liquor question on a local option basis he would consider it the better of the programmes now facing parliament. He strongly favored government control.

Another in discussing the question said he was convinced that a better quality of beer would mean a lesser consumption by the individual, and hard liquors would not be so sought after as beverages. "Government control of hard liquors," he said, "restores to the people who would not abuse the privilege the right to get such the more readily for medicinal purposes.'

ARCHBISHOP ROY IS LAID TO REST

Thronged Cathedral Hears Last Rights Chanted By Apostolic Delegate.

BROTHERS SAY MASS.

QUEBEC, Que., Feb. 26. — Canadian Press. — For the second time within eight months the Roman Catholic Diocese of Quebec, paid its last homage to an Archbishop, when following solemn services in the Basilica this morning the remains of the Most Rev. Paul Eugene Roy were laid to rest in the vault above those of his predecessor, Cardinal Begin.

Crowds thronged the edifice as Mgr. Pietro Di Maria, Apostolic Delegate to Canada, chanted the last solemn office while the funeral oration was delivered by Archbishop Gauthier, administrator of the Diocese of Montreal.

The services were attended by representatives of church and state.

As the last rites were being performed dat the high altar, low masses were said at side altars by four brothers of the late Archbishop.

AGED WOMAN DIED: REFUSED A DOCTOR

Deceased Was Firm Believer in the Power of Prayer.

TORONTO, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—An enquiry was opened here to-day into the death of Miss Alberta Buckborough, who died refusing medical or nursing aid because of her faith in the power of prayer. She was 60 years of age. An autopsy is also being held to determine the cause of death. "It is believed Miss Buckborough had been ill since February 6 with pneumonia," Coroner Crawford said.

"Despite her relatives' insistence, she refused a doctor or a nurse, and claimed she would be made well by the use of prayer. My information is that she was advised by faith believers not to have medical attention, and this is a point that is to be cleared up."

GROUP PLAY-OFF MONDAY NIGHT

A Great Game Can Be Looked For To Settle the Group.

The group play-off between Parkdale and Peterborough will be played at the Arena, Toronto, on Monday evening.

The Intermediate game had been previously scheduled for this date, but it has been advanced to-day and the Senior game put on, so that the winners of Monday's game can go into the finals with either Galt or London, and have them played off next week.

The game on Monday should be one of the best of the series, and there is no doubt a large number of Peterborough people will go to Toronto to see it.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Enjoyable Time Spent at the Home of Mrs. A. Moore, Frank Street.

A very enjoyable time was spent last evening at the home of A. Moore, 43 Frank Street, where a surprise party was held. The evening's entertainment consisted of dancing, games and a short programme. A ukelele quartette, consisting of "Buddy" Parker, "Jerry" Rogers, Blanche Panter and Earl Waterman, gave two numbers. Charleston solos were given by Glen Morphet, Ned Hodgson, and Joe Nasimok, and were enjoyed by all, as were tango solos by Ned Hodgson and Joe Nasimok. Mr. Nasimok also played several numbers on his violin. Bob Wilson and "Jerry" Rogers officiated at the piano during the evening.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Pearson, assisted by Margaret Pearson and Miss Orr.

The following were present: "Buddy" Parker, Mildred Routley, Darcy Windsor, Earl Waterman, Vera Gatfield, Helen Hetherington, Blanche Panter, "Les" Abraham, Irene Nelson, Mildred Panter, Linda Thompson, Joe Nasimok, Glen Morphet, Ned Hodgson, Iva Wright, "Jerry" Rogers, Aidan Moore, Bob Wilson, Roy Killingbeck, Nellie Patterson, "Red" Perrin, Miss Orr, D. Sproule, Cyril MacMillan, Margaret Pearson, Neva Smallwood, Mary Sutherland, "Pat" Cullen.

LET TWO WESTERN PROVINCES ASSUME HUDSON BAY RAILWAY

Suggestion of Two Conservative Members of Commons —Would Be Cheap er in Long Run for the Dom inion.

MAKE GRANT OF FEW MILLIONS

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—The Dominion would be better off if it handed the proposed Hudson Bay Railway over to the Manitoba and Saskatchewan Governments, and throw in three or four million dollars to help complete it, said Peter McGibbon (Conservative, Muskoka), resuming the debate in the House yesterday. He believed the Dominion would be better off in the long run by doing that, than by completing and attempting to operate the road.

Dr. McGibbon pointed to the promises of Hon. Chas. Stewart, Minister of the Interior, to use his good offices with the Canadian National Railways in order to obtain reduced rates on coal. Yet no one ever heard of the Government trying to obtain reduced rates from the C.P.R.

Assails Treaties.

Dr. McGibbon assailed trade treaties entered into by the Government. They had closed down Canadian woollen mills, turning Canadian workmen into the streets, while importations of woollen goods from Great Britain and France doubled and trebled. He claimed that the Government had thrown away a great opportunity for increasing immigration when it failed to capitalize the impression created by the Canadian troops overseas. These Canadian troops had been paid highly, as compared with those of other nationalities, and had spent their money freely. They had created the impression that Canada was a land of prosperity. The Government, however, had not profited by the impression thus created to gain immigrants for Canada.

Defends Rouyn Course.

F. S. Cahill (Liberal, Pontiac), in a brief speech, made a defence of the Rouyn railway development. He outlined the early negotiations to secure a road into the Abitibi company from the Transcontinental. The money, he said, was being put up by the Province of Quebec and the Noranda Mines. The objections of Conservative members had been merely technical. The work was necessary and the only difference of opinion was a matter of method. The road was being built at the least possible cost. These were the things that mattered.

H. A. Stewart, Leeds.

H. A. Stewart (Conservative, Leeds) said that the Rouyn Railway should have been brought to Parliament as a branch line bill, where proper authority could have been given in the proper manner.

The Government was "without the ability to carry on or the moral courage to resign."

"What is the use of bringing to Canada, at great expense, immigrants from Europe, when we fail to adopt a policy that would retain our Canadian people?" asked Mr. Stewart, in discussing immigration.

The matter of rural credits was "primarily and principally, if not exclusively, for action by the Provincial Government." The Federal Parliament, said Mr. Stewart, should only pass "such enabling legislation as may be necessary to enable the provinces to deal with this question.",

Mr. Stewart expressed a strong suspicion that the Tariff Advisory Board was designed to enable the Government to evade dealing with the tariff in a fair and open manner. Before this Board was appointed, Parliament should lay down very definite principles as to how it was to proceed.

Hudson Bay Railway.

The Hudson Bay Railway, according to the speech from the throne, was to be finished forthwith. Why there was so much hurry now when the Liberal Government had done nothing about it for four years seemed rather mysterious. For himself, said Mr. Stewart, he was not satisfied that it should be completed. However, the West wanted it, and he was prepared to go a long way toward helping the West. He submitted, however, that Parliament was entitled to know what this work of completion would cost. Would it mean an expenditure of $3,000,000 or of $30,000,000 with expensive terminals, elevators and lighthouses?

Could Take Profits.

The Government was considering turning over the natural resources to the Prairie Provinces. Why not turn over the Hudson Bay Railway with them? A company might be incorporated in which the three Western provinces could be partners to operate the railway. They could finish the construction of the road, and when it was completed they could operate it and take the profits if there were profits.

The Government had a policy of appointing a commission for any problem which became troublesome. This would not do for the difficulty of the Maritimes. Senate reform, said Mr. Stewart, was conspicuous by its absence in the speech from the throne, and as for old-age pensions, that legislation could afford to wait for a while yet.

MOVIEGRAPHS

THIS ACTOR LOVES HIS OWN WIFE.

By Russell J. Birdwell
NEA Service Writer.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 24.—Warner Baxter, handsome screen hero who bears the Hollywood distinction of loving his own wife, has the most unusual clause in his contract with Famous Players-Lasky Company of any player. In this clause, of which he is sole author, it is agreed that the film company will not star him in any picture.

"The reason for this clause," explains Warner, "is because I am in the motion picture business to earn a livelihood—not to appease vanity. By being just a player—just an actor in pictures I figure I can continue making a living for my wife and myself for about 10 years.

"If I permit a studio to star me I know I will be riding for a fall within a year or so. The life of a film star is short-lived at best. And I am not ready to die."

AT THE CAPITOL

HOOT GIBSON IN "THE CALGARY STAMPEDE."

The ingenuous Hoot Gibson, with his round, young face and his innocent ways, which are contradicted by his excellence as a rider, is the hero of "The Calgary Stampede," the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the last three days of this week. The story is filmed in Canada, and the backgrounds are superb examples of natural Canadian beauty. The action and the interest of the picture centres about the reality of the "Calgary stampede" in which the scenes are real representations of what takes place at this famous rodeo, the survival of Wild Western days of long ago. Hoot Gibson is the maligned hero, on whom is fastened the guilt of murdering the father of his sweetheart, and he risks capture by the Mounted Police at the Calgary event, when he rides in the "Roman" race to save his employer from financial ruin. Unlike the majority of these pictures, the daughter of his employer, although she is a lovely girl, does not figure as a prize for his prowess, and his own dark-haired sweetheart lurks in the background, unknown to the spectators, as he rides his way to victory. There is much splendid horsemanship in this race, with the young man, a handkerchief bound about his brow in imitation of the old-time Roman riders, standing astride the two galloping greys that get away to a bad start but make their way in a grulling contest to the head of the line. The Mounties are waiting for Dan Malloy, alias Chuck Jones, the boob hand of the ranch, when he reaches the finishing line, but the real villain is unmasked eventually, and all is happiness.

The atmosphere of reality in this picture, the vim and vigor of its delineation of the various events connected with the Calgary Stampede, and the likeableness of its star, make it interesting and entertaining.

With it are the usual good short reels and a funny "Our Gang" comedy.

RAMON NOVARRO SCORES HEAVILY IN NAVAL MOVIE.

Film Star Beats Previous Portrayals as Hero in "The Midshipman"—Laid in Naval Academy.

Just when ingenuity in the movies seems to have been exhausted and plots become flagrantly repetitious, along comes a photoplay that commands even sophisticated attention and redeems nearly every film that fell below par.

Such a photoplay is "The Midshipman," which opened at the Regent Theatre Thursday with Ramon Novarro in the starring role. It was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and directed by Christy Cabanne.

"The Midshipman" is more than a pleasing example of what can be accomplished in the way of motion picture entertainment when the cast is willing and the story and director are not weak.

The story had its origin in the never-before-touched-upon domain of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. Those who had any reason to suspect that romance in the Navy is a rarity may stand prepared to alter their opinions. If naval romance has never been manifest on the screen heretofore it is because it lacked the adroit far-seeing interpreters who are responsible for the creation of "The Midshipman."

HAYMAKERS THAT MADE HISTORY:

Battling Nelson Was Jinx For Joe Gans

BY JOE WILLIAMS

The duels of Joe Gans, the great negro lightweight, and Bat Nelson, the Durable Dane, form one of the epics of the prize ring.

Gans and Nelson each won (or claimed) the lightweight championship twice and scrapped for it three times before age, coupled with the Battler's relentless mauling, ruled Gans out of further competition.

Ring records shows Gans took the title from Frank Erne in 1902. They also show he refused to make the 133-pound weight and popular verdict gave the title to Jimmy Britt of California, who subsequently lost it to Bat Nelson in 1905.

Gans finally quit his campaign among the welterweights and fought Nelson for the championship in 1906 in Goldfield, Nev., winning on a foul in 42 rounds.

That stamped Gans as the real king of the lightweight class. But age was already beginning to make its inroads upon him. He was 34 years old—almost senility in the ring game—and had been a familiar figure in the roped circle for almost 18 years.

The old gent with the scythe conquered the veteran Joe at San Francisco July 4, 1908, when Nelson battered him into insensibility in the 17th round. Ring followers saw it coming almost from the beginning. The bulldog Dane, showing amazing stamina, forced the fight all the way, constantly swinging his arms, watching for an opening, battering at the guard of the colored fighter.

In the 12th Gans was dropped to the canvas three times and took the maximum allotment each time. Gans made his last rally in the 14th, crashing into Nelson time and again with his famous short-arm wallops. They didn't have the slightest effect on the rugged Dane. Gans told his seconds he was beaten when he went to his corner at the end of that skirmish. They sent him out again to the slaughter with encouraging comment.

Three times Gans mopped the canvas in the 17th before he was finally counted out. A left to the pit of the stomach sent him down for the third time.

After the fight Gans announced he was through. "One fight too many," he said. "Old age will tell."

But it didn't speak loud enough for Joe Gans. He met Nelson for the third time at Colma, just outside of San Francisco, on September 9 of the same year.

This time Gans lasted 21 rounds but for the second time he succumbed to the battering ram tactics of Nelson—and to the continued inroads of age.

Nelson fought the same fight he had employed so successfully in the July bout, working constantly on the body and carrying the fight always to his less vigorous foe.

Gans lost heart after the ninth round, when his punches appeared to have no effect at all on the white man. He continued to lose ground steadily until the 21st, when a rain of blows to his jaw and body put him on the floor. Glass-eyed, he watched Referee Eddie Smith count him out, too far gone even to know what was going on.

LAKEFIELD ENJOYS KNOX CHURCH PLAY

Packed House Greets Actors From Peterboro on Tuesday.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 26.—A packed house greeted the performers of the Knox Church Ladies' Aid, Peterboro, when their play, "The Deacon's Honeymoon," was put on under the auspices of the Regent Street choir on Tuesday night. The performance took place in the Memorial Hall, which was filled to capacity.

The play was pure comedy, and the plot light but well sustained till the last. The humorous sallies kept the audience in a gale of laughter, and provided an evening of wholesome enjoyment for old and young. "Sam," the colored man, was a scream, never over-acting, but always there with funny sayings. The parts of "Miss Perkins" and "Silas Pettingale" were also among the cast, "Miss Perkins" easily carrying off the honors among the female performers. Her dress was of the period of 1880, and her manners were of the same period, never overdone, but a typical spinster lady of pre-war drama and fiction. The courting of Silas was very well done and provided one of the best bits in the last act.

There was no melodramatic touch of tragedy to mar the pleasure of the play. While the three previously mentioned performers were probably the best as their parts were rather more difficult, all did well, and the credit of never over-doing is due to each and every one. All was well and ended well with three pairs of lovers made happy, and the prodigal of the Briggs family arriving in time to make life easier and more pleasant for the elder brother who worked hard on the farm, handicapper by a heavy mortgage. This, however, is paid by the prodigal, who, unlike his scriptural counterpart, returns richly endowed with the gold of Alaska. Those who had read and enjoyed McCutcheon's "Anderson Crow" saw his counterpart in "Si Pettingale," who was a master at finding impossible clues.

The following is the cast of characters:

Deacon Briggs—Mr. Donald Hill.
Martha Briggs, the Deacon's wife—Mrs. S. Watson.
Minnie Briggs, the Deacon's pretty daughter—Miss Mary Morton.
Tom Briggs, the Deacon's son, home from the Agricultural College—Mr. Orville Martin.
Miss Esther Horn, Minnie's friend and Bob's sweetheart — Mrs. Ross Williamson.
Bob Gray, Tom's friend — Mr. Jack Morrison.
Miss Tackley, the teacher and sweetheart of Tom — Miss Cora Clarke.
Jim Hooker, alias Stephen Briggs, the prodigal, half-brother to the Deacon—Mr. Donald Gillespie.
Miss Susan Perkins, spinster lady—Mrs. M. Williamson.
Si Pettingale, hired man and constable—Mr. Ernie Benson.
Sam, colored farm hand — Mr. Stan. Hunter.
Convenors of the play—Mesdames Londerville and Giles.
President of the Ladies' Aid — Mrs. Davis.
Stage directors — Miss Annie Crocker and Mr. Howard Hall.

Between the acts there were several musical selections given, including solos by Mrs. Ross Williamson and Mrs. Yates; violin selections by Mr. Alex. Robertson, accompanied by Mrs. Yates; piano duets by the Messrs. Allen, and a piano solo by Mr. Norman Watts. Mr. Malcolm Clarke gave two readings, the first the amusing account of the snoring of "Lower 3" in a sleeping car, and the second a bit of pawky Scotch humor, both exceedingly well rendered and well received.

Four young girls acted as ush very capably, namely: Mis Mamie Brown, Edna and My Harrison and Frances Fairbairn.

Ray Best and His Helpers Thrilled Lindsay Gallery.

LINDSAY, Feb. 26.—The Carew Cup, after travelling up and down the provi e since 1912, ll rest in Peterbo for a time. Thursday afternoon a quartette of Electric City curlers wrested the silverware from Lindsay in a challenge game to the tune of 18-10. The game was played on a splendid ice sheet, and the brand of curling dished up was sufficient to suit the desires of the most ardent enthusiast.

Peterboro deserved the honors. Skip Ray Best was in excellent form and was given gilt-edged support by his rink mates. Lindsay scored four shots in the first two ends, but Peterboro came right back in the next two with a quartette, nosed ahead in the seventh and increased their lead to the close. A big gallery watched the game, and were thrilled by the fine curling, especially on the part of the winners, who adopted the policy of p ing Lindsay rocks off the front circles piling few guards around the front and then stealing in for shots behind the guards.

SCOTS AT HOME TO IRISH TEAM

Two International Rugby Games in Old Land Saturday.

FRANCE AT ENGLAND.

LONDON, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press Cable).—Two international rugby g es are scheduled for decision on Saturday, either of which will have great bearing on the issue of the international championship contest. En l d plays for the first time this season on their own ground at Twickenham their opponents being France, while Scotland will engage in a crucial encounter with Ireland at Murrayfield.

Of the two matches, probably the one in Edinburgh looms up as the more important in the eyes of rugby followers, for the reason that neither Scotland nor Ireland has been defeated this season. Both are running strong for the championship honors and the rivalry is very pronounced. So far, Scotland have defeated France and Wales, while Ireland have been victors over France and "gland. There is little to draw between the teams, and it is noticeable that each country has made as few changes as possible from the line-ups that brought them their last victory.

Two Alterations

Scotland's alter tions of which there are two, have been made in the pack, with G. M. Murray of Glasgow Academicals and A. C. Gillies, Watsonians, dropping out in favor of Dr. S. Kerr of Heritonians and J. Graham of Kelso. Kerr did not appear in this year's internationals, but he is an old "cap" having played against Wales and France in 1923. Graham is a newcomer and is the second Borderer in the team, the other being D. Davies of Hawick.

Kelso is a team that is comparatively new to senior rugby on the Scottish barders, but the supporters of the game recall that it was from this town that the famous fullback of old, Walter T. Forrest, who was killed in the war, and the inside three-quarter, Carl Ogilvy, came. Both received their "caps" while playing for Hawick and in the days when Kelso had n rugby team.

Irish Unchanged

Ireland's team is identical with that which defeated England at Dublin, with the exception that W. F. Browne will replace C. F. O'Hallaran who is going abroad.

England's changes have been more radical. Hamilton Wickes, the veteran left-wing three-quarter of the Harlequins, is missing; H. C. Catchside of Percy Park has been replaced by the old stand-by, T. E. Holliday of Aspatria in the rear position, while J. C. Gibbs of the Harlequins takes the place of Hamilton Wickes. In the forward line W. S. Tucker of Cambridge and E. Stanbury of Plymouth Albion are dismissed, their positions being given to A. K. Faithful of Harlequins and R. Webb of Northampton

HAYMAKERS THAT MADE HISTORY

When Kid McCoy Slipped One Over on Tommy Ryan — Invented the "Corkscrew Punch"—McCoy Deliberately Cut Ryan To Pieces After Closing One Eye.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

There may have been better fighters than Kid McCoy but there weren't any trickier ones. It is a matter of record that McCoy won the middleweight title from Tommy Ryan on a trick. It is a matter of perhaps less common knowledge that McCoy, besides tricking Ryan to the bout, won on a trick punch he had invented especially for that fight.

It wasn't the title the Kid was after when he went after a bout with the champion. It was satisfaction for beatings and insults Ryan had heaped upon him as a member of Ryan's training stable.

Trickery was second nature with McCoy. When he applied for a job as sparring partner to Ryan he was a much better boxer than he allowed Ryan to see. The champion wasn't noted for liberality. He paid McCoy $15 a week and in return handed him terrific beatings daily as part of his training stunt. He wouldn't even allow McCoy to eat at the same table with him, sending the Kid to a nearby cafe with a meal ticket that called for 21 meals for two dollars and fifty cents.

About a year after he left the camp McCoy sent a letter to Ryan, which, in substance, ran like this: "Dear Tommy, I got in a lucky punch on Tommy West the other night and knocked him out and now there's a promoter wants to put us on for a $5000 guarantee. Now you know me, Tommy, and how easy I'll be for you. You have forgotten more about boxing than I ever knew but for old times sake, go on with me and we'll both make some money."

So Ryan, looking upon the fight as a joke, did no training at all. The Kid went into the most intensive training of his career.

It was during these preparations that McCoy invented his famed "corkscrew punch." He was looking down a rifle barrel one day and happened to notice the twisted groove inside.

"What's that for?" he asked.

"To make the bullet go faster," he was told.

That set McCoy thinking. On the same principle, why wouldn't a fist hit harder if twisted just as it landed? He practiced on the blow, a short over-hand chop, twisting his fist as it struck.

McCoy and Ryan met at Maspeth, L.I., on March 2, 1896. As soon as the fight started, Ryan knew he had been tricked. But it was too late then to do anything about it.

McCoy tried out his "corkscrew punch" for the first time in the second round. Ryan dropped to the floor. The knockdown, strangely enough, really gave McCoy a fright. He didn't want to knock Ryan out just then; he wanted to carry him along, give him the worst beating of his life.

That fight earned for McCoy the title of "most brutal fighter in the ring." Ryan was already practically whipped but the Kid started in deliberately to cut him to pieces.

He began on the right eye and closed that. He was careful to leave the other eye open so Ryan could see to continue.

Then he cut one ear open; then he cut the other. He battered the under lip into a pulp and battered the upper lip down. He knocked out Ryan's teeth on the right side; then he knocked out those on the left side. He ground his gloves into Ryan's face and rubbed the skin off.

McCoy, wearying of his work, finally ended it in the fifteenth

HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

By Special Arrangement With Colliers' Magazine.

JOCK HUTCHISON—TURN HEAD AFTER IMPACT.

If the head keeps its place, the right shoulder will just turn half way around. There is no need of holding the head there an instant longer than is necessary to insure that it is fixed while the club-head is meeting the ball. If one doesn't do this, there will be no shoulder action and the pivoting of the body will be spoiled. It is useless to pivot just half way and then check the body at the most important time.

Those who drive a very short ball had better look to the pivoting to find means of improvement of the shot. The arms do their part as far as possible, but the player who drives with his arms alone will not 5et very far.

The follow-through is all important. The club-head must be kept in contact with the ball as long as possible. Abe Mitchell holds the club to the ball longer than most other professionals or star amateurs, and, as a result, he obtains a very long ball.

Abe is possibly the longest driver in the game and there must be something in the idea of permitting the head to follow a long way.

MACK'S PITCHING ACE

Ed Rommel was one of the four pitchers in the American League last season to win 20 or more games he copped 21.

Ordinarily most pitchers would be highly satisfied with such a showing, but Rommell looks on last season as a failure in certain respects.

At the opening of the campaign Rommel set his heart on winning 30 ball games. He had 20 to his credit with the season only a little more than two-thirds gone, then he bumped into a streak of hard luck that kept him from winning a game for over a month.

Rommel blames his 1925 pitching slump on overwork, due to being used too often as a pinch-hitter. He had asked Manager Mack to keep his relief work to the minimum. Under such conditions he says he should win better than 21 games for the Mackmen this year.

The pitching ace of Mack's staff is one of the four regulars who are signed, so Manager Mack has no worries over him in regard to salary.

Rommel is considered the peer of all big leaguers in the use of the knuckle ball, one of the most deceptive of the freak deliveries.

VARSITY WINS GOVERNOR'S CUP

Beats Dartmouth 6-1 in Game For International Intercollegiate Title.

ONE-SIDED GAME.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—The undefeated Varsity hockey sextette of Toronto University, winners of the Canadian Intercollegiate title, tramped the Green of Dartmouth under a 6 to 1 score in Madison Square Garden last night in a match that was advertised as "for the international intercollegiate championship. The victory gave Toronto possession for a year of the Governor's Cup, a silver trophy donated by "Al" Smith, chief executive of New York State, for the champion college hockey six of North America.

SEMI-FINAL DRAW IN ALLAN CUP MADE

Final Will Not Be Announced Until Teams Are Known.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26. — (Canadian Press).—President Silver Quilty of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announced last night that the semi-final draw for the Senior play-off had been decided on, starting on March 8th. The draw for the Allan Cup finals will be given out later with the dates and venue. Owing to the uncertainty surrounding the naming of the champions in the various groups the C.A.H.A. executive will not decide the dates and place of the Cup finals for the present.

CUP HOLDERS WIN SEVENTH STRAIGHT

Defeat Fort William 3-1 and Qualify For the Play-off.

PORT ARTHUR, Feb. 26 (Canadian Press).—Port Arthur qualified for the play-off to decide the championship of the Thunder Bay League last night when they won their seventh straight game in the second series and the fifth straight from Fort William. The Allan Cup-holders scored their favorite number of three goals, which has been their total in each of the last four games against the Forts, and held their opponents to one.

Her Liver Was Bad And She Felt Tired and Depressed

Mrs. M. Siefert, Grosswerder, Sask., writes:—"I was greatly disturbed with pains in my liver, and felt tired and depressed most of the time.

One day I read about and the next time I went to town I bought four vials of them.

I have used them regularly, and after two months' use I feel like an entirely different woman.

Now, I always recommend them to any of my friends who are troubled as I was."

There's only one "Laxa-Liver Pill", and that's the one put up, for the past 32 years, by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR SECOND GAME

Peterborough Club Likely To Run Excursion on Monday.

If there is sufficient interest on the part of the Peterboro fans, the Peterboro Hockey Club will run a special train to Toronto on Monday night when the second battle for the group championship will be staged with Parkdale. The teams fought to a 2-2 tie last night, but despite the fact that Harry Watson will be on the line-up of the Paddlers, the Petes are confident of being able to take Parkdale into camp and qualify for the O.H.A. Senior finals against the Big Six winners. Monday's game should be one of the most interesting clashes of the season, and a lot of Peterboro fans will undoubtedly want to see the tussle.

WILLS IN FINAL.

Defeated English Player Today in Connaught Cup Match.

MONTE CARLO, February 26.—Canadian Press.—Helen Wills reached the final for the Duke of Connaught's gold cup to-day, defeating Eileen Bennett of England 6-3, 6-2.

Miss Bennet had previously defeated Frau Neppach, the German champion in a three set match.

Physicians decided to-day that Suzanne Lenglen is not in a fit condition to play strenuous tennis before the French championships in June.

She will therefore not meet Miss Wills until the games at St. Cloud and Wimbledon.

HOCKEY NOTES

George Street Juniors tied up the Church League final round by defeating St. John's Juniors 2-1. Two goals by Baird in the second period gave the Unionists a lead of one on the round, but Hewitt scored one in the third, which tied it up again. The teams:

St. John's—Goal, Hutchinson; defence, Johnston and Woodgate; centre, Dorrington; wings, Coleman and Hewitt; subs., Watson and Graham.

George Street—Goal, McGee; defence, Ash and Baird; centre, Dormer; wings, Northrop and Jarvis; subs., Maudsley and McCartney.

Referee—Ira Dundas.

POWDERPUFF CHAMPION

LOUISE ADLER.

Louise Adler of Pasadena, Calf., is a firm believer in equal rights for women and, if necessary, she is willing and able to use physical force to carry her point.

Miss Adler, by the way, claims the championship of a newly created boxing division, the powderpuff weight class. Although her weight is only 128, she lays claim to the title of all divisions, regardless of weight or size.

Tutored by Billy Papke, former middleweight champion, Miss Adler has progressed so rapidly that the once conqueror of Stanley Ketchel says she keeps him busy keeping out of the way of left jabs and right crosses.

Her measurements — well just look the photo over and you will decide for yourself that statistics are unnecessary.

She's 20 years old and doesn't believe in the much expounded theory that you must pluck 'em young and treat 'em rough.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

FOREIGN ATHLETES HOFF DELIVERS UNIQUE COMPTITION

The remarkable success of Paavo Nurmi, Finland's great runner, certainly started an invasion of United States by crack foreign athletes.

During the winter Houben of Germany, Paulen of Holland, Goodwin of England and Hoff of Norway have shown their wares to eastern audiences. All were proclaimed second Nurmis by their press agents but Hoff alone has lived up to advance notices. He alone compares with the great Finn.

Apparently Hoff appreciates the value of being a good actor as well as the greatest of all pole vaulters.

It is said Hoff can do 14 feet, considered an impossible height. The other evening in doing his stuff he first failed to clear the bar at 13 feet 3 inches and suffered a heavy fall as a result.

After being assisted to his feet and helped to a chair, he rested a few minutes, took a drink of water, then proceeded to clear the bar at 13 feet 3 inches with ease.

The audience greeted his effort with cheers. Had he not proved his gameness by breaking a record after suffering what seemed a serious injury.

No doubt some one has him tipped off that American audiences are hero worshippers, that they crave record-breaking performances.

In his first four appearances in this country, Hoff has sent the fans away satisfied by breaking a former record. He started by doing 13 feet 1 inch and has bettered each leap by one and one-half inches or less.

Being a good showman, Hoff is carrying the fans along. Instead of showing all his stuff at once he is simply breaking some previous mark by a slight margin.

In this way he maintains interest in each appearance and at the same time arouses much curiosity as to what he can really do. Several track coaches of prominent eastern colleges have already expressed the opinion that he will better 14 feet, regarded as an impossible height for any pole vaulter to even attempt.

* * *

Hoff is the only foreign athlete to rate with Nurmi and he should be far more popular since he has a pleasing personality, something Nurmi sadly lacked.

* * *

The tour of the United States by Hoff has made possible what should prove to be one of the most interesting athletic events ever staged.

It will be a meeting between Charley Hoff and Harold Osborn. Hoff is conceded to be the greatest all-round athlete in Europe, many critics insist in the world, while Osborn holds such an honor in the United States.

Osborn's specialty is the high jump, Hoff the pole-vault, but both shine in practically every other track event

It has been suggested that the contest be an eight-event test, the probable events being high jump, pole vault, broad jump, one sprint, one middle-distance race, a long-distance affair, a shot put and a hurdle contest.

Present plans call for the affair to be staged in New York on March 16.

* * *

Such an event should definitely determine the world's greatest all-round athlete.

BY BILLY EVANS

It is not often that a major league club completes one single department with cast-offs from a neighbor.

But this is just what the Chicago Cubs have done in lining up Charley Grimm for first base, Earl Adams for second base, Howard Freigau for third base and Jimmy Cooney for shortstop.

All are former members of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Grimm was introduced to the big league circuit with the Cardinals in 1918 but was not ripe enough so was turned over to the Little Rock club on one of those "gentlemen's" agreements" for seasoning!

But the bond of secrecy was broken some place and, when Grimm was sought by other clubs as a prospect, he was purchased by the Pi[ttsbu]rgh Pirates. The Cardinals d[id] their evidence in [time] and lost their appeal for the first baseman.

Loss Of Grimm Wast Costly.

Playing with the Pirates four years Grimm joined the Cubs last winter, in the famous exchange which shifted Aldridge, Grantham and Niehaus to Pittsburg with Cooper, Maranville and Grimm going to Chicago.

Adams was another junior prospect when he reported to the Cardinals in the spring of 1921. But he had Rogers Hornsby for his competition at second base and naturally did not cover more than the spring training period. He was sent to Syracuse, thence to Wichita Falls and in the Texas League convinced the staff of scouts for the Chicago Cubs that he was the worthy successor to Zeb Terry.

Adams, like many snappy second basemen, is a midget. He barely reaches five feet, yet he was the leading fielder in the National League for 1925, with an average of .983. He was high for assists with 551 and hight putouts with 354.

Cooney Latest to Join Cubs.

Howard Freigau made his debut with the Cardinals as their bat boy, originally coming under Branch Rickeys sharp eyes with the Ohio Wesleyan team. It is quite a jump from bat boy to a regular job but Freigau cleared the hurdle and was the sensation as the Cardinals' third baseman in 1924.

In need of a catcher and having surplus third base material, early last season Rickey accepted the trade bid of the Cubs of Bob Farrell for Freigau and Mike Gonzales. Freigau was placed at third base immediately by Bill Killefer and caused the passing of Barney Freiberg to the Phillies. Thus the Cubs had three of their four infielders from the Cardinals.

The fourth member to fill out the quartet is Jimmy Cooney, a shortstop Cooney recently was traded to the Cubs for Pitcher Victor Keen.

BARACA NOTES

The auto race got a great start, every engine running perfectly and the drivers with full control in spite of the heavy load. Ray Purdy piloting the Hudson, gained a one mile lead with Jack Lewis in his Cadillac, Gordon Manning guiding his Rolls Royce and Sidney Drury at the wheel of the Moon, running a dead heat.

The race is going to provide interest all the way, because each driver is out to win. The crews had better all get behind their pilot, because so much of the race depends on their assistance. 2d-50

IN MEMORIAM.

WIGGINS.—In loving memory of our dear son, Cyril Aubrey Wiggins, who died February 26, 1924.

"Gone but not forgotten."

"Some may think that we forget you
When oft times they see us smile,
But they do not see the sorrow
Which the smile hides all the while.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweet and tender, fond and true;
There is not a day, dear son,
That we do not think of you."

Sadly missed by Mother and Father.
